Tempest-tossed SDS
Confrontation Within

CHICAGO (AP) - Two contending wings within the tempest-tossed Students for a Democratic Society are heading for a confrontation that could leave the nation's major radical youth organization in shambles.

"Very soon, the only active people left in SDS will be FBI agents," said one radical who, like many others, fears the impending showdown could result in the demise of both factions.

The two factions - "The Weatherman" and the Revolutionary Youth Movement II - are planning a series of competing demonstrations beginning Wednesday in this city which has become a radical focal point because of the federal conspiracy trial of eight movement leaders. The charges stem from the violence accompanying last year's Democratic National Convention.

At stake in the showdown is prestige - something both factions need if they are to build a following among unaligned radicals on the nation's campuses.

A resounding failure could be fatal to organizing efforts - particularly for the Weatherman faction, which takes its name from a Bob Dylan song line "You don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows."

Weatherman currently controls the SDS National Office here. It has tightened security and taken tentative steps toward building revolutionary cadres, or leadership cells.

"They are developing a hardening cadre," a government source said. "It's not too far advanced right now, but there are signs it's on the way."

Cadres, internal security and secrecy fly in the face of the still-dominant impulses within the radical youth movement, which long has taken pride in its unstructured manner.

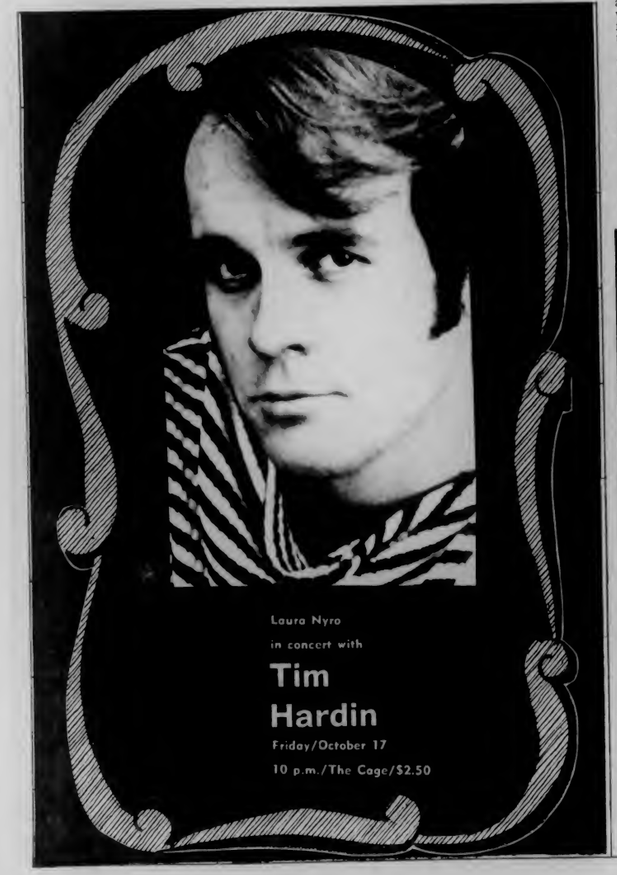
So does the hint of escalated violence implicit in Weatherman's Chicago slogan, "Bring the War Home."

The West Coast-based RYM-II - pronounced rim-two - has adopted the slogan, "Get the U.S. Out of Vietnam Now," for its Chicago demonstrations.

"It's a power struggle to see which group can survive," said a worker for the "Conspiracy," an organization seeking to coordinate the assorted protests accompanying the Chicago conspiracy trial.

Weatherman has been preparing for months for the Chicago demonstrations. "The action is probably going to make them or break them," said one source close to this faction. "After Chicago, it could be all over for them."

RYM II's schedule is geared more to working class and non-white neighborhoods, but it also calls for a high school boycott, a demonstration outside a Chicago factory, street rallies and a protest against hospital conditions.



French Celebrity to Appear In UM Production of 'Antigone'

When Jean Anouilh's poetic masterpiece, "Antigone" is performed at Bowker Auditorium on Oct. 14 at 8:00 p.m. under the auspices of the French Gorridor the gentleman in the leading role of Creon will be putting his own personal stamp on the striking Treteau de Paris' production in more ways than one. Jean Davy is a perfect example of the versatility a dedicated theatre person can develop through the rigorous training of the famous repertory system of French Theatre.

While still a youngster, Jean Davy received formal training in conducting and studied with the famous Alfred Cortot at the ECOLE NORMALE DE MUSIQUE. Circumstances obliged Jean Davy to abandon music although he later decided to embark upon a theatrical career. After studying privately, he made his stage debut at the Theatre de L'Oeuvre where he was to return, years later, to participate in the stunning revival of "L'Annouce faite a Marie".

Following his debut, Marcel Herrand and Jean Marchat engaged Davy to play in "Endtaite pour le ciel". Davy was noticed in this production by the author Henri Hernstein, director of the Theatre des Ambassadeurs. For three years, Jean Davy pursued his career at the Ambassadeurs and created roles in several new Bernstein plays including ESPOIR with Claude Dauphin.

After a play at the Theatre des Arts, Jean Davy fulfilled his military service. Upon his release, he created L'ALTITUDE 3,200 under the direction of Raymond Rouleau. Davy then created the French version of GOLDEN BOY at the Theatre de l'Etoile. Still with Raymond Rouleau, he played in VIRAGE DANGEREAUX. While Jean Davy was playing at the Theatre Marigny, the Second World War broke out and he was again called up to serve.

JEAN DAVY

After his liberation, Jean Davy first worked with Harry Bauer at the Theatre de Gymnase. He then moved to the Theatre de l'Atelier, where he remained for several years and performed in plays such as VETIR CEUX QUI SONT NUS and LES FRERES KARAMAZOV among others. He created the role of Creon in Anouilh's ANTIGONE.

Jean Davy is then engaged by the famous Comedie-Francaise where he quickly became a SOCIETAIRE or permanent member. He remained here for ten years interpreting the most difficult tragic roles in which he was unanimously acclaimed.

After leaving the Comedie-Francaise, he returned to the Theatre de l'Atelier to star in TURCARET which he later performed, in a different staging, at the Theatre National Populaire. At the Theatre Hebertot, then at the Theatre Marigny, he appeared in the O'Neill masterpiece, LONG DAY'S JOURNEY INTO NIGHT.

Circuit Court Hears Convicted C.O.'s Appeal

BOSTON (AP) - The Circuit Court of Appeals heard a challenge Monday to the U.S. draft law and to the constitutionality of exemptions on grounds of conscientious objection to war.

The appeal was made by Richard M. Boardman, 26, of Acton, who was convicted of draft evasion last April and was sentenced to three years in prison.

The appeal was argued before the three-judge appeals panel by William M. Kunstler of New York, and by Crystal Lloyd of Boston.

Boardman originally was classified as a conscientious objector, and was ordered to report to Massachusetts General Hospital for alternative duty.

Kunstler said Boardman came to the conclusion that his position there would free another person for military duty and that he therefore would be contributing to the war against his conscience.

Chief Judge Bailey Aldrich broke in to ask if it wasn't true that whenever an exemption is granted, some other person must be drafted to fill the quotas.

Kunstler said that was true, but that Boardman would not be releasing a specific person.

"It seems to me it's a rather selective conscience," Judge Aldrich commented.

The case was taken under advisement.

Holy Cross Drops Football Schedule

Infectious Hepatitis Strikes Entire 76-Member Squad

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

Holy Cross College yesterday cancelled the remaining eight games of its football schedule, which includes a November 8 at Alumni Stadium with UMass, after tests revealed the entire 76 member squad, plus coaches, managers and the team publicist had contacted infectious hepatitis.

A spokesman for Athletic Director Vincent G. Dougherty, indicated that the eight schools involved were notified of the cancellations during yesterday afternoon, and were informed that it would be impossible for Holy Cross who lost their first two games, to complete their schedule.

Earlier in the day, Holy Cross had received approval from the Eastern College Athletic Conference to play freshman. However, the freshman players were also infected with the illness.

UMass athletic Director, Warren P. McGuirk, indicated that his department was making every effort to fill the November 8 date with an opponent. However, Mc Guirk said,"It is pretty difficult to get something like this firmed up right away because of the large number of schools involved. We also have the alternative of trying to schedule a game on November 29 thereby extending our season a week. But nothing will probably be decided until later in the week."

Dr. John Shea, vice-president of Student Affairs at Holy Cross, stated, "We are aiming to isolate those infected to prevent spread of the disease to the rest of our student body."

Hepatitis, according to local medical experts, is a disease that attacks the liver, and chiefly prevalent in young people. The disease is rarely fatal, but the only cure is complete rest usually taking about six weeks. Hepatitis is not contagious in that it cannot be transferred by mere talking to people, but rather must be transferred directly.

Coach Bill Whitton, in his first year as Holy Cross coach, according to Crusader publicist Richard Lewis, said to his squad in an emotional team meeting, "I don't think anyone has ever represented Holy Cross football better than you. You are outstanding men and you sure deserve better than this."

Worcester city officials are conducting an investigation on the general sanitation of the school, to try and pinpoint the general source of the illness. Frank Smith, Worcester City director of public health, said, "The ailment could have been spread through poor sanitation, or bad food or water. We will just have to make a complete inquiry."

Smith did not think the disease could have spread to the Dartmouth team which Holy Cross played this past week end because, it would take a longer period of exposure than just an afternoon's game to contract the illness.

Nineteen members of the team were in the school infirmary as of Sunday night, and with virtually the whole team affected, the count should rise as the week goes on. Several members of the team came down with what were thought to be flu symptoms last week, but it was not until Friday that several players were unable to play football and hepatitis was indicated.

Although the Crusader football team eats at a training table for the evening meal, they take other meals with the rest of the students and live in various dormitories.

The main worry now of Holy Cross is the spreading of the disease to the student population and the necessary infirmary space.

Entries for Metawampe "500" Bicycle Race due on Friday, Oct. 10 at 5 p.m.

RAY ELLERBROOK
Injured in Accident

Ellerbrook Injured

Ray Ellerbrook, UMass baseball and basketball star, and captain of the 1969-70 basketball team was injured in an automobile accident, last Thursday, near the exit ramp of Route 116 coming onto campus.

Ellerbrook, suffered a slight facture of his right collarbone when his car skidded on the rain slicked highway. He spent a day at the University infirmary and will probably miss about eight weeks of pre-season basketball practice but he is expected to be ready for the first game of the season against Providence on December 2.

Redmen Down After Tough Loss

After the Delaware game, it's time to trot out the old cliches:
1) We could have won it.
2) A tough one to lose.
3) Oh.....!

It was just part of what was an eventual weekend of New England football. Boston University edged Harvard to challenge for area supremacy. Boston College won its second victory. New Hampshire took over the favorite's role in the Yankee Conference with a win over Connecticut. And Holy Cross' season ended in disaster.

Like a year ago, the Redmen could have defeated Delaware but like a year ago, the Blue Hens' last quarter offense was just too much for the UMass defense.

Coach Vic Fusia felt strongly his team should have had their second win. "We had the chance to win this game, but we just beat ourselves. We would get in good position to maybe gain control, but we stopped ourselves."

"The team is down after this defeat. This is inevitable after such a loss. But they are too much man to take this and we'll come out of it all right."

The coach had some good words for quarterback Ken Hughes, who played his first extensive action at the Redman heim. "He got warm out there and I could not take him out. He came out of it reasonably well, and although he might have made a few errors late in the game, they were due to inexperience."

The UMass offense, with Jerry Grasso, Pat Scavone, Dick Cummings along with Hughes and Tim Adams, plus an excellent performance by the offensive line, produced a fine attack, but the defense could not cope with the vaunted Delaware defense.

Fusia said, "our defense is loaded with sophomores and they just did not have the experience. But, they are getting there."

Bill Bush, soph defensive back, came in for some praise from the coach for his standout job in the defensive secondary that produced two interceptions.

And as he keeps repeating and as was evident for at least three quarters Saturday, "I repeat, this will be a good football team. The attitude is great. The execution at times is something to behold. We'll be all right, but I just don't know when."

REDMAN RANTINGS - The electricity was knocked out for a time in the second half, causing consternation in the press box where eiectric typewriters wouldn't write....Cummings repeatedly broke through for big power gains, while Scavone looked like the [illegible] on field threat he has always threatened to be.

Mets, O's in Series

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Mets, once the laughing stock of baseball, beat Atlanta 7-4 Monday, completed a three-game sweep in their play-off for the National League championship and moved into the World Series against Baltimore.

Baltimore also made it three consecutive victories in the best-of-five American League playoff, whipping the Minnesota Twins 11-2 on the Twins' home grounds.

The World Series open Saturday at Baltimore.

Tommie Agee, Ken Boswell and Wayne Garrett hit home runs as the Mets came from behind 2-0 and 4-3 deficits for the biggest victory in their checkered career.

The team was created in 1962, finished 10th its first four years, set a flock of negative records and had not finished higher than ninth before this season.

Nolan Ryan, a hard-throwing right-hander, replaced young Gary Gentry in the third inning in New York's Shea Stadium, pitched out of a bases-loaded situation and received credit for the Met victory.

Baltimore, which had won close, extra-inning thrillers in the first two games with Minnesota, had a much easier time of it in the third game.

Paul Blair had five hits, including a home run and two doubles, and drove in five runs, Ellie Hendricks drove in three runs with two doubles and Don Buford had four hits in the 18-hit Baltimore attack. Jim Palmer was the winning pitcher.

Havlicek Signs Pact

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics announced Monday the signing of team captain John Havlicek to a three-year contract - the last team member to sign for the National Basketball Association season.

Havlicek, who was the object of an intense recruiting campaign by the rival American Basketball Association, agreed to a pact that was "one of the best in our history," according to General Manager Red Auerbach.

The Celtics declined to give any dollar figure on the contract.

"We had a few conferences and worked out an amicable agreement," said Auerbach. "There was never any doubt in our minds that John would sign with the Celtics and we feel he has made an excellent contract both for the present and the future."

Havlicek, who also is Celtics player representative, has been with Boston six years, and was four times on the NBA All-Star team.

Ohio State Still on Top

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Texas Longhorns, 56 - 17 winners over Navy the past week end, sailed from fourth into second place in the Associated Press major-college football poll Monday while Ohio State, a 41-14 victor over Washington, maintained a comfortable lead in the top spot.

The Longhorns moved past Penn State and Arkansas to take over the runner-up position. PennState fell from second to fifth after its 17-14 conquest of Kansas State and the Razorbacks retained the No. 3 spot.

Library Budget In Red - No More Books This Year

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

The University of Massachusetts Library is broke.

"Because of the cuts made in the UMass budget request last spring by the Governor and the legislature," library director David M. Clay explains, "we now have a $355,600 deficit which will prevent us from buying any more books until the end of this fiscal year."

"Also," he said, "we may have to cancel some of the magazine subscriptions which we already hold, and we will be unable to begin receiving any new magazines which begin publication this year."

UMass requested $1.2 million in library funds from the legislature last year, but received only $200,000. Clay adds, "it seems the state legislature completely overlooked the book acquisition category."

The library has been forced to cancel $105,000 in subscription and book orders in order to limit its deficit to $55,600. "And this loss is irreparable," Clay explains.

UMass Associate Provost Jerremiah M. Allen explains that the loss of book buying power this year will affect the school for many years to come.

"We will be unable to keep up with many new books which will have only one printing, and we will not be able to fill in this void in later years. Also, we will lose the opportunity to have complete holdings in many new publications as they come out this year."

This loss, he says, will be especially felt in the area of scientific and technical journals.

Clay says that UMass ranks 39th out of the nation's top 40 state universities in library holdings, and that this year's inability to add to its holdings will probably drop the school to the bottom of the list.

"The saddest thing about this whole situation," Clay explains, "is that the cutbacks come at a time of rapid growth for the university. As the school adds 1,500 students a year, the ratio of library volumes per student continually goes down.

Allen commented that while construction was underway on the new 28-story library, there were not enough funds to fill Goodell library with books. "This, he added, is the worst possible situation any University can fall into."

Classes Won't Be Cancelled

Lederle Announces Moratorium Day Policy

By PAUL HORNSTEAD
Staff Reporter

Yesterday President Ledejle announced the official University policy for the observance of Vietnam Moratorium Day, Oct. 15.

"After considering all points of view expressed by faculty and students, the following policy is established for October 15:

It is the nature of the academic community to encourage the freest possible climate for thoughtful discussion and debate on whatever topics its members view as important. We recognize that the issue of Vietnam is of transcendent national importance and that a large segment of the academic community has indicated a strong interest in debating, discussing and acting on the Vietnam issue on Wednesday, October 15.

We hope that every student and faculty member will use this occasion to express his feelings about this abhorrent war and the need for its early termination.

However, this is a matter of individual conscience. The University also recognizes that many persons will wish to maintain their normal academic schedule during all or part of the day, and that they have a right to do so. Therefore, classes will be held on schedule or the instructor should provide alternate instructional coverage of make-up arrangements."

Two more University departments have advocated the suspension of classes in observance of the moratorium. The Department of Industrial Engineering and the Spanish - Portuguese department passed resolutions to dispense with "business as usual," and will cooperate by not holding classes as scheduled on the 15th.

To contribute to the Moratorium activities, the Department of Industrial Engineering will sponsor a talk by Professor Hugh Miser. The subject of his talk will be "Science, Engineering, War and Peace."

The Industrial Engineering Department also requested as record of their support, "for the call of the National Vietnam Moratorium Committee for political and educational activity on October 15 toward withdrawal of all American troops in Vietnam and requests this record be communicated to the President of the United States."

At Smith, officials believe that most students will observe the moratorium, although the decision has been left to the professors themselves.

Smith President Thomas C. Mendenhall said, "The college expects that any classes which are suspended for the day of moratorium will be rescheduled."

Amherst College and Mount Holyoke College have not released official statements yet but it is possible that both will advocate observance of the moratorium.

President Lederle announced official University policy on the Moratorium yesterday. Classes that are not held on schedule are to be re-scheduled by the instructor.

Moratorium Meeting Held at Smith Asks for Business to Be Suspended

Renee Yuen, Smith '70, who worked in the national moratorium office this past summer, explained the origin of the movement. Sam Brown, David Hawk and David Mixner, all ex-McCarthy workers, began the movement as a means of reviving the McCarthy and Kennedy anti-Vietnam forces.

"The basic idea was to suspend business as usual for a day in order to show the administration that anti-war sentiment was beyond being merely academic based," says Renee. "We want to keep the entry level into this anti-war protest on as broad a base as possible."

Members of the faculty at Smith have drafted a letter in response to the call for a moratorium on the fifteenth, expressing their support. Thus far 73 professors have endorsed the moratorium and plan to call off their normal classes for the day.

Professor Peter I Rose of the sociology department felt that the best course of action was not to call on the faculty as a whole to vote on a defined course of action, but to appeal to people as individuals for their endorsement. "We do not want to fight the college," says Rose. "We want to fight the Nixon Administration."

The response to the letter so far has raised expectations that 60% of the faculty will sign.

The Student Government unanimously endorsed a resolution and a petition which 90% of the student body of 2246 is expected to sign.

Tito Craige, president of the Amherst student council, described what Amherst students will be doing for the moratorium. He indicated that there is wide spread student support, but little faculty involvement.

Activities on the 15th will start with a silent march in the early morning from Smith meeting with

Red China, Russia Agree to Talks On Border Dispute

TOKYO (AP) - Red China announced Tuesday agreement to talk with the Russians at a deputy foreign minister level on their border dispute. At the same time, Peking warned Moscow against " war maniacs" who might "date to raid" strategic Chinese sites.

The announcement appeared to reflect Peking worry about recent reports that the Russians are weighing pros and cons of a preemptive strike against China's growing nuclear power. The Chinese have just touched off their 10th nuclear test.

Peking said it sent two letters to Moscow, the latest Monday, seeking agreement on provisional measures to maintain the frontier status quo, withdraw troops from disputed areas and avoid new military clashes such as those which touched off bloody fighting this year.

Peking's official announcement, broadcast in English, seemed couched in relatively conciliatory tones similar to those marked by recent statements since Sept. 11, when Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and China's Premier Chou En-lai met briefly at Peking's airport.

However, the Peking statement noted that "treaties relating to the present Sino-Soviet boundary were unequal treaties imposed on China by Tsarist Russian imperialism." While it agreed to use these treaties as a starting point for talks, the suggestion was that China still considers itself victimized.

In recent years, China has accused Russia of occupying vast areas of what once was China's territory. Carefully, however, the statement this time said that China was not actually asking the return of those lands.

Red Cross Sends Doses For Immunization at Holy Cross

BOSTON (AP) - The Massachusetts Red Cross said Tuesday it shipped 200 doses of gamma globulin to the Holy Cross College campus, and called for 3,000 additional doses from around the country. The entire football team at Holy Cross has been sidelined for the remainder of the season because of an outbreak of hepatitis. Some 60 players and persons associated with the team became ill.

Gamma globulin, a Red Cross spokesman said, affords temporary immunization against the liver disease. The spokesman said injections will be given to everyone associated with the football team and anyone who may have had recent contact with players.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

BOSTON (AP) - The faculty of Boston University's College of Liberal Arts, the largest of the university's 16 colleges and schools, sent a letter to President Nixon, voicing its support for the Oct. 15 moratorium and calling for the immediate withdrawal of American forces in Vietnam.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - Next September, Williams College will join the growing number of formerly all-male schools across the country which have opened their doors to coeds.

Williams announced Tuesday that it will admit a limited number of women transfer students as regular undergraduates in September1970.

MONTREAL (AP) - Montreal's 3,700 policemen struck Tuesday for more money, many of the 2,400 firemen followed suit and provincial government leaders said Canada's largest city was "threatened by anarchy."

SAIGON (AP) - Heavy monsoon rains hampered allied military operations in South Vietnam's northernmost provinces Tuesday. Ground fighting elsewhere remained light.

LONDON (AP) - The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of 20 million Moslems and one of the world's wealthiest men, is to marry a London socialite. An announcement Tuesday from the Aga Khan's London office said he and Lady Sarah Crichton-Stuart will marry later this month either in Paris or Geneva. She is 29, three years younger than her fiance.

The Cavalry officer had been favored to succeed Arthur da Costa e Silva ever since the army, navy and air force ministers set themselves up as a caretaker junta Aug. 31. That action came after Costa e Silva suffered a stroke.

The appointment established a precedent by which the armed forces constituted themselves as a sort of electoral college to install one of their peers without considering civilian politicians. The last election of a chief executive by direct popular vote was in 1960.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retired Maj. Gen. Carl O. Turner insisted Tuesday that Chicago police officials gave him a small arsenal of confiscated guns for his private collection, and that he sold some.

Turner, who was Army provost marshall when he retired last year, acknowledged that he sold some of the weapons to a North Carolina dealer.

He also acknowledged that when the guns were turned over to him in Chicago he signed a statement saying they were for the U.S. Army, but now realizes that "I should not have signed."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - Some 50 wives and mothers of U.S. servicemen missing or held prisoner in Vietnam descended on the Florida Capitol Tuesday and asked Cabinet members to help them pressure President Nixon into seeking the release of American fighting men.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The housewife sparking meat boycotts in four states went to Congress Tuesday to find out who's to blame for high prices and got no concrete answer.

Mrs. Ross De Lorenzo of Levittown, N.Y., was told that the real culprits are inflation, high marketing costs and high consumer demand, and that her boycotts are no help.

TUNIS (AP) - The equivalent of 10 years' rain has fallen in the last 10 days in the central and southern areas of Tunisia, leaving hundreds dead and much of the road system swept away.

Officials set the death toll at 425 as of Tuesday and fear it will rise. No deaths of foreigners have been reported.

MONTREAL (AP) - The Canadian army announced last night that it had been called out to protect Montreal after violence flared during a city-wide strike by policemen and firemen.

State of Emergency Declared In Las Vegas after Shooting

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - A Negro shot and killed a white door-to-door salesman Tuesday in the third consecutive day of violence in this gambling spa's dominantly Negro West Side, where earlier young blacks ransacked a government welfare office and a shopping center.

Gov. Paul Laxalt mobilized Las Vegas units of the National Guard. Earlier, he had released the 350 troops assembled at armories Monday night without deploying them.

A Negro, in his 20's, in an apparent robbert attempt, shot Carl A. Benson, 50, a door-to-door salesman, once through the neck, fatally wounding him, Police Chief Pete Witcher said.

The chief said the shooting occurred a few blocks from the heart of violence Sunday and Monday nights.

Gangs of blacks, in small and large bands, hurled firebombs, looted and damaged several stores and overturned cars. Up to 300, said Undersherrif Lloyd Bell, roamed the West Side Tuesday afternoon.

Nearly 200 persons were arrested and at least 50 injured since an incident Sunday night when two police officers stopped a black cab driver in a traffic check, authorities said.

They mayor and the governor said they don't believe the incident triggered the violence.

Most of the greater Las Vegas area's 30,000 blacks - more than 20 per cent of the city's population - live in the section, divided from the main city by railroad tracks.

Rice Yearbook Goes Nude

HOUSTON (AP) - "I did it for Rice," says the comely coed whose nude photograph appears in the university's 1969 yearbook.

"I did it for Rice and the Rice community," she said. "But I don't want to talk about it because that puts it into a class of a publicity stunt."

Bahler's full view catches him clothed, but there is a one inch by a half inch inset showing him nude.

He had no public comment.

Co-editor Conrad Boeck said there is "definite artistic value" in the photographs.

Dr. Frank Vandiver, acting university president, said he deeply deplored what the editors were publishing, but defended their right to publish it.

Canadian Army Called In After Police Strike

MONTREAL (AP) - The Canadian army was called into Montreal late Tuesday after a wage strike by municipal police and firemen left Canada's largest city prey to holdup men and rioting taxi drivers. One person was killed and four were wounded. Fires blazed downtown.

In an emergency session, Quebec's provincial parliament enacted legislation ordering the 3,700 striking policemen and about 2,100 firemen back to work by 12:01 a.m. Wednesday. It threatened the strikers with fines and imprisonment if they didn't.

But Guy Marcil, president of the Policemen's Brotherhood, said his followers were "ready for a long siege." They refused to obey the orders of provincial officers and occupied police headquarters.

A squad of striking city policemen entered police headquarters shortly before noon and forced all remaining officers below the rank of inspector to leave.

"All we need is food and we can stay here in the arena up to 72 hours," said Marcil.

Government leaders said Montreal was "threatened by anarchy."

Holdup men had a field day, hitting 19 commercial establishments, 10 of which were banks. Officials gave no information on currency lost.

The violence flared in the evening, when 200 taxi drivers demonstrated at a west end garage against a competitive limousine service's exclusive right to carry passengers to and from Montreal airport.

Windows were broken, a bus was overturned and set on fire, and a fire was started near the garage's fuel storage area. When garage employes tried to put the fire out, they were stoned by the demonstrators.

After the march, local housewives, students, and faculty members will canvass residents and business men to try to obtain their support.

Businesses which can't close will be asked to make some supporting gesture towards the moratorium, such as wearing armbands or displaying signs. A rally will be held at 4:00 p.m. on the Amherst green and a 7:00 p.m. memorial service will be held in a local church in Northampton, during which lists of war dead will be read.

Study in Europe Offered

Anthropology

The University of Massachusetts department of anthropology will begin a Field Program in European Studies in Anthropology during the spring semester of 1970 in Europe.

The program will offer opportunities in ethnographic research in Germany and other countries. It is presented in association with the UMass Atlantic Studies Center in Freiburg, Germany, and the University of Freiburg.

Although the program is designed mainly for UMass graduate students, consideration will be given to interested and qualified undergraduate students majoring in anthropology and related disciplines whose academic programs call for field experience. The program is also open to eligible students from other universities and colleges who are recommended by their departments.

In Freiburg, students will do supervised field study of such topics as the social structure, value orientation, and culture change of German or other European communities, rural or urban, and will supplement their fieldwork by attending collateral lectures at Freiburg University and reading courses or field-report seminars offered by the members of the University of Massachusetts department of anthropology on duty in Freiburg.

When advisable, students will work in small teams in a European community, studying aspects of its culture on a complementary basis. The possibility and advantage of selecting a small rural community within easy access of Freiburg is under consideration. However, independent research in other countries will be encouraged in the case of graduate students working toward their Ph.D. degree and in other special situations.

Further information is available from: Field Program in European Studies in Anthropology, Department of Anthropology, Machmer Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

English

The University of Massachusetts department of English will again sponsor a Summer Seminar in English Literature at Oxford University. Trinity College will be the setting for courses in British literature, poetry, and drama taught by Oxford dons.

This is the fifth year of the seminar, directed by Ernest H. Hofer associate head of the UMass English department. Last year those attending represented 52 colleges and universities. Two-thirds were undergraduates and a third graduate students.

One or two courses may be taken, for three or six credits, by undergraduates and graduates. Students may travel in Europe before and after the seminar, which begins with a four day theatre and historic site visit to London paid for by the seminar. The program at Oxford starts July 1 and ends Aug. 13.

Enrollment is limited to 120. Interested students are urged to apply early, to insure acceptance and placement in preferred courses. The final date for applications is Jan. 16. The selection committee will meet Jan. 17.

The cost of the seminar is $850. for Massachusetts residents, and $880 for non-residents. This includes round-trip air transportation from Boston to London, tuition, room and board at Trinity College, three nights in a London hotel, and theatre tickets and visits to historical and literary sites.

Undergraduate applicants need not be English majors but must be recommended by an English professor, have a B average in English, the equivalent of 15 semester hours in English by June 1970, and must be 20 years old as of June 1970.

Further information may be obtained from the Director, Oxford Summer Seminar, Department of English, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

Israeli Bombers Attack Guerrillas

TEL AVIV (AP) - Israeli fighter-bombers streaked across two borders yesterday in raids against Arab guerrilla bases in Jordan and Egyptian military targets on the Gulf of Suez.

An early morning retaliatory raid against Arab commando bases near Shuna, two miles inside Jordan, was launched after guerrillas fired mortars and rockets at four Israeli settlements in the Beisan and Jordan valleys, the Israeli command said.

Witnesses reported that Israeli planes plunged through a curtain of Jordanian antiaircraft fire to pound the guerrilla strongholds with machine guns and bombs. A Jordanian military spokesman said five civilians were seriously wounded.

On the Suez front, Israeli planes hit Egyptian military targets along the western shore of the Gulf of Suez in the wake of what Israel said was "continued Egyptian aggression."

Nixon Criticizes Pace And Record of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, unhappy with the pace at which Congress is moving on his legislative program, plans to prod it with a special message Monday listing the status of 40 proposals he has made.

"When you add up what has been requested and what has been done," said House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, "there is no doubt this has been a foot-dragging Congress." Ford reported Nixon's displeasure with Congress after Tuesday's White House meeting between the President and his House and Senate leaders.

The White House began compiling a legislative boxscore several weeks ago amid reports it might try to pin a "do nothing" label on Congress. Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts retorted that the trouble was with "a noncooperative Republican administration."

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield took the latest Republican criticism calmly. "There is a sizable number of Republicans in each House," the Montana senator said. "There's enough blame to go around on both sides and enough credit to go around on both sides." Mansfield said Congress has acted on its own initiative in a number of important areas without waiting for administration proposals.

Nixon has submitted 40 messages to Congress asking for a wide range of legislation. Only a half dozen of these requests have cleared both the House and Senate.

"The Democratic Policy Committee in the Senate and a shadow group in the House are now pursuing a straight, outright, blatant political course," said Sen. Gordon Allott of Colorado, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee. "There is no question but that the primary purpose of these groups is to discredit the President."

Allott said that debate, which included the battle over the anti-ballistic missile, was in large part "an eight-week filibuster."

Ford said draft reform still heads the list of proposals on which Nixon wants prompt action. It is the third straight week the President has pushed for this legislation in conference with congressional leaders.

Members of the UMass Graduate Senate passed a resolution Monday night requesting that the Board of Trustees authorize the University Building Authority to begin construction of a trailer park for married students.

The resolution, approved 25 to 1, stipulated that the rent for each trailer, which will be fully furnished and contain two bedrooms, not exceed $140 a month. It further stipulated that the planning office make every effort to reduce this rent to $110.

The action followed a discussion by Planning Officer Jack Littlefield and Dean Gentile, who presented plans developed by the Committee on Married Student Housing to provide more than 200 trailer units for such students by next summer.

Dean Gentile said roughly half the university's 3,000 graduate students are married. The present plan represents the university's first step to alleviate the housing shortage for married students since the building of Lincoln Apartments more than 12 years ago.

The site for the park, which was approved last month by members of the Master Planning Committee of the Faculty Senate, consists of a 30-acre tract of North Pleasant St. between Fulton Village and Presidential Apartments. Littlefield said this site, which will be divided into individual 40 ft. by 80 ft. lots, will hold a maximum of 271 trailers. The units would be financially self-supporting with no subsidy involved.

Senate President David Yelton said the lot would be financed over a 15-year period, during which two sets of trailers would be purchased - the first set of trailers being replaced after 7-1/2 years.

Objection to the plans was raised by Jeff Margolis, alternate senator from the Government Department, who felt the university should provide more permanent type housing for its married students. Gentile, Littlefield, and Yelton stressed that this was just a short-range attempt to immediately alleviate some of the housing shortage - not a substitute for the development of more permanent type housing, which they pointed out was also an integral part of the committee's plans.

Dean Gentile said, "If you want to have more housing by next fall, this eliminates consideration of any more permanent kind."

Senate Lessing Kahn of the philosophy department, who also objected to this type of housing, proposed an amendment to the resolution which asked that in view of the current housing shortage, the proposal for a trailer park be accepted although the Graduate Student Senate did not approve of this type of housing.

The amendment was defeated 20-4.

Considerable debate centered around the monthly rent estimate of $140, which several senators felt was too high. A recent study made by the Graduate Student Housing Committee showed this rent would be near the upper end of the rental range for such housing at comparable universities.

Littlefield attributed this comparatively high sum to the high cost of site development, which, as he pointed out, will exceed the cost of the trailers. Based on current area prices, the estimated cost for each 12 ft. by 60 ft. trailer, completely furnished, is $4500.

The cost for developing each individual lot is estimated at $2,300. This would include the provision of concrete foundations for each trailer, utilities and landscaping.

The cost of the development of the site, itself, however, is estimated at $900,000. Littlefield attributed this figure to three major facotrs. First, although the best site immediately available, it presents special drainage problems. Secondly, to counteract past objection by area residents to trailer parks, it will be necessary to spend funds to make the site attractive. The accomplishment of this objective will involve the construction of streets and sidewalks, the installation of street lights and landscaping. Third, the amoritization period for the project is short.

Littlefield pointed out, however, that although $140 per month might not sound so attractive now, such a sum will sound more reasonable within a few years when area rents increase.

Foreign Service Representative To Be on Campus

Foreign Service Officer, Miss Linda Pfeifle, will be on campus October 8 and 9 to talk to interested students. She will be in the Placement Office on Thursday, October 9 from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. and from 3:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. to answer questions.

Foreign Service officers carry out the foreign policies of the United States under the direction of the Secretary of State, participate in the formulation of these policies keep the U. S. Government informed of developments abroad, and protect American interests in foreign countries. Currently, and for the foreseeable future, the Department's greatest need is for officers prepared to serve the major part of their early careers in the economic/commercial, administrative, or consular fields.

The next written examination for the Foreign Service will be held on December 6, 1969. Applications for the examination can be obtained at the Placement Office, and must be received in Washington, D.C. by October 24.

Four films depicting different perspectives on West Africa will be presented by the five-college African Studies Society Wednesday, Oct. 8, at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson 106. The films are: "African Girl. . . Malobi"; "A Changing Liberia" "African Rhythms" ; and "Family of Ghana". A discussion will follow.

Africans and Afro-Ams are especially invited. There is no admission charge.

Ho's Death Being Used To Unite N. Vietnamese

The ruling Communist party Politburo appears well on the way to creating a "personality cult" around Ho even stronger than the mystical aura fostered while he was alive.

The tightly controlled newspapers and radio have been jammed with exhortations in the name of the dead leader who founded North Vietnam's Communist party and dominated political thought for half a century.

The unceasing use of Ho Chi Minh's revered name by the Hanoi regime does not surprise the group of South Vietnamese and American Hanoi watchers in Saigon. The volubility of the campaign, however, is viewed by some as a clear indication that Ho's deathbed plea for unity has slowed the internal party power struggle that many view as inevitable.

This, in turn, means there is little chance at present for any significant change in Hanoi's tough line on the war and the peace talks in Paris.

"It is business as usual up there," one expert said. "They are using Ho's death, probably with some success, to alleviate their domestic problems. We haven't seen any change in their over-all plans."

The most strident use of Ho's memory is in the "patriotic emulation program" announced by the ruling Politburo last Saturday over Hanoi radio. The campaign will run until the end of this year under the latest party slogan, "turn grief into revolutionary action."

Urging indoctrination and propaganda meetings at every social and governmental level, the Politburo said:

"It is a duty for all our party and people to closely unite around our party Central Committee, to resolutely carry out President Ho's will, to persist in and accelerate the anti-United States national salvation resistance to liberate the South, defend the North, and proceed toward national reunification."

WASHINGTON (AP) - U. S. officials are pleased with results of Operation Intercept and say the anti-drug campaign along the Mexican border will continue indefinitely.

The U. S. commitment to the program is expected to produce at least some unpleasantness when officials from the two nations renew talks here Wednesday on the subject.

While both countries are in agreement that some form of drug control is necessary, they disagree as to how best to go about it.

Since the program started Sept. 21, U. S. officials report marijuana supplies from Mexico have virtually disappeared from every major city they have checked.

U. S. officials say that 53 arrests have been made and that marijuana seizures ranging from two ounces to 1,000 pounds have been registered. They conclude that the operation has been so successful that pot users in the United States have had to resort to the less potent grass grown in the American Midwest.

Before Operation Intercept, 80 per cent of the marijuana and 20 per cent of the heroin consumed in the United States were produced in Mexico, according to government figures.

Mexican anger centers chiefly on the U. S. policy of inspecting each individual who crosses the border, and, if he has one, his vehicle.

Government figures show that almost 4.5 million persons have been searched.

The Mexicans say the American tactics are heavy-handed, damaging to their national image, harmful to the friendly relations the two countries long have enjoyed, undignified, time consuming and devastating to the border economy.

FROM OUR SIDE

President Lederle And October 15

The statement issued by President John W. Lederle yesterday concerning the Oct. 15 Moratorium was one big disappointment. Instead of leading the entire university community in unified support against the war in Vietnam, the President has taken a position of passing the buck to individual faculty members.

The President was correct when he stated the nature of our academic community, "to encourage the freest possible climate for thoughtful discussion and debate on whatever topics its members view as important."

It is evident that an overwhelming majority of UMass students support the moratorium, and want to spend Oct. 15 working towards an end to the war. If the University wants to encourage the freest possible climate for discussion on Oct. 15, then classes must be suspended.

We ask the President: Why should a student be penalized for participating in the moratorium. If classes are not cancelled, there are no assurances that absences will be excused or tests be allowed to be made up. This is why classes must be cancelled.

Dr. Lederle missed the boat when he interpreted the Oct. 15 moratorium to be merely a national day of dialogue. Oct. 15 is intended to be a day of protest, in addition to being a day of communication. It is to be a protest showing mass solidarity by the nation's institutions of higher education in concerted opposition to the war.

In recent weeks many student organizations have announced their support of the moratorium. The faculty senate will once again discuss it at its Thursday meeting. Many administrators in Whitmore and in other schools on the campus, support the moratorium, but so far have remained silent. If these faculty members and administrators are really sincere in seeing the war ended, they will speak out now and urge the President and the faculty senate to cancel classes.

Perhaps if Oct. 15 had occured several years ago, thousands of our young American boys might still be alive.

Campus Comment

An Experiment in Peace

I consider the October 15 Moratorium an experiment. The purpose of the experiment being to determine whether those Americans who oppose the Viet Nam war have the desire to take advantage of an opportunity to actually work for peace, to act upon their ideas rather than merely state them.

Before attending the "Teach In" on the Oct. 15 Moratorium at Bowker Auditorium I was, frankly, skeptical as to whether this university and the surrounding communities had the desire to actively participate in a nationwide demonstration of this type. However, after witnessing the events at Bowker on Oct. 2 I am totally convinced that UMass and the neighboring communities (both academic and non-academic) have the potential for adding significantly to the October 15 moratorium.

Despite a heavy rain, Bowker was filled to near capacity. (Close to 950 people attended.) Throughout the "program" speakers from Mt. Holyoke College, Amherst College, The Valley Peace Center, UMass and others spoke in favor of the Moratorium. Repeatedly, literally hundreds of people stood in applause in support of the Moratorium. This was not merely a display of sensationalism. This was not a group of people "with nothing better to do." This was an indication that this university has indeed the potential to contribute greatly to the October 15 Moratorium.

The UMass academic community has many times been called "apathetic." The accuracy and truth of these accusations matters little now. If all the people on this campus who oppose the war in Viet Nam could find a place in their schedule to participate actively in the Moratorium on October 15, to go to the rallies and marches, to canvas the community . . . to work for Peace, all of the accusations of apathy at UMass will have been proven false.

Clearly Defined Policies

In view of editor Marcus's recent appeal for an additional $8,676 of SAT funds to finance his glossy-rag prophylactic INDEX, so as to make it "fitting of this University and its students," I wish to point out that the noble Mr. Marcus, in his tireless quest for yearbook quality, has done absolutely nothing to clarify the editorial "policies" of his eminent predecessor Lowell Fitch, who at his conservative whimsey censored my "Senior Picture" from the 1969 INDEX. Will Mr. Marcus follow in the malodorous hoofprints of Mr. Fitch, discriminating against any student whose appearance does not suit his sterilized, "straight" conformist tastes?

I demand that Mr. Marcus publicly define his own editorial policies on conditions of dress for "Senior Pictures" in the 1970 INDEX. Should he refuse to do so, I call again upon the students of this University for their unequivocal support of a bill still pending before the Student Senate, S289, which directs "that the Student Senate charge a joint subcommittee of the Public Relations and Activities Committees with the study and report on the editorial policies of the INDEX and the constitutional legality thereof. . ."

I feel that the INDEX is not entitled to a single additional penny of student tax funds until Mr. Marcus provides an explicit public guarantee that neither he nor any of his staff will, at any time in the future, discriminate against any student on the basis of his physical appearance or political beliefs.

KENNETH R. MOSAKOWSKI

A Political Second Coming

The last few years have been bad indeed. A cruel and reactionary Asian war has grown to frightening proportions, threatening the destruction of an entire country - and perhaps an entire world. This latter possibility is made even more real by the continuation of the arms race, and the ominous border clashes between the Soviet Union and China - clashes which mirror, not an ideological disagreement, but a ghastly war between the have and have not nations of the earth. The continuation of the human race is made even more doubtful by the situation in the Middle East where a coalition of the most undemocratic forces in the world (from Western oil corporations to the Soviet military) presses its campaign for the utter destruction of one of the most democratic nations in the world, Israel.

At home, racism, reaction, and repression are on the rise. Poverty not only continues but threatens to grow, under the pressure of automation and a predicted government-induced recession. The cities deteriorate, health, education, and welfare are starved, inflation erodes hard earned gains, and Washington promises more of the same. The misallocation of resources continues, with expenditures for wars past, present, and future gobbling up 75% of the federal budget. The inequitable distribution of income continues, with the wealthiest 5% of the population consuming as much as the bottom 40%.

But what is perhaps equally sad is the disarray and retreat of the progressive forces in this country. The labor movement finds its membership moving to the right, often led by the Pied Piper of Alabama, George Wallace. The black freedom movement appears to be beating its head against a wall. Confronted with the apparently unchangeable reality of racism and poverty, it finds many of its former supporters in despair, or supporting such fairy tale non-solutions as black capitalism, community control, and separatism. The peace movement, after making dramatic breakthroughs in the Mc Carthy and Kennedy campaigns, now appears to be back in its old state of isolation from the American people. This has given rise to extremist views, such as support for the Viet Cong, and extremist tactics, such as the various modes of resistance, which cannot possibly bring an end to the war. This, in turn, further alienates the people from the peace movement.

Adding considerably to the problem is the tiny but riotous leftist fringe of the society. The two principal groups of the fringe are SDS and the Black Panthers, speaking for a small minority of the student and black communities, respectively. The hatred, intransigence, dogmatism, and irrationality of these groups increase daily. And now SDS has called for a "national action" in Chicago, the purpose of which is to bring about a repression which (in SDS's cockeyed view of things) will bring about revolution. SDS's manipulative vulture politics will surely not bring about revolution, but they may very well deal a Gestapo-like blow to the aspirations of workers, blacks, and students. In one sense though (and only in one sense), I applaud the SDS national action in Chicago: for they are consistent. That is exactly where their logic, their assumptions, and their analyses lead them. SDS'ers who are not prepared to go so far had perhaps better rethink their entire view of things.

What does all this point to? Programmatically, some radical approaches to the problems of racism, poverty, and war; tactically, a rejection of SDS-Panther confrontationism, and a principled emphasis on the use of democratic electoral politics and civil liberties.

In short, we need a political second coming. Such an event may not be as far off as it seems. For in the past year, sections of the labor movement, the black freedom movement, and the peace movement have begun to show an awareness of what needs to be done. Students, too, have been affected. This new wave of "democratic radicalism" has manifested itself in many organizations, but the Young People's Socialist League, a section of the Socialist Party, are more interested in human beings and their problems. YPSL's is more interested in those who are starving - those who have no jobs - those who live in miserable housing - those who are discriminated against - those whose working conditions are miserable - more interested in these people than in upper middle class kids who can't figure out what their life style, or who want to sexually liberate themselves.

YPSL, unlike SDS does not purge those who dissent. Further unlike SDS, we manage to disagree without calling each other fascists, racists, counterrevolutionary traitors and pigs.

YPSL wants to, in their own small little way, contribute to a political second coming, and to do this means, in Norman Thomas' words, "not to burn the American flag, but to wash it."

Shlomo Carlebach

World Knows The Word Peace, But Not Melody

"The world knows the word peace, but they don't know the melody. They know the word love, but not the melody. A lot of young people know the melody, but no one will tell them the word. That word is undoubtedly peace."

So spoke Shlome Carlebach Monday night in Bowker Auditorium. For 2-1/2 hours Carlebach spoke and sang to a crowd of over 350, a crowd that was, within minutes, as much involved in the music as Carlebach himself.

Shaking hands with people in the audience as he entered, Carlebach wore no jacket or tie, only a small gold skull cap atop his thick steel-grey hair.

Very soft-spoken, Carlebach repeatedly asked the audience to join in the singing. At first, there was little or no response. But the total involvement of the singer himself - his powerful voice, the anecdotes, the dust rising from the stage as he at times danced with excitement and the closed eyes - broke the barrier between the man and the group.

The audience sang and then in what appeared to be a total abandonment of self to the environment, the people danced and danced and danced. Finished dancing, they retired to the stage, to sit in a full circle around Carlebach.

Through his music Carlebach expressed his philosophy. He believes in the brotherhood of man. For him color, wealth, age are no barrier.

At 11:00 a group of the audience returned with Carlebach to the house of Rabbi Kowal where the singing continued until 1:00 a.m.

There in a smaller group, Carlebach went deeper into his philosophy, again using anecdotes to dramatize his beliefs.

Carlebach said that he would probably be back in this area next year and hopes that he can return again to UMass.

Study Reports Hub Colleges Are Pinching Housing Market

BOSTON (AP) - A study prepared for Mayor Kevin H. White recommended Tuesday that greater Boston's colleges and universities consider helping to build $100 million worth of housing units for students, faculty and workers.

The report said greater Boston's 50 schools of higher education seriously affect the housing market, pinching in particular the elderly living on fixed incomes.

The report was prepared by research groups at Boston University and Tufts University. The chairman of the 10-month-old committee which produced the report is BU President Arland F. Christ-Janer.

The report proposed that 6,000 units of housing be built in rail yards in the Allston section, near Cambridge and the Back Bay Section of Boston.

An alternative suggested was housing built with air rights over the intown extension of the Massachusetts Turnpike.

The report did not recommend a specific sum for the colleges to contribute to the cost of building the units.

"Such an undertaking is not beyond the capacity of large financial institutions such as banks and insurance companies," the report noted.

It make these points:

There are 4,000 apartments in Boston and another 8,000 just outside the city limits that are occupied by students.

Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge export student residents into Boston, as do other out-of-city institutions.

The area's colleges house about 45 per cent of their undergraduates and less than 20 per cent of graduate students and their families.

MISHA DICHTER WILL play two piano recitals in Bowker Auditorium, one tonight and one tomorrow. He has won the kind of praise reserved for the truly elect. (Photo by Wayne J. Shilkret, New York).

Pianist Misha Dichter Has Skyrocketed to Top

Misha Dichter will be featured in paino recitals tonight, Wednesday October 8 and Thursday October 9 in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. under the sponsorship of the Fine Arts Council's Concert Association.

Seldom has any young musician skyrocketed to the top of his profession with such speed as has the American pianist, Misha Dichter. Immediately recognized as a star pianist by the Russians at the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1966, Dichte r has since made a clean sweep of the American and European musical capitals, winning the kind of praise and ovations reserved for the truly elect.

For his appearances at UMass tonight and tomorrow evening, Mr. Dichter has selected a program including the great "Appassionata" Sonata in F Minor and Sonata in D Major by Beethoven; Organ Prelude and Fugue in D Major by Bach as transcribed for Piano by Busoni; a group of six Brahms' piano works at the Prokofiev Sonata No. 7, Op. 83.

Excellent reserved single tickets are available for both performances by contacting the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 5-0202. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office two hours before each concert. Single tickets are priced at $1.00 for UMass undergraduates; $2.00 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3.00 to the general public.

Summer School in Bologna Features Studies, Travel

Applications for the University's 1970 Summer School Program in Bologna, Italy are now being accepted, according to Professor Howard H. Quint, director of the program. All other things being equal, said Professor Quint, early applicants will be given special consideration and will be notified of their acceptance in the program well in advance of March 1, the deadline date for application.

The Bologna Program is the only one of the University's foreign summer school programs that is not geared specifically to a single discipline or to language study, although a course in elementary Italian will be offered for those students wishing to take it. Other courses to be given next summer will be Renaissance Art, Italian Music from Palestrina to Berlo, and the History of the Age of the Baroque. Students must take two of the four courses offered and thereby earn six official credits.

The program has its headquarters in the Center of John Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. This building, which is thoroughly air-conditioned and one of the most modern in Bologna, is located in the heart of the University of Bologna compound and close to the center of the city.

A feature of the program are field trips usually taken on week ends to such cultural centers as Florence, Ravenna, Siena, Venice, and Rome. The Rome visit is over a four day period; that in Venice spans three days. The Venice trip is held on the occasion of the Feast of the Redeemer which features magnificent displays of fireworks and illuminated nighttime regattas in the city's lagoons and canals. Each year as part of the program students attend the opera at the Roman colliseum in Verona.

All courses are taught in English, and classes are concentrated on a four day schedule between Monday and Thursday; week ends are thereby left free either for the organized field trips or for independent travel. The Bologna Program, declared Professor Quint, is important not only from the point of view of what a student obtains academically but also in how he learns to cope with the problems of living in a foreign country.

Exclusive of board, which the student must provide for himself, the cost of the Bologna Summer School session is $725 for Massachusetts residents and $755 for out of state students. This amount includes air transportation to and from the United States, tuition, health and library fees, field trips in Italy, and room rent in Bologna.

This marks the program's fifth year. Its original forma' has remained substantially unchanged, although course offerings have varied from year to year. Students who have been enrolled in the program in past years have uniformly expressed their satisfaction in being located in Bologna rather than in more glamorous cities such as Rome, Florence, and Venice. "When you're in Bologna," said one student, "you know that you are really in an Italian city rather than an Italian tourist city. Florence is nice to visit, but we prefer to live in Bologna."

Bologna, itself, said Professor Quint, is a city rich in culture, and world famous for its cuisine. It is the site of the oldest University in Europe, one historically distinguished for its schools of law and medicine. In addition, it houses several excellent art and archeological museums as well as one of the finest theaters and opera houses in Italy. Bologna is also exceedingly well located; it is an hour by train to Ferrara, Florence and Ravenna; two and a half hours to Venice and Milan; and five hours from Rome.

The summer school session in Italy extends from June 18 to August 8. Between the latter date and August 30, when the group returns to the United States, students are free to travel on their own. The seven and a half week stay in Bologna, said one student, made her particularly well prepared to cope with traveling about Europe after the close of the program.

Students interested in obtaining information about or in enrolling in the program should see Professor Quint at their earliest convenience. His office is 638 Herter Hall.

Kennedy Inquest

Lack of Cross-Examination would Violate His Constitutional Rights

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's lawyers will tell the Massachusetts Supreme Court Wednesday that his constitutional rights would be violated if they could not cross-examine witnesses at any inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne.

This argument is contained in briefs that have been filed with five members of the state's high court. Oral arguments will be presented at the hearing, which will be open to the public.

The inquest, originally planned for Sept. 3 in the District Court at Edgartown, was called to investigate the death of Miss Kopechne, 28, found dead July 19 in Kennedy's car after it had plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island, near Edgartown.

The inquest was blocked when Kennedy lawyers went to the State Supreme Court, protesting the ground rules District Court Judge James A. Boyle laid down for the inquest.

They opposed Boyle's ruling as unconstitutional on the grounds that he would not allow them to cross-examine witnesses, that he would allow each lawyer to be present in the courtroom only when his client was on the stand, and that they would be limited to advising the witness of his rights.

There are several lawyers representing Kennedy and the four other men and five surviving young women at a cookout on the island the night of the girl's death.

The appeal originally was made to Justice Paul C. Reardon of the State Supreme Court during the summer recess. Reardon issued an order halting the inquest, then referred the case to the full bench.

Only five of the seven-member court will sit. One justice disqualified himself because his son is counsel for a Senate subcommittee of which Kennedy is chairman. A second justice died last week.

During the preliminary hearing, Joseph J. Hurley, an assistant attorney general, argued that Boyle followed the law when he banned cross-examination. He said the proceeding was nonaccusatory and was not a trial but simply an investigation by the court.

Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis of New Bedford, whose district includes Dukes County, of which Edgartown is a part, is awaiting a decision in the Court of Common Pleas in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on his request for exhumation and an autopsy on Miss Kopechne.

Miss Kopechne was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by Dr. Donald R. Mills, associated medical examiner at Edgartown. He ruled she drowned.

Several weeks after that Dinis moved to request the inquest, the purpose of which is to determine the legal cause of death.

Learning Research Center Will Interview and Match Students

The Learning Research Center will conduct interviews Wed. Oct. 8 between 4-11 p.m. in the Student Union. These interviews comprise the first step in a program designed to match students with their complementary learning interest.

People who have had interviewing experience are asked to become involved. Those who wish to be interviewed may stop by between the prescribed times.

For further information, contact Learning Research Center, Mills House.

Panel to Describe Programs Abroad

There are a myriad of opportunities open for everyone to work, to study, and to travel abroad through individual as well as institutional programs.

This Thursday, October 9, at 8:15, SBA 120, the Foreign Program Office, under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Burns, and Mortarboard, the senior women's honor society, are sponsoring a program to help you "Act on Your Dreams."

An informal panel will be made up of students who have been involved in independent or university programs abroad.

The following partial list of panel members shows the range of information available.

Mike West will speak about Crossroads Africa; Steve Grant, a graduate student in education, about interning in France with UNESCO; Bernice Polsky, a senior Spanish major, about her independent study in Mexico; Cindy Nystrom about Ireland; John Meikeljohn, a senior at Amherst College, about his experiences in India and Denmark; Gail Gelver about the Madrid program; Nancy Walker about the Oxford program.

LAURA NYRO

Homecoming to Feature Laura Nyro At Friday Night Mixed Bag Concert

Homecoming '69 entertainment will start off with Miss Laura Nyro in concert at the Curry Hicks Cage on Friday, Oct. 17. Starting at 10. p.m., the performance will follow a float parade and bonfire rally.

Miss Nyro, best known for writing "Oh Sweet Blindness", "Wedding Bell Blues", and "Stone Soul Picnic" will be making her first appearance at UMass. Appearing with her will be Tim Hardin.

Two Laura Nyro albums are now available: "Eli and the Thirteenth Confession", telling the story of the passage of a girl to womanhood; and "New York Tendaberry" depicting a warm tenderness she finds in New York City.

The music that Miss Nyro creates has been compared to that done by Aretha Franklin, Donovan and Burt Bacharach: combining rock, jazz, soul and classical. The New York Times claims, "She's the Hippest -- and maybe the Hottest."

To Laura Nyro, the city is the totality of her life. She is perhaps the first urban composer to emerge from popular music.

"The struggle in the city is between health and sickness - God and the devil. That's been my experience," she says.

Similar to Bob Dylan, Laura Nyro was not immediately successful as a performer. Her first public appearance at the '67 Monterey Pop Festival was poorly received. It was not until the Fifth Dimension recorded two of her songs that the public began to notice Miss Nyro and listen to what she had to say.

Today she is headed toward the top of the music world, both as a performer and a writer.

Fiscal Experts Report Drop In Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fiscal experts of the Nixon Administration told Congress Tuesday they see signs that inflationary forces are slackening. At the same time, they said they seek to head off any depression.

Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy and Budget Director Robert P. Mayo testified before the Joint Economic Committee which is looking into the state of the economy.

Committee members expressed considerable concern about a possible recession and about recent figures showing a jump in unemployment from 3 1/2 per cent in August to 4 per cent in September.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., asked if the administration was planning for a recession as a means of combatting inflation.

Kennedy said, no, that "we are trying to reduce inflationary pressures without a recession - we want to see that doesn't happen."

Kennedy testified that administration policies to combat inflation appear to be succeeding.

Evidence that the policy is being effectively applied is beginning to mount, said Kennedy.

As indications he cited among other things the September unemployment rate of 4 per cent - a rate he considers acceptable.

Deadline for notices is 2 p.m. on the day prior to printing.

Frosh Gridmen Seek Repeat of '68

By RICHARD S. BACKER
Staff Reporter

How can a team improve on an undefeated season? Frosh football coach Dave Kelley, who has been pondering this question, will get his first answer next Monday afternoon, Oct. 13, when the Little Redmen take on the hard hitting Boston University Pups at BU.

KELLY

Last year's frosh (4-0) were possibly the finest in UMass history. This point is further emphasized when you look at the current varsity team and see the large number of sophomores in the starting lineup.

This year's frosh squad doesn't have the overall depth and size of last year's undefeated team, but Kelley feels he has 10-15 quality athletes with potential to be varsity starters.

The frosh offense will be characterized by fine speed, hard running and good depth at the quarterback position. The backfield is potentially explosive, but the offensive line is suspect, and how much the team scores will depend upon how well the line plays as a unit.

Kelley is blessed with three sprinters who run the hundred in under 10 seconds. Leading the frosh will be halfback sprinters Steve Shubert, 5'11, 185, who also plays split end and Kevin Filley, son of former Notre Dame captain, Pat Filley. Filley is 5'10, 180.

Both halfbacks have the ability to be game breakers with their blazing speed. The fastest man on the squad, however, is swing halfback Bill Daenz who also doubles at defensive back.

The fullback position is a battle between Ray Bouchard and Tib Rockwell. Bouchard is the better blocker, but Rockwell at 6'2, 210 is a fast and powerful runner. In addition to vying for this position, both Bouchard and Rockwell are defensive starters.

Quarterback has the most depth. Kelley has been pleased with three candidates and indicates that all will see action, although each plays a different style.

Byron Murray is a fine passer and a good runner, possibly the best all-around candidate. Len Mauze at 6'3, 190, is the biggest and he likes to run but is a more than adequate passer. The dark horse for starting honors is Kirk Hoover. Kelley is impressed with

Kelley's toughest decision may come when he has to decide who starts at tight end. Presently Doug, Winslow and Jack Hakes are in a close battle for the starting berth. Both are fine athletes, as Hakes at 6'3, 220, is also a linebacker while Winslow at 6'4, 215, is battling for one of the defensive end positions.

The offensive line is probably the team's weakest area. Much of the team's success will depend upon whether or not Kelley can form a cohesive unit from his personnel.

Right now the leading contenders are center Joe Grasso and guard Vic Moreno. Kelley terms Moreno as "my best blocking lineman". The other staring positions are wide open and possible candidates are converted linebacker John Welsh, Tom Mullen, Rich Dinne, Doug Cunningham and John Queeney.

Split end will be handled by Tim Edwards, another two way performer. Edwards doubles as a starting defensive halfback.

The frosh offense has good potential, but its success will hinge on the offensive line's ability to perform up to expectations. With any kind of cohesive play, the Little Redmen will score quickly and often.

The frosh will employ the standard UMass 4-4-3 defense. The strong points of the Little Redman defenders will be at tackle and in the fact that many offensive starters will be going both ways. This latter point testifies to the quality of the athletes UMass recruited.

Anchoring the line will be tackles Tom Nyland, 6'2, 235 and Pete Viviano, 6'4, 215. Defensive end will have Dave Flynn and offensive starters Doug Winslow and Tib Rockwell.

Linebacker is still up in the air. Leading candidates are fullback Bouchard and tight end Hakes.

Monday's opponent, BU, has played two games, topping a tough Curry College eleven 20-8, and losing to Harvard JV's.

Kelley feels that in order for his team to win, the defense will have to hold BU to under two touchdowns. One factor in UMass' favor is the kicking of Andy Dutkanicz. A fine punter, he may be able to force BU to start deep in its own territory each time they get the ball. His ability to kick the long field goal could be of major importance in a close game.

The game figures to be unusually physical with a lot of hard hitting. Depth, which UMass lacks, could be a big factor for BU. Very likely, the team with the most desire will get the win.

Step Aside Lombardi! Meet Mrs. Cook

One of the most dynamic persons influencing the Intramural Athletic Program over the past few years has been one Mrs. Edna Cook, presently in her second year as Head of Residence at Hamlin House.

It is Mrs. Cook's belief that "intramural athletics are the most important thing to a dorm."

Before taking over Head of Residence duties at Hamlin House, Mrs. Cook ran the show at Grayson House, and did she ever. In 1967-68 her Grayson Aces won the Stephen Davis Award as the top residence hall performers in intramural athletics.

They tallied 1152 total points, winning dormitory championships in football, softball and wrestling. They finished second in basketball, bowling, squash, swimming, badminton, tennis mixed doubles and horseshoes and captured one third place finish in soccer.

While Grayson was winning championships, who knows what Hamplin House was doing. The 1967-68 Dormitory Campus Point Standings do not even list Hamlin among the top 53 teams. The following year, 1968-69, Mrs. Cook took over the reins.

A startling turnabout in intramural performance occured. The Hamlin Pied Pipers literally came out of nowhere to place second in over-all Dormitory Campus Point Standings with 1100 points. Mrs. Cook's former team, the Grayson Aces, dropped to eighth with 780 points.

The Pied Pipers were campus champions in softball; they scored second among residence halls in volleyball and wrestling and tied for third in horseshoes.

Mrs. Cook feels that the most important step in achieving success in intramurals is to get a good athletic chairman, a person who can round up support for the various events.

Mrs. Cook does her part by keeping in close contact with the participants in her dorm in an honest effort to insure group unity. According to Peter Graham, Assistant Director of Intramural Athletics, "She has instilled a lot of pride and spirit," and stands as an example for others in similar positions to follow.

Graham sums up the feelings of those who appreciate what Mrs. Cook has accomplished when he says, "In general she has just done a fantastic job."

Mets 8-5 Underdogs

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Mets took yesterday off to recover from their first pennant clinching celebration and tidy up some personal affairs and ticket problems before starting to get ready for the World Series with a morning workout.

Already installed as 8-5 underdogs, a familiar role for a team that started the year as 100-1 longshots, the Mets were confident they would be able to go all the way and take the series from the Baltimore Orioles.

"Nobody can stop us..... Atlanta, Baltimore, nobody," Cleon Jones said in the happy glow of victory. "We're gonna win it all."

The series will open Saturday at Baltimore with Tom Seaver, the Mets' 25-game winner, scheduled to face left-hander Mike Cuellar, who won 23 for the American League champions.

The long delay in starting the series is the result of the three game sweeps by the Mets and Orioles in their league playoff series. The weekend start, with days off for travel, also handily assured television NBC of at least one Saturday-Sunday show and possibly two if the series goes six or seven games.

They play in Baltimore Saturday and Sunday, take Monday off for the one-hour flight to New York and resume at Shea Stadium with games Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, if a fifth is needed.

Unless somebody has won four by that time, they will take another day off Friday for that hop and a skip to Baltimore and pick it up again in Baltimore, Saturday, Oct. 18 and possibly, Sunday, Oct 19. Of course, any rain delay would stretch it out even longer. In the World Series any postponed game is played off the following day on the original site and the whole schedule is pushed back.

The extended schedule makes it possible for the two managers, Gil Hodges of the Mets and Earl Weaver of the Orioles, to use only three starting pitchers and still give each a three-day rest. That could mean three starts each for Seaver and Cuellar in the first, fourth and seventh games. It will be Dave McNally 20-7 for the Orioles against Jerry Koosman 17-9 in the second game and Jim Palmer 16-4 against Gary Gentry 13-12 in the third game.

Nevele Quits

MONTREAL (AP) - Mike MacCormac, director of racing at Blue Bonnets, said yesterday he has received word from New York that Nevele Pride has pulled up lame after a training session and will have to be retired.

Nevele Pride, the world's fastest trotter, had been scheduled to come here Oct. 19 for a $25,000 race.

Lack of Funds to Limit '70 Summer School

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Last night's Student Senate meeting was highlighted by the appearance of Director of Food Services Joel Stoneham and Assistant Dean of Administration William Venman.

Dr. Venman addressed the student governing body on summer school for 1970. He announced that coming summer school "will be different than in past years." Due to fiscal funds described as "pretty short" by Venman there will be just one six week session as opposed to the usual two in the past. It will probably start sometime after June 29.

A special "deficiency" budget for receiving additional funds from the legislature "would not have effect" according to Venman and while the current summer school plan is "subject to modification in detail" it will not change in the "broad scope."

Food Services Director Joel Stoneham next took the podium to answer questions from the Senate on a proposal calling for Board of Trustees to eilimate rules requiring Southwest residents to buy meal tickets.

Stoneham stated that if the Senate "feels justification" on the issue and that if there is "continued triplin" by the University in housing policy, then they should pursue this proposal.

Defense of the present Southwest mail ticket policy could be traced back to 1958 when the whole residential complex was first planned according to Stoneham. A bond issue was taken out in order to build the cafeterias there and the compulsory meal ticket has been usad as a means of the bond payment.

Stoneham was subjected to a barrage of questions which included renovation of the Greenough snack bar and increasing the hours available for eating in the cafeterias during the day. On the latter point, Stoneham said that "I question whether any student under board contract here goes without eating unless he or she chooses to."

The Food Service Director concluded his remarks by stating that the Senate "out to investigate" an area for money and feasibility before passing on it. And as far as the Senate resolution was concered, Stoneham stated that if the Board of Trustees thinks Southwest should be subject to the same regulations as the rest of the campus, then elimination of compulsory meal tickets "is fine with me. It's their decision."

After Stoneham left the Senate passed proposal 268 with Sen. Nims remark that "I don't think Southwest should suffer for something passed in 1958."

In other Senate action Sen. Brenner stated University Architect William Lambert's in absentia answer for building the new library at the campus pond rather than "Haigis Mall" (an area near Whitmore.) According to Brenner, Architect Lambert considers the present site as "a center spot of activity" whereas the library "wouldn't fit in Haigis Mall."

The Senate also took up a bill to furnish a 30% rebate of room rent for students in forced triples unless vacancies appear somewhere else in the same area. This proposal would be submitted to the Board of Trustees for action by Oct. 24.

After much debate a resolution was finally passed requring all dorms under self-determination to submit secruty measures to the Senate and hold off judicial prosecution until the Board of Trustees has met considering such security measures. Sen. Kentfield called the measure one of "keeping things cool" until the Board meets and passes on the issue.

Fiscal allocations for SCAT and Moratorium Peace Mail Committee were also to be passed on.

Dr. William Venman (standing) led an open discussion on summer session problems this past June. Last night Dr. Venman spoke to the Student Senate on the change in policy for the 1970 summer session.

Kennedy Challenges Inquest Law, Wants to Protect His Rights

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy doesn't want to block an inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, but wants his rights to be protected if one is held, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Edward B. Hanify, counsel for Kennedy, asked the State Supreme Court to prescribe a new body of rules for the conduct of inquests, so that Kennedy and other witnesses amy have counsel there with the right to cross-examine witnesses. He also asked that the inquest be closed to the public.

Hanify also challenged the constitutionality of the state's inquest law.

Judge James A. Boyle of the Edgartown District Court, where the inquest was scheduled, had ruled that lawyers for witnesses could be present only while their clients were testifying, and would be barred from cross-examining witnesses. Judge Boyle also ruled that the inquest would be public, but specified that only accredited newsmen would be admitted to the 132 seats available in the Edgartown courtroom.

"It is our contention that the statue, particularly the requirement that the judge report the name of any person whose unlawful act or negligence contributed to a death, and the provision for the judge to order an immediate arrest, makes an inquest an accusatory proceeding," Hanify said.

"Are you claiming an inquest is unconstitutional, no matter how it is conducted?" Chief Justice Raymond S. Wilkins asked.

"No, your honor, not if this court lays down new rules and restrictions," Hanify replied.

If the court doesn't declare the inquest law unconstitutional, Hanify said, it should "fortify the statute with an infusion of constitutional protection by orders to the Superior Court and other courts."

In his conclusion Hanify also requested that the court direct Judge Boyle to disqualify himself from the inquest, since he was a party to the present Supreme Court appeal.

The petitions by Kennedy and nine other prospective witnesses who were among the Kennedy group named Judge Boyle as the respondent.

In opposition to the petitions, Asst. Atty. Gen. Joseph J. Hurley said that the disqualification proposal was being brought up for the first time. Hurley said that while Judge Boyle had announced in Edgartown he was going to have the inquest open to the public through the press, the petitioners made no objections until they filed briefs in the appeal.

Associate Justice Jacob J. Spiegel asked Hanify to assume "that the court held an inquest in private, and a report is made which might incriminate some person. "How are you going to prevent publication of that?" he asked.

"By a directive to the Superior and District Courts to withhold the report," Hanigy said.

"Suppose a judge found no negligence by anybody; would you object to immediate release of the report?" asked Associate Justice Paul C. Reardon.

"No, your honor," Hanify replied.

"How do your tell in advance?" Spiegel asked. "I don't see how a general rule can cover."

Hanify said if the inquest were held in secret, the person named would be protected, and the report could be withheld until the matter had reached another legal status such as indictment.

"You talk of 'the person' who is the 'focal point' of the inquest, is that one particular person?" Justice Wilkins asked. "Yes it is the petitioner, Mr. Kennedy," Hanify replied. "He is the focal point. He was the driver, and he was the one who appeared in court."

Vote Today in Senate Elections

The Student Senate urges all students to vote today in Senate elections. Included on the ballot is a University-wide referendum question on the new Student Government Constitution.

Commuters will be asked to vote on two referendum questions concerning the SGA constitution and the Commuter Assembly Constitution.

Voting will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. for fraternities, sororities and commuters.

Senate elections will be held in residence halls between 6 and 9 p.m. tonight for all dorm residents.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI said Wednesday it has launched an investigation into bombings, arson and vandalism that have hit draft board offices and other federal installations across the country. Hundreds of draft records have been destroyed during the nighttime raids in recent months and extensive damage has been done to many of the buildings, according to a survey by The Associated Press.

BOSTON (AP) - A five per cent increase in rejected blood donors due to contact with hepatitis cases, was announced Wednesday by the Massachusetts Red Cross.

Dr. Allan Kliman, medical director of the Red Cross blood program, said cases of hepatitis have increased by 300 per cent this year. He said hepatitis sufferers are "forever lost to us as blood donors, yet we need more and more gamma globulin to confer temporary immunity on those who've been in contact with hepatitis."

(AP) - Two South American jetliners were hijacked to Cuba Wednesday the second anniversary of the death of Ernesto "Che" Guevara, hero of the Cuban revolution.

It was not known whether there was any connection between the hijackings and the anniversary. Guevara was an Argentine-born revolutionary killed by Bolivian soldiers when trapped with a band of guerrillas Oct. 8, 1967.

Forty five planes have now been hijacked to Cuba this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A clique of sergeants raked in more than a million dollars in sales from a firm they formed to sell goods to the Army clubs they managed, a Senate investigator testified Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican whip Robert P. Griffin openly joined the opposition to Judge Clement F. Haynesworth Jr. Wednesday, dealing a severe - and possible fatal - blow to the Supreme Court nomination.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's priority proposal to reorganize the nation's mail system under a semi-independent postal corporation was rebuffed by the House Post Office Committee Wednesday on a 13 - 13 tie vote.

SAIGON (AP) - American ground forces reported no contacts with the enemy Wednesday as a battlefield lull continued throughout South Vietnam, the U. S. Command reported.

LONDON (AP) - A breed of superflies immune to normal insecticides posed a new hazard in Britain's mounting garbage strike Tuesday.

The strike spread Tuesday to cover all but one of the capital's 32 boroughs and affects more than seven million people.

MONTRAL (AP) - After a night of near-chaos, striking city police and firemen returned to work Wednesday in Montreal. Both departments were reported fully manned and operating normally.

CAIRO (AP) - Egypt declared Wednesday it would accept the co-called Rhodes formula for negotiating a settlement with Israel, the same formula used to bring both sides to an armistice 20 years ago.

Senators Introduce Resolutions Seeking Vietnam Troop Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two resolutions seeking U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam were introduced in the Senate Wednesday, while the Republican leader appealed for tolerance as President Nixon pursues peace efforts.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania made that request in a commentary on what proved to be a Democratic show.

At the same time, Scott broadened a bit the definition of "constructive debate" which fits into his bid for a 60-day moratorium on dissent against U.S. policy.

He said one of the resolutions, proposing a pullout unless the government in Saigon begins major reforms within 60 days, fits his terms.

Hughes told the Senate Scott's moratorium on criticism might merit consideration "if linked to substantive plans for disengagement.

Hughes and Eagleton would have the Senate declare that unless Saigon ends censorship, releases political prisoners and prepares to yield power to a provisional government - all within 60 days - the United States will end all aid to Vietnam "with all reasonable haste."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., proposed the other measure, to urge American withdrawal after a "reasonable interval" to allow for orderly transition and to guard the safety of U.S. troops and South Vietnamese who might choose to leave with them.

Scott's statement dealt with the Hughes speech. "This is the kind of constructive debate which I had hoped would emerge," the Republican leader said. "My suggestion that we hold down differences to the quiet and reasonable consideration of alternatives has been respected. . ."

Scott didn't comment on the Church speech - which drew a select audience of the Senate's senior Democratic doves.

"I didn't hear it," he said. "No Republican did, although one or two entered the chamber briefly during the hour of Vietnam discussion. It never became a debate because nobody was on hand to challenge the dissenters.

Dr. John C. Gowan, a national authority in the field of education of gifted children, will speak on "Creativity and its Educational Implications" at the University of Massachusetts this week.

Dr. Gowan's talk, slated for Thursday, Oct. 9, at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Education auditorium, is being sponsored by the Counselor Education and Human Relations Center in the UMass School of Education.

A professor of education at San Fernado Valley State College in Northbridge, California, Dr. Gowan is the author of many books and articles, including "Education and Guidance of the ablest," "Guidance of Exceptional Children," and "Creativity and Its Educational Implications." Dr. Gowan is also director of the San Fernando Valley State College Institute for Creativity and Gifted Children.

The event is open to the public without charge.

WASHINGTON (AP) - These superpowered cars with the big engines, air scoops, fat racing tires and "4-on-the-floor" are racking up 56 per cent larger accident losses, an insurance executive told Congress Wednesday.

Dean Jeffers, president of Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co., the nation's fifth largest auto insurer, then announced at a Senate hearing that his firm is increasing by 50 per cent insurance rates on these cars to discourage their appeal. He called them "motorized missiles."

Jeffers said his firm doesn't consider owners of these cars unsafe drivers and acknowledged that "all these cars are not purchased for fast-driving thrills."

But, he said, "these cars certainly are not conducive to moderate driving. Indeed, they are powered well above the needs of the prudent defensive driver and above the traffic capacity of most streets and roads."

Among cars listed under Nationwide's superpower category by Jeffers are the Corvette, Mustang Mach 1, Oldsmobile 442, Pontiac GTO, Plymouth Road Runner, Dodge Charger 500, AMX, Malibou SS 396, and the Mercury Cougar Eliminator.

Jeffers said the increase in rates on this type of car was prompted by a special actuarial study made by his firm over a three-year period.

It showed, he said in testimony before the Senate antitrust monopoly subcommittee, that the high powered cars Detroit turns out to appeal to the "under-30 set" produce an average of 56 per cent more in accident losses than standard powered cars.

"This much higher loss experience simply cannot be ignored," Jeffers said. "It is compelling evidence that insurance for overpowered cars should be priced higher. It is really the fair thing to do."

Unless insurance rates are increased on these cars, the average driver will wind up paying part of the insurance losses, he said.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee conducting hearing on rising auto repair rates, said it should be the responsibility of the auto industry, insurance firms and the government "to make sure we do not feed into our interstate highway system instruments that almost amount to instruments of violence if not used wisely."

Man Changes Sex, Bears "Miracle Child"

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - Mrs. Dawn Hall Simmons, British - born author who stunned Charleston society with sex-change surgery and subsequent marriage to a Negro mechanic, now claims to have baffled medical science by giving birth to "a miracle child."

She says the child, a seven-pound girl, was born in the Midwest Sept. 16, but she refuses to identify the hospital or her doctor.

When Mrs. Simmons announced three weeks ago she was pregnant, doctors at John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., where the sex-change surgery took place last year, said "it's definitely impossible" for Mrs. Simmons to become pregnant.

In an interview at her home Wednesday, Mrs. Simmons said, "I believe that God is higher than medical science and that's my explanation. She's a miracle child and will be a great blessing to the black people."

Mrs. Simmons, the former foster son and now the foster daughter of British actress Dame Margaret Rutherford, said she named the child Bathsheba Marjorie Margaret Paul Simmons.

SW Assembly Supports Moratorium Donates Funds to Free University

At Tuesday night's meeting of the Southwest Assembly a bill was passed in support of the War Moratorium on October 15th. Submitted by President Larry Kravitz, the bill read as follows:

"Whereas there is going to be a national moratorium on October 15, 1969

Whereas the Moratorium Council has asked the support of students, faculty, administration and the Governments

Resolved that the Southwest Assembly support the War Moratorium and urge the residents of the area to take part in this event.

Two amendments were proposed by Treasurer Mike Linde which read:

"Resolved, the Southwest Assembly strongly recommend to instructors of classes in the Southwest area to cancel classes in the Southwest area on October 15, 1969

Resolved, the Southwest Assembly censure the Faculty Senate and the Administration for failure to respond to the Moratorium Council's request."

These amendments were also passed by the Assembly and added to the bill.

At the request of Free University City, Southwest Assembly voted to donate $125 for office expenses. Free University City will now be operating from Washington Tower.

The problem of triples was discussed pertaining to next semester's incoming swing shifters. At present there are still many triples in Southwest, especially in women's residence halls. The Assembly is working to alleviate the situation for next semester.

Assemblymen were appointed to standing committees and there are still positions on these committees for any ambitious Southwest residents who are willing to work for the Assembly. Also, there are still dorms unrepresented on the Assembly: Melvill, Patterson, Crampton, JQA Lower, JA Lower, JA Middle, Washington Middle, and Washington Upper. House governments should check to see if anyone has obtained nomination papers in order for the dorm to be represented on the Assembly. Elections will be held as soon as possible after nomination papers have been filled out. Any questions concerning the above matters may be directed to the Assembly by calling the Southwest student office at 5-1552.

Coming up at next week's meeting is a proposal for a co-ed dorm. The meeting will be held at 7:00 p.m. next Tuesday evening in Hampshire Dining Commons. All Southwest residents with an interest in student government and anyone concerned with problems and ideas for Southwest are invited to attend.

Court Finds Draft Procedure Invalid

SAN FRANCISCO – (CPS)- The San Francisco Federal court has handled down a draft decision that could significantly disturb draft procedure while freeing a number of present 1-Aers from induction.

Judge Robert I. Peckham ruled this week that universally enforced regulation that prevents draft registrants from being accompanied by legal counsel when summoned before a local draft board is invalid and "constitutionally suspect."

Judge Peckham was the magistrate who ruled earlier this year that members of draft boards must be residents of the area from which they send men.

Those men who have appeared before draft boards, usually on summons for being delinquent in registration, and who have stood mute or requested the assistance of an attorney or counsel have normally been held in contempt and classified 1-A. Their classifications are now invalid and most draft boards willprobably simply ignore them rather than submitting to the legal rigamaroll necessary to change the person's classification or validate the 1-A status.

Judge Peckham clearly ruled that only Congress can refuse the right of counsel for any person being interogated by federal institutions and that no legal delegation of this power had ever been granted the President (and through him local draft boards). Besides, Peckham continued, such a delegation would be "constitutionally suspect."

The decision affects all draft boards under jurisdiction of the government unless challenged or overturned in a higher court.

MLK Poverty Committee Holds Meeting Tonight

The Martin Luther King Council's Committee on Poverty will hold a special meeting tonight at 8:30 in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union. The main purpose of the meeting will be to consider a proposal by Sam Ajiri, western Massachusetts coordinator for the Biafra Relief Services Foundation, that the Committee on Poverty join forces with Mr. Ajiri's group to collect money for starving people in Biafra as well in the United States. ALL COMMITTEE MEMBERS ARE URGED TO ATTENDSO THAT THEY WILL BE ABLE TO VOTE ON THE PROPOSAL.

Other matters, regarding research and organization, will be considered later in the meeting.

The smash hit Broadway musical comedy "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" arrives at UMass October 19 for two performances at 2:00 and 7:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The show is being presented by a professional company as a part of Homecoming '69.

This is the show that brought burlesque back to New York City, and in a way that made it Broadway's number one hit for three years.

The play is set in Ancient Rome 200 years before the Christian era. The entire action takes place in front of three houses: the house of Lycus, a buyer and seller of the flesh of beautiful women; the house of Senex, a Senator whose wife doesn't understand him; the house of Erroneus who has been abroad for twenty years searching for his children stolen in their infancy by pirates.

The plot evolves around a slave's attempt to obtain his freedom; to get it he must arrange the purchase of a young lady for his master. Unfortunately Lycus has already sold her to a great captain who is on his way to claim her. How Pseudolus, the slave, gets the girl, gets his freedom, and escapes with his life make "FORUM" the funniest Broadway musical of the decade.

"Something familiar
Something peculiar Something for everyone
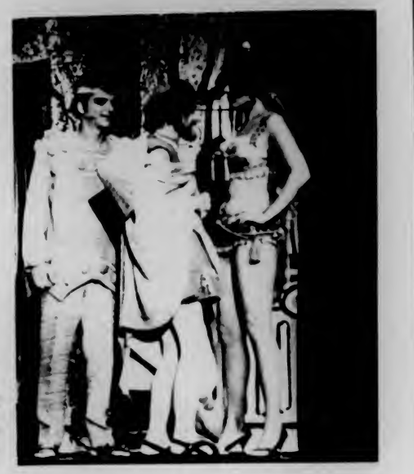
A Comedy Tonight."



Compromise Student Loan Bill Provides for Bank Subsidy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate-House conferees agreed Wednesday on a compromise bill designed to bolster the college student guaranteed loan program.

Chief stumbling block in a long dispute between the two branches had been an amendment of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., requiring that a bank could not make a loan conditional on agreement by a student or his family to do other business there.

This finally was compromised to provide for a study of the question by the secretary of health, education and welfare.

If he finds there is discrimination by the banks, he will issue regulations to stop it.

The bill's key feature provides for a government subsidy payment to the banks which could mean a yield to them of up to 10 per cent on the guaranteed loans.

The present ceiling is 7 per cent and this has cut down on the volume of loans since the prime interest rate rose to 8-1/2 per cent.

Little Finger Nails Mugger

NEW YORK (AP) - A woman being mugged bit off the tip of her assailant's little finger, police identified the prints on it and Wednesday arrested William Allen, 29, and charged him with robbery.

Police said the tip of Allen's left pinkie was missing when he was picked up in mid-Manhattan.

The victim Mrs. Harriet Neham, 53, was beaten over the head with a blunt instrument when attacked in the hallway of her apartment house in August 1968. She was hospitalized in critical condition but recovered.

How to Create a Homecoming Float

Since many students will be going home for the long weekend, it would be a good idea for houses or groups planning to build a float for the Homecoming parade to get started on it right away. There are a few basic points to remember in building a float.

Plan everything on paper first. This helps you know how much material to order. Make sure to take the height of overhead wires into consideration. When ordering a truck, make sure you know its dimensions.

Make the basic shapes in wood first. The cab of the truck is usually covered, but make sure the driver can see. Also plan for the exhaust of the truck. Plan to have the float's edges hang down over the wheels.

Chicken wire is usually stapled to the wooden frame for the form. The wire form is usually stuffed with napkins or toilet paper; however crepe paper, though more expensive, is already fireproofed and will save the trouble of a paint job.

Forms are tacked or nailed to the trucks. Hint - standing forms are more difficult to make.

No fires are allowed on the float, but if you want smoke dry ice makes a good substitute.

There are many little gimmicks that could make yours a winning float - costumed people marching with the float, antique cars, throwing hard candy, sound effects, and motion.

Our pill.

Does it really work?

If you've ever resorted to NoDoz* at 4 a.m. the night before an exam, you've probably been disappointed.

NoDoz, after all, is no substitute for sleep. Neither is anything else we can think of.

What NoDoz is is a very strong stimulant. In fact, NoDoz has the strongest stimulant you can buy without a prescription.

Caffeine.

What's so strong about that?

If we may cite The Pharmacological Basis of Therapeutics: Caffeine is a powerful central nervous stimulant. Caffeine excites all portions of the central nervous system. Caffeine stimulates all portions of the cortex, but its main action is on the psychic and sensory functions. It produces a more rapid and clearer flow of thought and allays drowsiness and fatigue. After taking caffeine, one is capable of more sustained intellectual effort and a more perfect association of ideas. There is also a keener appreciation of sensory stimuli.

Very interesting. But why take NoDoz when you can get caffeine in a cup of coffee?

Very simple. You take NoDoz all at once instead of sipping coffee for 10 minutes. And if you take two NoDoz tablets, the recommended dosage, you get twice the caffeine in a cup of coffee.

Two tablets—isn't that likely to be habit forming? Definitely not. NoDoz is completely non-habit forming.

Which means it's safe to take whether you're cramming at night. Or about to walk into an 8 o'clock class. Or driving somewhere (even though you're rested) and the monotony of the road makes you drowsy.

One last thing you should know about NoDoz. It now comes in two forms. Those familiar white pills you take with water. And a chewable tablet called NoDoz Action Aids®. It tastes like a chocolate mint, but it does everything regular NoDoz does.

And if you've managed to stay awake this long, you know that's quite a lot.

Hampshire College Prepares for 1970 Opening

Hampshire College, self-described as "one model for the survival of the private college," is readying its staff and facilities for its first class, scheduled to arrive in September, 1970.

The highly-experimental, co-educational liberal arts institution, located about three miles south of Amherst on Route 116, will accept about 250 freshmen and some 20 seniors for next year. Of that number, 27 1969 high school graduates (out of 51 applicants) have already been accepted under a unique "delayed admission" program.

This policy, allowing students to spend a year in travel or employment, is indicative of Hampshire's progressive approach to admissions, which recognizes that "for a great many students, four years of college at age eighteen makes absolutely no sense in terms of their general development."

TWO-WAY STREET

In addition, while the college's size will demand a somewhat traditional scheme for selecting students, Hampshire, says Admissions Director Van R. Halsey, "regards the admissions process as a mutual exploration, not a contest."

Towards this end, the college plans to base its admissions policy largely on subjective information, to reach "as full an understanding of the student as possible" and welcomes various information relative to the candidate, such as "a self-evaluation, a letter from a teacher or a friend, or his evaluation of the Hampshire concept."

But, contrary to its efforts for a "candid exchange," Hampshire's admissions committee will probably find itself involved in the contest that it seeks to avoid. For the first class of 250, over 1800 preliminary applications have been submitted, with perhaps 1500 seeking the 225 available places.

INDEPENDENCE SOUGHT

In spite of hopes for a flexible admissions program and a class that is as diverse as possible, Hampshire also finds it necessary to "seek students who are ready to begin a rigorous academic program in which they can achieve increasing responsibility for their own education."

This insistence is necessitated by the very nature of Hampshire's academic program. "A national pilot enterprise for innovations of quality in higher education," Hampshire will place a premium on independent programs.

The curriculum will not be divided into traditional departments, but into three schools: Humanities and Arts, Social Science, and Natural Science.

ARTS MIXES OLD, NEW

The School of Humanities and Arts will include both traditional and newer disciplines: drama, philosophy, literature, and classical music as well as films, television, and electronic music. The School will be run largely in small seminars to encourage students to develop their own creative abilities.

"Exploring several areas of curricular focus which hold much promise for involving students in the challenges of Social Science" is the stated objective of that school. Its two divisions will provide students with opportunities for extensive independent research and related employment in the community.

The School of Natural Science, drawing largely upon the facilities of the Five-College community, hopes to encourage study in fields not usually available to undergraduates, such as human biology and observational astronomy.

NEW SEQUENCE PLANNED

Students enrolled in all three schools will follow a three-part sequence, geared to personal ability and motivation; as a result, a Hampshire education may take as few as three years or as many as six. These Divisions comprise Basic Studies, a non-traditional introductory period; Disciplinary Studies, equivalent to normal study in a major field; and Advanced Studies, a preparation of a thesis or project.

Activities also will be handled in a unique fashion. The college will provide no extracurricular programs, but will fund anything within reason desired by the student body. A student activities center will be furnished by Hampshire's first class as it sees fit.

Hampshire will not, at first, establish any intercollegiate athletic competition, although there will be indoor and outdoor facilities, an extensive intramural program, and an athletic director. Interested students will be able to create and administer teams in any sports with sufficient interest.

NUMEROUS GRANTS

In light of its experimental nature, Hampshire has received numerous federal, corporational, and private grants. These include a $6,000,000 pledge from Harold F. Johnson and an award of $3,000,000 from the Ford Foundation.

In addition, the college has a Ford Foundation "challenge" grant, providing $1 for every $2 privately contributed.

As a result, Hampshire's finances have provided a sturdy foundation for the construction of the college. Presently its 44 employees are housed in five wooden-frame farm houses, but five major buildings will be completed by September on the college's 550-acre tract.

ENROLLMENT GROWTH PLANNED

These structures will constitute Hampshire's first independent living unit, or "cluster," including Merrill House, a four-story, three section co-ed dormitory with dining facilities; the House academic building; the Student Activities Pavillion; and senior faculty residences, with facilities for entertaining students.

Another cluster is slated for completion in the mid-70's, when enrollment will jump to about 1500. Two additional clusters are tentatively planned, depending on the acquisition of additional acreage.

A central library and science center will serve all these units. The library, expected to open in September, will house about 35,000 volumes not already available in the Five-College area and extensive film and microfilm.

This multimedia center is among the facilities which Hampshire feels it can offer to the rest of the Five-College community. Others include its radio astronomy resources, electronic synthesizer, and numerous seminars. As a result, the college expects to move in at once as a coordinate institution.

FIFTEEN-YEAR PROCESS

Hampshire was first conceived in 1958, but its history goes back to a 1955 Ford Foundation grant of $50,000 to the area's four colleges "to study cooperative educational activities." Three years later, a proposal was made to establish a fifth institution in the valley that "would provide economies, particularly in the efficient use of teaching resources, and yet provide an education comparable to that of the prestige colleges."

The college was finally founded in 1965, with a board of trustees including the Presidents of Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke, and UMass. A year later, Franklin Patterson of Tufts became President of Hampshire, with Charles R. Longsworth, Assistant to the President at Amherst, assuming the Vice-Presidency.

Since that time, about half of the college's 1970 staff has been chosen from nearly 1000 applicants.

BUILDING ON SCHEDULE

According to Director of Development and Public Relations Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, construction is currently about 90% on schedule with no problems anticipated.

In fact, Hampshire was originally slated to open - and indeed could have opened - on a limited basis for the present school year. About eight months ago, however, the college reached a decision consistent with its overall philosophy: fearing that a "rush job" might penalize Hampshire's first students, it decided to wait until 1970.

Constitution

On October 1, 1969 a Constitutional Convention composed of senators and class officers passed a new Student Government Association Constitution with one dissenting vote. This new document includes a Bill of Rights for students. Many students may assume that these rights are already in effect but if they are they exist only by force of precedence. After consideration of the constitution by the Board of Trustees these student rights will be law and cannot be jeopardized.

Paragraph five, Section two of Article II which reads that the Student Senate "will provide for the constitution and the regulation of area and residence government" is not an usurpation of powers as some area and dorm government officials maintain. The Student Senate has been approving groups' constitutions for years now and any fear that the student government is out to curb dorm and area government is unfounded. Repeatedly, the Student Senate has encouraged dorm and area government and has gone to great lengths to see that it functions for the students.

Class government has been eliminated from the new constitution and it provides for the "regulation of uniform financial and operational policies of the class administrations" (Tuesday's Collegian was in error on this paragraph). A majority of the class officers endorsed this statement and a Class Administration Act will be written by a joint committee of senators and class officers.

One of the most significant changes in the new document is Article III which provides for a popularly elected Student Body President. This official will speak for the students on matters of grave importance and will carry with him the full force and prestige of a duly and directly elected chief executive.

This constitution is a sound piece of legislation. It was written for students. It is not an attempt by the Student Senate to take power. Who is it being taken from? You, students, are student government. To look upon the Student Senate as a body fixed in its membership and ideology is incorrect. The intention of this new document is to solidify our rights and to grant us control over our social regulations. The new constitution states that the student courts will enforce only student passed rules. This does not mean no rules. The student government is responsible enough to adopt many of the existing regulations which appear in the student handbook.

In order for this constitution to go into effect at least 40% of the entire student population must vote in the referendum this evening (6-9 p.m. in the dorms and 9-5:30 p.m. in the Student Union Lobby for Greeks and commuters) and 2/3 of that 40% must vote yes on the document.

I urge every student on this campus to consider this document seriously. The student government has done its job, now the student body must speak. Approval of the new Student Government Association Constitution will be a great step forward for student rights. I urge its passage.

You and Unions

The Nixon administration has said that a 4% unemployment rate is acceptable in its fight against inflation. Well, it may be acceptable to the millionaires in the cabinet but it is revolting to the unemployed worker and his family. Such an attitude is also dangerous to the college student who can't find a job when he graduates. Starvation is unacceptable.

Inflation does need to be controlled, for price increases are ruining widows, unskilled workers, and people on fixed incomes. The answer to inflation is not to be found, however, in throwing these people out of work and cutting back government aid to oppressed minorities.

Tight money serves only to restrict economic and technological advances. It also deprives students of the means needed to further their educations.

The administration has rejected price and wage controls as a means of fighting inflation. Certainly they are fascistic. However, it is a sordid fact that union wage hikes have contributed to the present economic mess. The administration should fight inflation by attacking one of its major causes, the greedy, grasping unions.

Cost of living raises are necessary, since a man has a right to a decent living. However, the greedy demands of unions in the past few years, such as 32 hour weeks and $9.50 an hour contracts, have benefited a small segment of the population while shafting the consumer and the white collar worker.

The unions, once the hope of liberals and civil-rights advocates, have become ogres. Their tight entrance requirements and membership qualifications serve to exclude Blacks from skilled jobs and to keep the labor market tight; hence inflation.

Their vigorous support of the Vietnam war is in part based on their desire for a tight labor market. It is not union men's sons who die in Asia; they are protected from the draft as essential workers.

Union Newspapers constantly scream that corporate profits are rising. Unions want a share of the money. Yet these profits are the result of technological advances and new business methods pioneered by college graduates who studied and sacrificed to get the jobs and incomes they command. The unions demand a share of profits which are the result of other men's skills and sacrifices, while union workers have not increased in skill and work less hours.

Sadly enough, union demands are usually met; prices rise to meet wage increases, and the consumer suffers, as does in fact the average union man. His union leaders, however, crow about the increases they win for their workers, increases which hurt the economy and the working man, but benefit the union oligarchy's power and prestige.

President Nixon ought to break the power of the unions, as President Roosevelt once broke the power of big business over the American people. If unions were forced to respect the nation's needs and the welfare of the citizens, inflation would decrease.

There is something inherently wrong with a society in which plumbers earn more money than teachers, and where union members are deferred while grad students die in Asia.

The introduction of more automation into the economy and a vigorous anti-exorbitant wage increases policy by the government can for the unions to act responsibly and thus remove one major cause of the inflation which is so dangerous to society, and especially to young people just starting out in life.

Inflation may not be as glamourous an evil as racial discrimination or Vietnam, but, if you are soon to be married or are going job hunting in June, you ought to think about inflation and try to stop it at its origins.

Guests in Life

What we have to contend with is an attitude - an attitude brought about by the system, and conditioned into men's minds. Sometimes I think that imaginations have been systematically conditioned out of existence. (Free University City people said no).

That attitude -- What's it like? It's definitely masochistic - definitely fatalistic. The dome on Orchard Hill is gone - Why?

The species - Bacchus Destructus - the destructive drunk. He can be identified by the lack of anything to do in his own interests. He can be heard constantly chanting the Fug's song, "Nothing". He is bleeding from the hands and feet, crucified by the system. He is a cornered rat, striking out at anything and everything. He is "Nowhere Man". Everyman?

The last symbol of Free University City is gone, the others by natural causes, this one maliciously destroyed by a sad product of the system - "The Budweiser Suicide Freak." Did they know what the symbol stood for? Did they know of the attempt to bring fertilization to their all too long sterile minds.

We are preparing to live. Isn't that it? Isn't that the crux of the problem? We are in job training now (4 yrs.) The job is life. That's the attitude "From the Other Side" - isn't it? - too often accepted blindly by our side.

The attitude is that of the landlord. We are guests in his house, we have no rights, no powers. We are guests in Amherst (witness the fight of the Tent City People), we are guests in the University (this is the attitude that the "Budweiser Suicide Freak" uses as his rationale for apathy.)

The Dome on Orchard Hill was destroyed Saturday night October 4th., while several Hill residents watched boldly from their balconies. These residents are yet another phenomenon of UMass. - the "Apathetic Chicken-Heart." This species includes the Family of the Bacchus Destructus, but is much larger, generally comprising the majority of the student body. The two combined, however, are instrumental in preventing all attempts at change, and readily accept their guest status in this University.

The attitude - Can it be changed? Since it is learned or conditioned through the system, it seems that the institution must change before the attitudes of the people within that institution can change. Oh but what a vicious circle! How can the institution change when the people within it, are not strong enough to reject the conditioning long enough to change it, and the ruling body of that institution is not willing to give decision making power to its members.

The domes of Free University City are gone, but the climate for change still exists. The time for change is now, the need for mass involvement is now. Participation in the October 15th Moratorium will show whether masses of students can break from their conditioning, or that they have, tragically enough, accepted guest status in life.

STEVE STOIA

Filth, Dirt, Hair!

After four years at UMass., I still retain some measure of the enthusiasm I had when I was a freshman. When I came here, Southwest, and the rest of the campus was composed largely of cleancut, clean, neat, and earnest students, who like myself, were here to get an education, and were glad of the chance. Today it seems that the majority of the students have no interest in anything but competing in a contest for weirdest looking student.

It would also seem that a student's thoughts reflect his manner of dress. It may be that the truth is the other way around, but I cannot imagine any parent teaching his child to behave the way some of our 'mature, intelligent, young people' do in this environment of freedom.

I work at the snack bar in Southwest, and I have seen some of the most childish public behavior it has ever been my misfortune to observe. These so-called mature people seem to have nothing better to do with their creative imaginations than to dream up new ways to mess up their trays and the areas around them. Their main pleasure seems to be to make life miserable for the students who have to clean up after them.

Naturally I have not wasted all this space just to condemn the morons who can't behave like adults in public. My real complaint is the filth these same students leave all over the campus. It is to me, disgusting to walk along and find empty beer cans, bottles,paper, and assorted garbage scattered all over campus. This attitude is also found in those 'concerned students' who founded and built the Free University City. The FUC was totally destroyed as of last Saturday at least, but those responsible for erecting it are doing nothing to clean up the mess that has been left. In fact, the area used in the production of the domes, an area right next to some dorms, has never been cleaned up since the original domes were built. I would suppose our intellectually oriented liberals consider this task of cleaning up their own mess as below them, and fit only for dull-witted UMass maintenance men. This is a typical attitude of this type of student.

I, for one, feel that the University should withdraw any plans it has of donating space to the fuc until that pile of trash is entirely removed from University property. To go back to my initial sentence, I have noticed that along with an increase of 'hippies' on campus, has come this increase in filth. It would seem to me that those who have no respect for their own persons also have no respect for other persons and property, and should not be allowed to run around loose.

Greek Pledge

Much has already been written, and doubtless more will appear in print, before the October 15th moratorium becomes a reality. As yet, however, relatively little has been heard from that segment of the campus knows as the Greek community. Our brotherhood feels that the question of the merits of a political policy has little significance in this instance. Of greater concern, is the fact that a course of national action is causing a scarce human resource, known as American lives,to be wasted. We can no longer passively allow this war to continue. In agreement, the brotherhood of Phi Sigma Delta wishes to actively commit itself to the support of the October 15th moratorium by pledging its time and its members.

Harrison Highlights Beatles Newest

By LOUIS DIMONACO

The Beatles have rolled along, year after year, album after album, and the tendency has been to assign one talent to each member of the group. That is, Lennon and McCartney write the songs, or at least sign both their names to the copy. George Harrison is thought of as T.H.E. guitarist, and Ringo's contribution, by no means small, is his ability to set down one of the finest drum accompaniments in the music business.

In their latest release, ABBEY ROAD, this categorizing does not hold. A few changes occur, the most outstanding of which is Harrison's display of his song writing ability. "Something" and "Here Comes the Sun" confirm what was brought up in the previous album, THE BEATLES, through "While My Guitar Gently Weeps" and "Savoy Truffle". Harrison is not only "getting better all the time," but he's now damn good.

Although Harrison's songs from "Love You To" through "Within You and Without You" were good, they were not good enough, in comparison to the other cuts by Lennon and McCartney.

Harrison has been writing songs since Meher Baba knows when! He has now arrived and "Something" is decidedly the best cut on the album, (never in my wildest dreams did I think I would agree with anything TIME magazine said).

This phenomenon points out more than Harrison's matured talent, it demonstrates Lennon and McCartney's inability to write a song for ABBEY ROAD that amounts to "Something". In fact, nothing since "Hey Jude" is worth the money investment (speaking of Jude, whatever happened to this song as far as cutting it for an album has continued to happen to songs like "Get Back" and "The Ballad of John and Yoko").

The Beatles are not on the dive but rather their individual interests are shifting (at least they appear to be shifting). Lennon is playing better guitar, Harrison is writing better songs, and McCartney and Starr are working unusually well together.

ABBEY ROAD is interesting. There are still those irritating songs such as "Maxwell's Silver Hammer" (the child of "Rocky Raccoon") that dot the Beatles' album. ABBEY ROAD is certainly worth getting into, but you may discover that you need a little help from your friends.

Artist to Visit SU Display

Friday, October 10, the University of Massachusetts will host artist Gordon Goetemann, a selection of whose works is now on display in the Student Union Reading Room.

The public is welcome to meet with the artist Friday afternoon in the Reading Room for an informal discussion. Time permitting, Goetemann will also be available Friday evening to discuss his works.

The thirty pieces now on display in the Reading Room are from the artist's Celestial Flow Series, a title which may serve as an indication of the intuitive and free-flowing process employed by Goetemann. The exhibit includes works in pencil, colored pencil, cray-pas, and silk screen. It will be in the Reading Room through October 19.

Mr. Goetemann, who received his B.F.A. and M.F.A. degrees from Notre Dame and the State University of Iowa, has to his credit several one-man exhibitions as well as participation in a variety of group exhibitions here and abroad. He has taught at colleges and universities in several parts of the U.S. and in Canada, and was recently involved in a three-month European Lecture Tour.

Text of Proposed Commuter Government Constitution

ARTICLE I

The Name of this organization shall be the Commuter Assembly.

ARTICLE II

The purpose of this organization shall be to represent the interests of commuting students at the University of Massachusetts.

ARTICLE III

All undergraduates not living in University residence halls or fraternities/sororities shall have full membership and voting privileges in the Commuter Assembly.

ARTICLE IV - Officers

Section 1. There shall be an Executive Council composed of eight members to be elected at large, and three ex-officio members who shall be those Commuter candidates receiving the highest number of votes in the fall Student Senate elections. Ex-officio members shall have full voting privileges but shall not be counted in determination of a quorum.

Section 2. Elections to membership in the Executive Council shall be held in conjunction with the fall Student Senate elections in a manner prescribed by the Student Government Affairs committee of the Senate.

Section 3. Officers - The following administrative officers shall be elected from the membership of the Executive Council in a manner to be determined by the Executive Council.

a. Chairman. The chairman shall be the Presiding Officer of the Executive Council and of the Commuter Assembly.

b. Secretary. The Secretary shall keep all records of the Executive Council and of the Commuter Assembly and shall be responsible for all written correspondence.

c. Treasurer. The Treasurer shall disburse all monies and shall keep all financial records in accordance with the wishes of the Executive Council and the Commuter Assembly and pursuant to R.S.O. policies.

d. Information Officer. The Information Officer shall be responsible for the publication of due notice of all meetings of the Commuter Assembly and shall be responsible for all public communications.

ARTICLE V. Meetings

Section 1. Executive Council. Executive Council meetings shall be held on a regular basis to be determined by agreement of the Executive Council. Emergency meetings may be called by the Chairman or by agreement of a majority of the members of the Executive Council. Executive Council meeting shall require one (1) day public notice in the campus newspaper.

Section 2. Commuter Assembly. There shall be at least one general meeting of the Commuter Assembly each semester and at such other times as deemed necessary by the Executive Council. Such meetings shall require seven (7) days notice. The Executive Council must call a meeting of the Commuter Assembly within fourteen (14) days but not sooner than seven (7) days after receipt of a petition signed by at least fifty (50) members of the Commuter Assembly.

ARTICLE VI. Finances

Section 1. There shall be no dues.

Section 2. The Executive Council shall be authorized to expend, by majority vote, an amount, to be specified by the Commuter Assembly, for any single purpose without the direct consent of the Commuter Assembly.

Section 3. The Commuter Assembly shall establish a contingency fund from which the Executive Council may expend monies on programs or actions supported in principle by the Commuter Assembly but which have not been specifically allocated by the Commuter Assembly.

Section 4. The Commuter Assembly shall directly authorize expenditures for programs or actions deemed by the Assembly to be of general benefit to its membership.

ARTICLE VII. Advisor

The Advisor to the Commuter Assembly shall be the Office of the Dean of Men.

ARTICLE VIII. Recall

Section 1. Any officer of the Executive Council may be removed for cause upon receipt of a petition bearing the signatures of five hundred (500) members of the Commuter Assembly. The Executive Council shall then direct the Student Government Affairs Committee of the Student Senate to conduct an election to fill the resultant vacancy.

Section 2. Any action of the Commuter Assembly may be reconsidered by another meeting of the Assembly provided that a petition bearing the signatures of one hundred (100) members of the Commuter Assembly requesting same be submitted to the executive council. This petition must be submitted within two (2) weeks of the original action and the Executive Council shall call another meeting of the Commuter Assembly as prescribed in Article C, Section 2 of this Constitution.

ARTICLE IX.

Amendments to this constitution may be considered at any meeting of the Commuter Assembly duly called by petition requesting such action in accordance with Article V, Section 2 of this Constitution. A 2/3 favorable vote shall be required for passage of such amendments.

ARTICLE X.

Ratification of this constitution shall require the approval of 3/4 of those voting in a referendum to be held in a place accessible to all members of the Commuter Assembly and conducted under the supervision of the Student Government Affairs Committee of the Student Senate. Ratification shall be effected upon final approval by the Student Senate.

SCAT Asks for Student Help

The University of Massachusetts community's first student co-operative association has issued a call for help.

Student's Cooperative Association Today (SCAT), has incorporated as a non-profit organization and has begun planning a program for cooperative housing and other coop ventures. It has leased a building -- the old graduate house at 382 North Pleasant St. -- and plans a cooperative residence there that will also be an International House for foreign students.

SCAT needs help in two main areas, according to director Richard Meier, UMass graduate student in education. It needs more members and it needs volunteer workers. The organization is run by the members, each membership costing $10 and carrying one vote. One person may buy as many memberships as he wishes but there is a limit of 10 votes per person.

In addition to money, SCAT needs people to help, Meier said. Volunteer typists, painters and other workers are needed, along with anyone who has had coop experience or contacts with architects, foundations, federal agencies or similar areas.

Manager of the coophouse will be Michael Hagerty, a graduate student at the UMass School of Educations Center for International Education. He is working with a committee of people from that center and the University's Office of International Programs on the International House Plans.

Aiding SCAT is an advisory committee that includes graduate and undergraduate students and such University staff as Associate Dean Arthur C. Gentile of the Graduate School, Ben B. Seligman, director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, and Isidore Silver, lawyer and business administration faculty member.

Memberships, offers of services, requests for information and all other contacts with SCAT may be made by mail to SCAT, 58 Shumway Street, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

TIME

The longest word in the language?

By letter count, the longest word may be pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanoconiosis, a rare lung disease. You won't find it in Webster's New World Dictionary, College Edition. But you will find more useful information about words than in any other desk dictionary.

Take the word time. In addition to its derivation and an illustration showing U.S. time zones, you'll find 48 clear definitions of the different meanings of time and 27 idiomatic uses, such as time-of one's life. In sum, everything you want to know about time.

This dictionary is approved and used by more than 1000 colleges and universities. Isn't it time you owned one? Only $6.50 for 1760 pages; $7.50 thumb-indexed.

Connolly Joins Military Science Dept. After Serving as Middle East Attache

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

"It's a pleasure and privilege to be here. I want to be a part of the University and make a contribution to the community."

Colonel George I. Connolly is the new Professor of Military Science at the University of Massachusetts and this is one of the things he had to say about his new job.

Connolly is an officer of 27 years service in the Army who came to UMass in August to replace retired Col. Joseph A. Bohnak.

A native of Massachusetts he was an ROTC graduate of Harvard, class of '42, where he received his bachelor's degree in foreign languages. Commissioned as a second lieutenant in the field artillery Connolly saw action in World War II's African and European campaigns with Gen. William Westmoreland (then a Lt. Col.).

Col. George Connolly

After the war Col. Connolly attended and taught at the artillery advance course school at Fort Sill, Okla., went to Korea, later served at the Command and General Staff College and with the United Nations peace keeping organizations.

Just before coming to UMass, Col. Connolly had been a military attache in the Middle East.

Asked just what he hopes to accomplish while PMS here the Col. stated: "As an ROTC graduate myself I have always been interested in the program. I am interested inworking with cadets and young officers and want to contribute something to the youth of Massachusetts."

"I have run across UMass officer graduates throughout my career and they carry a tremendous reputation in the Army," he stated.

Col. Connolly says that though he hasn't yet had much exposure to the University campus, his first impression has been "impressive."

Looking back on his own career the new PMS feels a "combination of things" have prepared him for this job. He pointed to his undergraduate work in foreign languages his masters degree in business administration (Tulane 1962), extensive combat service, instructor's duty at the U. S. Army Artillery School and his political-diplomatic assignments.

What about the advantages and disadvantages of his military career? "It's been all advantages as far as I am concerned," he stated. There are certain disadvantages such as family separation which one just automatically "assumes" when beginning such a career Connolly added. "It's been extremely rewarding and very active. It has filled the complete spectrum of activity."

His most rewarding experience? "The tours of duty where I have had the privilege of teaching and serving in active units with young Americans," the Col. said.

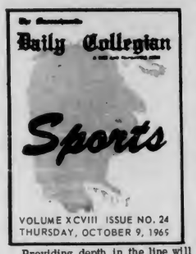
Redmen on Road, Face Tough B.U. Squad Saturday

Terriers Have Looked Impressive, Victors over Colgate, UVM, Harvard

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

A popular topic of conversation in the Beantown these days is the Boston University football team which owns a perfect 3-0 record, which is coming off of an impressive 13-10 conquest of Harvard and which hosts the UMass Redmen Saturday afternoon at Nickerson Field at 1:30.



First year coach Larry Mariaux's Terriers raised a lot of eyebrows when they opened the season with easy victories over Colgate (20-0) and Vermont (27-7). Curious observers hinted that BU might be a sleeping giant, waking up in '69 to raise havoc with its opponents.

Hints, however, were not enough to favor the Terriers over Harvard, and they entered last Saturday's contest as underdogs. In a great defensive effort in which it limited the Crimson to 100 total offensive yards, BU came out of the fray as the victor and now stands as a bonafide New England grid power.

The defensive unit has given up only 17 points thus far this fall. BU opponents have managed a low of 414 total yards on offense, broken down into 239 passing yards and a scant 175 on the ground.

Providing depth in the line will be Jay Dixon, a 6'5-230 junior at end and Gil Holloway, a 6'5-260 senior at tackle.

Linebacking duties are handled by the experienced senior trio of 6'3-215 Dick Devore, 6'-220 Fred McNeilly and 6'3-230 Pat Hughes. Hughes is coming into his own at the middle spot while McNeilly and Devore are consistent performers on the outside posts. Reserve strength here appears slim.

The Terrier cornerbacks are outstanding and represent the team's strongest area of performance. They are seniors and two-year lettermen Bruce Taylor, 5'11-185, and Fred Barry, 5'10-185. Barry led BU with five pass interceptions in '68 and is regarded as a pro prospect.

Taylor, on the other hand, is "BU's All-American". He earned a spot on last year's U.S. Football Coaches' Association All-America squad and is the team leader in kickoff and punt returns.

Rounding out the secondary are safeties Jay Norris, a 5'11-180 junior, and John Dwinnell, a 5'11-185 junior. Lack of experienced backup help is a shortcoming of the BU secondary.

The Terrier offense, though unspectacular, is consistent and efficient. It has picked up a total of 935 yards, 574 of which have come on the ground. Passing has accounted for 362 yards.

Calascibetta, 5'9-190, is a very diversified performer. He can run with the ball, catch it and last season he came through as BU's quarterback for the final two games. He has gained 211 yards thus far in '69. Capehart, a 5'11-175 speedster, is in his first year of starting duty and has responded with 137 yards in three games at 4.2 yards a carry.

Rafalko was the leading Terrier rusher last fall with 534 yards. He picked up 128 of them against UMass and currently leads the backfield with 214 yards. Depth in the backfield is scarce.

The probable starter at quarterback will be 6'2-175 junior Pete Yetten, who was outstanding in the second half against Harvard. So far this season he has completed 14 of 27 passes for 215 yards and three touchdowns.

Should Yetten falter in any way, soph Sam Hollo, 5'11-180, will enter the contest as his replacement. He started against Harvard but had difficulty getting the ball to his receivers.

Two juniors in their first season of action are the ends. They are Frank Jewett, 6'1-195, and Dave Whitcomb, 6'-165. Also seeing game time at end will be junior Glenn Williams, 5'11-170.

The tackle spots belong to 6'2-230 John Dorris, a senior, and 6'1-225 Darryl Hill, a junior. Experienced relief help here is provided by Mark Tortora, a 6'2-215 junior.

BU has won three straight games for the first time since 1954. On the contrary, the Redmen haven't lost to the Terriers in Boston since 1960. Whichever of these two streaks holds up will be decided on Saturday.

Harvard's Frank Champi Quits, "Could No Longer Respond"

Frank Champi, the quarterback who came out of nowhere last year and gave Harvard football its finest 42 seconds, has quit after two games this season.

"I could no longer respond to playing football," the 20-year-old senior said Wednesday. "I kept asking myself why I was playing. I wasn't doing it for publicity, or for pride, or for the thrill of victory . . . I can't take the game seriously any more."

Champi was a back-up quarterback last year, having played only 23 minutes going into the final game of the season with Yale. Against the Bulldogs he came off the bench in the second quarter with Harvard trailing 22-0.

He passed for three touchdowns, including two in the last 42 seconds of the game. Then, with no time on the scoreboard clock, he capped the performance by hitting end Pete Varney for the final two-point conversion and a 29-29 tie.

"I came back this year because I felt obligated to the team," he said. "I tried like hell, but I couldn't do it. I think I was hurting the team . . . I have been a nervous wreck. I just can't get myself psyched for football any more."

This year Champi had started both Crimson games, completing seven of 18 passes for 83 yards and rushing 16 times for a net loss of 65 yards.

"It wasn't me out there," he said. "I was just going through the motions."

FRANK CHAMPI

"I feel the biggest loser is Frank Champi," said Coach John Yovicsin. "Frank could have made a definite contribution to the squad. We'll miss him as a person as well as a player."

Yovicsin said after Saturday's 13-10 loss to Boston University he had decided to switch senior Dave Smith to starting quarterback. But since Champi missed practice Monday and Tuesday he probably did not know about the demotion, Yovicsin said.

Scavone, Bush Honored by 'M' Club, Fusia Looking to Conference Games

In the fitting setting of the Newman Center, UMass football coach Vic Fusia called on the loyal partisans to "have faith in this team because we have just got to put it all together to be a good team." And this was a fitting analysis of Delaware game films shown at the weekly Varsity 'M' Club luncheon yesterday.

Scavone, the junior scatback, is currently team leader and fourth leading rusher in the Yankee Conference with 195 yards while leading the Conference in scoring with 24 points. Scavone gained 100 yds in rushing against Delaware, including touchdowns of 66 and 14 yards, caught three passes for 41 yards and returned two kickoffs.

Bush a sophomore, who was converted to defense this year after playing most of his career at quarterback, is termed by Fusia, "a fine athlete and fast developing into an excellent defensive ballplayer." Bush intercepted two Blue Hen passes Saturday, both in the second half, while being tough on pass coverage as he was instrumental in holding Delaware to only one completion in the second half.

Fusia in addition to viewing the films and diagramming key plays from the past week, gave reasons for his constant shuffling of personnel in the first three games. "I want to give as many sophomores as possible the chance for experience, so that they will be ready for the stretch of Conference games. Our goal is to bring that title back to UMass."

Assistant Coach Milt Piepul, in his analysis of this week's tough foe, Boston University, said, "This is the soundest B.U. team in several years. They are a team that just comes right at you. B.U. has jelled into a real fine football team, and they have done it without anything fancy but just straight power football."

Defensive back BILL BUSH and halfback PAT SCAVONE received awards at the Varsity 'M' Club luncheon yesterday. Scavone gained 100 yards against Delaware, while Bush intercepted two Blue Hen passes in the second half of last Saturday's game. Coach Fusia still displayed confidence as he hoped to put everything together against Boston University this weekend.

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

Despite the loss of some outstanding members from last year's undefeated team, first year freshman soccer coach David Jekanoski is extremely high on the prospects of his squad this season.

Among those who he cited as being instrumental to the success of last season's freshman booters and who have since graduated to the varsity squad are Lindo Alves, halfback from Ludlow; Augie Cahleno, halfback from Ludlow; Joe Cernlawski, halfback from Granby; Paul Slack, fullback from Bedford, N.Y.; Dick McCarron, fullback from Ludlow; Gary Hart, fullback from Braintree; and Greg Hamilton, goalkeeper from Amherst. According to Jekanoski, these boys are seeing considerable action with the varsity team.

Nevertheless, the freshman coach is very high on some boys he will call upon to fill the void. They include: Bill Leary, goalie from Westport, Conn.; Dave Oullette, fullback from Ludlow; Ed Doherty, halfback from Braintree; and Jeff Hague, left winger from Westport. These booters have looked particularly good in the 2-1 exhibition win over Amherst and in scrimmages against the varsity.

CHICAGO (APO - Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie ordered 2,000 members of the National Guard to active duty in Chicago yesterday after street battles the night before between police and some 300 young radicals.

Ogilvie said in Springfield that Brig. Gen. Richard T. Dunn, who has been in Chicago for two days, recommended that the Army-affiliated guard be activated as a result of the fighting that took place on the Near North Side.

The governor said he talked with Mayor Richard J. Daley about the plans of the radicals Tuesday and Gen. Dunn was asked to observe the situation.

A spokesman for Ogilvie said Dunn's recommendation was based on the violence Wednesday night and the fear that more disorders might occur.

Troops would remain in their armories throughout the city until Dunn ordered them to deploy, a Guard spokesman said. The command post was in the East Chicago Avenue Armory.

Daley praised police for their restraint during Wednesday's hit-and-run skirmishes with young persons who stormed out of Lincoln Park following a bonfire and rally.

One SDS group, the Weatherman, sponsored the Lincoln Park rally for 400 persons which ended in two hours of street skirmishes between police and club-carrying, helmeted youths. There were 65 persons arrested and 34 persons, including 21 policemen, injured.

The Weatherman's rival for control of SDS and recruitment of many unaligned young radicals, is Revolutionary Youth Movement II which sponsored a demonstration Thursday at the U.S. courthouse where eight political activists are being tried on charges of crossing state lines in a conspiracy to incite riots.

About 150 persons were in the courthouse plaza but there were no incidents.

Twelve women, including Bernardino Dehrn, 27, former inter-organizational secretary of SDS, were arrested Thursday after they rushed police during a demonstration near the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

Police said about 60 women marched six abreast at Balbo Drive and Michigan Avenue and refused police orders to disperse. Officials said the women, many of whom wore helmets and carried clubs and chains, planned to march to an induction center.

Small Voter Turnout Kills Constitution

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

It appeared late last night that the proposed S.G.A. constitution would not gain the 40% student body approval needed for it to become law.

While the Bill was leading in most voting areas by a healthy margin, the light voter turnout last night, Senate spokesman Dawn Dudash said, would probably mean that the referendum would not carry the needed number of student votes.

The Senate plans to schedule another referendum in the "near future, because this turnout and the percentage of yes votes among the voters compels us to run it again, and to hope for a larger turnout."

In other election day action, the commuter and project 10 totals, compiled early last night, appear on page 2 of today's paper. Other results will be printed next week.

Fac-Sen Silent On Moratorium

By ALAN SIROTA
Faculty Affairs Reporter

The Faculty Senate, in a meeting held yesterday afternoon, refused to consider any further resolutions dealing with the October 15th Moratorium.

After preliminary remarks were dispensed with, there was a motion from the floor to suspend regular business in order that two motions involving the Moratorium could be introduced. The justification for proceeding out of order was that there might not be time to consider the proposals later in the meeting and that the Senate should discuss the issue before being tired out by other less important matters.

The motion failed to gain the necessary two-thirds majority. Senator Tager of the History Department next made a motion to suspend regular business for the purpose of dealing with a proposed resolution concerning academic freedom. The resolution stated that " . . . classes will be held on schedule or the instructor should provide alternate classes at his discretion", casts some doubt upon the individual faculty member's right to hold or not to hold classes at his discretion, and that the Faculty Senate should "reaffirm the right of faculty members to suspend classes", leaving to them the decision whether to reschedule particular classes. The Senate defeated the motion to consider the motion.

Senator Hernon of the History Department moved to suspend regular business to consider an issue of "higher law." Following is the resolution that he wished to have considered:

The majority of the Faculty Senate of the University of Massachusetts expresses its opposition to the war in Vietnam. While as individuals we differ in detail, this body agrees that the most reasonable plan for peace is the early and complete withdrawal of all U.S. troops. We join in a united and continuous national effort to bring our troops home.

Moratorium Plans Set, Support Grows

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

Plans for the October 15th Vietnam Moratorium are in their last stages of organization, as support from various campus groups continues to mount.

Complete details for the day's events appear on page two of today's MDC, along with the names of individuals in charge of them.

Partial results from the school-wide poll on the Moratorium indicate over whelming student support and a lesser amount of Faculty support for the day of protest.

As of noon yesterday, 3545 students favored cancellation of classes on October 15th, and 43 students voted to have classes on that day. 2829 students said that they would observe the moratorium anyway, regardless of official University policy, while 1113 students said that if classes were held they would attend.

On the Faculty side, 294 voted yes and 107 no on support for the moratorium, while 293 voted yes and 94 no on attending classes if the University did not move to cancel them on the 15th.

Meanwhile, the UMass government department announced yesterday that it will hold a discussion program on the war Wednesday morning at 7:00 a.m. in Thompson 104.

Two series of discussions will be led, one on the Moratorium itself, and one on the war. At 8:00 a.m., the group will move to the 6th floor lounge in Thompson for coffee, donuts, and an informal rap session.

The Vietnam moratorium committee will sponsor a teach-in Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Cage. The meeting will cover the Vietnam War from historical, social, political and economic perspectives.

Teach-in speakers will begin by presenting the historical background of the war, discussing the rise of Diem, his overthrow, and the rapid evolution of the present Thieu-Ky regime.

This will be followed by an analysis of the implications, especially on the U.S. domestic situation, of continued involvement in the war.

Among the speakers will be Milton Cantor of the History department, Dean Allen of Mental Health, Robert Lowe of economics, Dr. Gage of the health department. There will be a question and answer period following the speakers.

Members of the Counseling Center Staff invite interested students to visit the Counseling Center, Room 243 Whitmore Hall, to discuss the War or other concerns on Wednesday. The staff will host individual and group discussions starting anytime throughout the day.

The Board of the United Christian Foundation voted at a recent meeting to lend the Foundation's support to the Vietnam Moratorium on October 15. The UCF will participate by remaining open and functioning as a coordinating area for the various activities taking place during the day on campus and in the community. Anyone who has questions regarding the day's program should call 545-2661 on October 15.

The University Library has set up a reading collection on Vietnam and U.S. military commitments for a "Read-In" in connection with the Moratorium. The books are located in Room 613 with the college catalogs, just over the front door of Goodell Library.

The collection is an expansion of a reading list developed by Professor Ronald Mation for a debate workshop last summer on U.S. military commitments. The Library will also be a center for a Vietnam Write-in to Congressmen on October 15. Lists of Massachusetts Congressmen, the towns, the cities, and the counties each represents, and of the heads of House and Senate committees most directly concerned with the war will be provided.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

PRAGUE (AP) - Czechoslovakia barred its citizens from private travel to the West yesterday in the most drastic tightening of frontier control since the 1968 Soviet invasion.

The cutoff went into effect at midnight Wednesday and caught hundreds of travelers at airports and frontier crossings and brought dismay to the Czechs and Slovaks.

Relatively free travel to the West started even before the ouster of Stalinist Antonin Novotny as president in 1968 and had been one of the last freedoms remaining after the Soviet invasion.

SAIGON (AP) - American battlefield deaths in Vietnam last week dropped to 64 - the lowest toll in nearly three years - and official sources said yesterday if the downward trend continues President Nixon might be prompted to speed up troop withdrawals.

At the same time, it was disclosed that U. S. and South Vietnamese forces have pulled out of the once forbidding A Shou Valley, seized last spring after a controversial battle for Hamburger Hill. Lack of enemy activity was given as the reason.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Awarding the Medal of Honor to four Vietnam heroes, President Nixon said yesterday he is "confident that the challenges of peace will uncover great heroism in America's younger people.

Nixon said that on an occasion like the one at which he honored four Army men, "we dedicate ourselves anew to bringing the peace which we all want, so that men like this, who have this element of greatness within them, may become heroes meeting the challenges of peace. . ."

BOSTON (AP) - The Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts endorsed the Oct. 15 Vietnam Moratorium day yesterday.

Chairman David E. Harrison, a state representative from Gloucester, said he will appear at a rally on that date on Boston Common, the largest scheduled in the state.

He urged Massachusetts residents to send "hundreds of thousands of letters" opposing the war to their representatives in Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said yesterday the U. S. military command in Saigon has received new orders covering battlefield operations and placing highest priority on Vietnamization of the war.

Laird said policy is against public release of specific battlefield instructions but he generally described the American tactical approach now as one of "protective reaction."

The defense chief told a news conference the U. S. Command no longer is under presidential injuction to maintain maximum pressure on the enemy, a phrase often used by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the Supreme Court nomination of Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. yesterday, opening the way for a spirited struggle on the floor.

The vote was 10 to 5 to climax a two-hour closed debate over Haynsworth's business dealings.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soviet submarines are making regular cruises into the Indian Ocean, Navy sources say.

U. S. Navy strategists cite this in support of their thesis that the Soviets are widening their global operations and seeking to exert influence in an area that is virtually a naval vacuum.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Jackie Gleason melted off 61 pounds - reducing his 54-inch middle to a mere 42-using a diet of meat, eggs, fish and "all the booze I wanted."

The beefy entertainer is down to 209 and claims, "If I lose anymore the television viewers will think I'm dying."

Newman Center Modified

By BARBARA HOBART

According to Monsignor Power, two major changes have taken place at the Newman Center in the past few months.

Restoring the original beauty to the chapel, the eight-and-a-halfton granite altar was moved forward to permit celebration of the mass at the high altar with the priest facing the congregation. This was done by a system of slings and rollers lifting the altar and rolling it forward. Consequently, a new wall was built downstairs to support the altar in this position.

Modification of the patio to a new study lounge will include a decor of a nautical motif. The present study lounge will then be used as a TV and record room.

Open Season on College Professors

Baseball moguls buy, sell and trade their players in the spring. Football does the same in the fall. Everybody is aware of these deals but very few people are aware that colleges and universities have a similar practice.

Open season on professors and college administrators occurs every year during the summer break. During this period regents and other state-level educationofficials travel all over the country - often on limited expense accounts no less - to attend scheduled trading sessions in such dreary, drab places as New York City, Reno, Las Vegas and Miami Beach.

At one of these exacting hard-working conventions, over a drink and under a floor show, in the characteristically businesslike atmosphere of heavy smoke and loud noise, I recently viewed thisoperation at close hand.

"If present negotiations are successfully completed, UF will open in the fall with a number of new faces," Irving Gilch, head negotiator for the Florida Board of Higher Education, told me.

Curious to get more details I asked for and was granted permission to sit in on one of the trading sessions.

"Listen to reason, Myrt. UF's football team and Vassar's softball team are both in pretty good shape. Now doesn't that mean both coaches are expendable? What do you say to a straight swap?"

"Not yet, you mean, Here, have another drink. Why not start an all woman football team. Just think of the novelty of it."

"I am thinking of it." Wartburg gulps down his double scotch. "I still think Vassar would have trouble raising a team, though."

"Come on, Myrt. There must be dozens of girls dying to play football. Look at that chorus girl. Second from the end. Who's she remind you of, eh? Joe Namath, right?"

"I can't picture her with a Fu Manchu, Irv. Besides, she doesn't go to Vassar."

"That's not my problem, friend. Sign her up if you want her."

"I still dunno. 'Babe' Rhubarb is an awfully good softball coach. UF wouldn't be interested in a shuffleboard coach would they?"

About this time some of the other traders began drifting over.

"I hear you've been having trouble with panty raids and the SDS," challenged a dapper regent from California, drink in hand.

"What have you got in mind?" queried Gilch.

"We'll trade you Hayakawa of San Francisco."

"For what?"

"It's too uneven. Add something else."

"We'll throw ina crop dusting plane and all the accessories if you'll throw in 100 cases of Gatorade."

"Any chance of getting Gov. Reagan and 500 National Guardsmen?"

"Might be, if you'd be willing to let go of Servomation and Century Tower."

"I'll take it into consideration. If they've fixed the tower though the deal's off."

"Mr. Gilch, I am Ivor Vorushav from Moscow University. We hear you have a Marxist professor teaching at UF."

"Mr. would be very interested in trading a capitalist professor and all our right-wing students for your professor and all your left-wing students. Some Politbureau member has been stirring the taxpayers up over these capitalist radicals in our university."

"Step over to the bar, Mr. Vorushav. I think you're the man I've been looking for."

Those arrested were charged with aggravated battery, mob action and resisting arrest. The others were permitted to continue the march. Seven policemen were slightly injured.

Leaders of both SDS wings predicted 5,000 to 15,000 young persons would attend the demonstrations planned through Saturday in Chicago.

Wednesday night the police deployed 300 men in Lincoln Park and kept reserve units in nearby buildings until the youths suddenly ended their rally marking the anniversary of the death of Cuban revolutionary Che Guevara.

At least half the persons in the park ran through the Near North Side Gold Coast district, smashing car windows, glass fronts of restaurants, tossing bricks. There were three major confrontations with police, one of them near the fashionable Drake Hotel on Michigan Avenue.

The focal point of the planned protests is the conspiracy trial. Three of the defendants attended the Lincoln Park rally.

Border Drug Checks May be Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) - United States and Mexican officials concluded a second day of consultations Thursday on operation intercept with no reports of progress.

However, there were growing indications that persistent Mexican complaints about American handling of the border drug control program were beginning to have an effect.

While Washington officials were maintaining a strict silence, reports from the border indicated American customs agents had taken teps to make the car-by-car inspection procedures less time-consuming.

Sources at Laredo said the agents received permission to stop searching under hoods of automobiles at their discretion. Del Rio sources said agents were no longer required to search under trunks or hoods. These disclosures were followed by a statement from Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, that some solution to the problems caused by the operation might come in a day or two.

Aiken, the ranking Republican in the Senate, said he had been informed of the impending change by a State Department source.

Aiken, with Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, expressed concern that the project was dissipating Mexican American good will.

Mansfield called Aiken's report "good news". Official word on the changes in policy, if any, is expected Friday when the two sides hold their final session here. A joint communique was to have been issued late Thursday but it was delayed when the delegations decided to hold a third day of talks at the Justice Department.

National Jetliner Hijacked to Cuba

The pilot of the DC8, which was bound for Miami, reported he was over Texas when the flight was diverted to Havana.

The FAA said the plane landed at Havana at 7:59 p.m. EDT but there was no immediate information on the hijacker or his weapon. Among the 63 passengers aboard was San Diego Padres pitching coach Roger Craig.

National Airlines said one or more baseball players were also aboard but they were not immediately identified from the passenger list.

The hijacking was the third in two days and the 40th commercial airliner forced to Cuba this year.

Nixon Assailed at Paris Peace Talks

PARIS (AP) - North Vietnam and the Viet Cong again assailed President Nixon at the Paris peace talks Thursday, charging he is keeping the Vietnam war going. The United States responded with a list of steps Nixon's administration has taken to seek peace.

The Vietnam war "has now really become Mr. Nixon's war," said Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, chief of the delegation of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge rejected the charges and called on the other side to stop making one-sided demands and get down to genuine negotiations.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said the "Communist speeches were clearly aimed at influencing the Oct. 15 anti-war demonstrations in the United States."

North Vietnamese Ambassador Ha Van Lau told the 37th plenary session of the talks that the Nixon administration is following "in the rut of the Johnson administration's failure in Vietnam," and said Nixon "has resorted to demagogic maneuvers and vague arguments in an attempt to cope with all criticism of his administration's policy toward the Vietnam problem."

Lodge said that since taking office, President Nixon has sought "to bring a rapid end to the war through a negotiated settlement.

SWAP Changes Image; Applications Taken in R.S.O.

In its effort to reform the University the SWAP Committee reformed itself.

SWAP was instituted to train R.S.O. groups in the use of office machines. It developed into a student-faculty workshop,oriented toward a single topic such as curfews or academic affairs. SWAP delegates were sent as representatives of various supporting R.S.O. groups.

This year's SWAP will be different. Any student may apply directly to the SWAP Committee. Delegates will be selected on the basis of their ability to contribute to specific discussions.

The general theme of SWAP will be the University of Utopia. Around this theme problem-centered groups will be formed. The role of the University in society the Free University, military-industrial complex on campus, university government and university fiscal policies will constitute some of the topics. Student and faculty delegates will participate in discussions according to their interest and experience in the topic. After a day of meetings the groups will collaborate and report their experiences.

Besides discussions, a variety of personal and communal experiences will be planned to facilitate communication. It is likely that these experiences will not be conducted in the usual SWAP medium.

SWAP will convene on November 14th at the Oak & Spruce Lodge in Lee, Massachusetts. SWAP is a three day convention attended by 75 selected students and an equal number of administrators faculty, legislators and trustees. SWAP is an opportunity to exchange information and ideas; to improve communication inside and outside the University; and to foster change inside and possibly outside the University.

Students will be provided with room, board and transportation for a fee of $5,00. All other delegates must pay $35,00.

Student s may suggest faculty delegates by offering nominations in the ballot box in the Student Union lobby this week.

Reference is made to Mr. Paul Hornstead's story appearing on the first page of the COLLEGIAN of October 8. It is reported that the Spanish-Portuguese department has passed a resolution "to dispense with 'business as usual,' and will cooperate by not holding classes as scheduled on the 15th."

Student Senate Ok's Dorm Autonomy

In action late Wednesday night, the Student Senate approved a plan which would allow residence halls to establish self-determination with regard to open house, prior to the formal implementation of that policy by the Board of Trustees.

The Board, at a special meeting in September, approved unanimously the principle of self-determination, but at the same time postponed implementation pending receipt of a residence hall security plan. It is expected that such a plan will not be received and considered by the Board until their November meeting. However, a number of residence halls, including Dwight House (which declared autonomy last year and was enjoined by the student General Court of Justice from violating the policy) have declared the present policy terminated and have gone autonomous now.

The Senate's action sought to satisfy the concerns of the Board about security, provide for those residence halls, like Dwight, who feel that they cannot wait, and provide some degree of protection from administrative retaliation.

After disposing of a number of alternate proposals, the Senate in its final action, conceded the need to meet the Trustees' concerns by approving a bill sponsored by Vice-President Olken and Senator Thiffault which requires those residence halls that wish to go autonomous prior to the November Board meeting to present to, and have approved by, the Senate Student Matters Committee a security plan which will have to speak of such things as prevention of theft, financial responsibility for replacement of stolen items, and means to exclude uninvited outsiders.

The Student Matters Committee, which has since the Board action of September 22nd already met twice on the question of security, and has set a subcommittee on Residence Hall Security to work, is expected to meet Thursday night (last night) in order to formulate a series of broad guidelines for security, taking into account the concerns of the Board as related to the committee by the Senate officers and the administrators who attended the September 22nd Board meeting. These guidelines will then be publicized in order that those residence halls that wish to go autonomous at this time may proceed with the submission to the Student Matters Committee of a security plan which speaks to the appropriate issues.

The Senate open house legislation of last Spring (which provided for residence hall self-determination), together with the Senate action last Wednesday, is expected to forestall any action by student judiciaries against houses who go autonomous at this time, particularly since the General Court action enjoining Dwight from violating the present policy expired last May 30.

Prior to passage of the Olken/Thiffault bill, the Senate rejected a proposal which strongly recommended to houses that they not go autonomous at this time, but that if they do, they also adopt adequate security measures to insure safety of property and the exclusion of uninvited persons. Had that plan been adopted, it would have left the entire matter in the hands of the house governments. It was largely because the Student Matters Committee would have more information available to it about Trustee desires that the Senate decided to place the matter in their hands rather than those of the fifty-odd house governments. It is hoped that the final action will go further to placate adverse Trustee reaction by insuring that valid security questions are adequate.

Contemporary University Attracts 70 Students

Through a program called "Contemporary University", 70 UMass undergrads are doing independent research and study on a wide variety of problems. The subject of their work includes topics such as: penal system reform, urban education, environmental problems, HEW poverty programs, high school curriculum development, decision making in universities, community action research, the effect of military teaching training on psycological development, etc. Because of the relevant nature of this work, many Contemporary University students would like to share their ideas and information with the general campus community, as well as with other students in Contemporary University.

The Contemporary University Program will hold at least two seminars each week, discussing topics developed by C.U. participants. Tuesday, Oct. 14 Michael Darman and Mark Buck will talk about the problems of Appalachia. They have just returned from a week long trip through W. Virginia, and have many first hand observations to relate. The seminar will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the Field House Lounge.

Because of Peace Action Day, only one seminar will be held next week. Regular announcements of future seminar will appear in the Collegian, and dates of seminars will be posted in the Union and in the Contemporary University office, Rm. 5-B, Montague House.

Nation's Support of Moratorium Expands

(AP) - Next Wednesday's moratorium to protest the Vietnam war is growing into a nationwide affair that will involve persons of all ages including politicians, businessmen and professional people, as well as the students who started it.

Plans for the moratorium - meaning suspension of normal activities- include rallies, speeches, marches and religious services from coast to coast, culminating in a 5 p.m. candlelight procession around the White House.

Indications are that some form of activity connected with the moratorium will take place in every state.

Sponsors plan to have 45,000 marchers in the Washington procession. They will be led by the widow of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Seventeen senators and 47 congressmen have expressed support so long as the moratorium is "peaceful, lawful, and nonviolent." Some plan speeches against the war in the Senate and House. Congressional staff members plan a vigil on the Capitol steps.

Plans to keep the House in session all night on Oct 14 as a symbol of protest against the war were disclosed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., who said enough speakers have been lined up to talk through the night.

Names of war dead will be read at hundreds of ceremonies, including one in New York's Wall St., where financial workers are scheduled to take part along with Mayor John V. Lindsay and former Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric.

The executive board of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, representing 1,100 Reform rabbis , endorsed the moratorium. Its president condemned President Nixon's recent press conference statement that he would not be affected by protests.

Dozens of colleges cancelled classes, or announced that absences would not be penalized. But Chancellor Glenn A. Dumke of the 19-campus California State Colleges prohibited dismissal of classes and ordered disciplinary action against any professors who disobey.

Three New England governors endorsed the idea - Democrats Kenneth Curtis of Maine and Frank Licht of Rhode Island and Republican Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts.

In Sacramento, Calif., students planned a 24-hour vigil outside the home of Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan. Gov. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma declined to appear at college rallies, but Sen. Fred. R. Harris, D-Okla., the Democratic national chairman, accepted.

Pregnant Girl Scout Goes to Court

NEW YORK)AP) - The case of the pregnant Girl Scout was thrown out of court Thursday, when a federal judge refused to suppress a gag poster depicting a uniformed little mother-to-be beside the motto "Be Prepared."

Judge Morris Lasket took official note that the smiling, golden haired girl on the poster has her hands clasped "above her protruding, clearly pregnant abdomen," and he said the Girl Scouts of America understandably took "violent exception."

But Lasker ruled that the reputation of the organization is so secure that the poster can't cause irreparable damage.

The posters were produced by the Personality Posters Mfg. Co. Inc., and last Aug. 4 the Girl Scouts sued the firm for $1 million damages and asked an injunction banning the posters.

Asst. Dean of Students

"Closeness to Students is a Matter Of Personal Preference and Position"

By LILIAN CHEAH
Staff Reporter

How many students would try to imagine themselves in a university administrator's shoes? To a new UMass dean, the two roles are not diametrically opposed.

Daniel Fitzpatrick has been on the job since the beginning of the fall semester - the job of being an assistant dean of students. He "backed into" his present career during the years he was "searching around" for a profession.

He started out as an economics and marketing major at Cornell University, but one year in the "hard world of business" after graduation persuaded him that business was too impersonal.

The next time he went to Cornell was as a graduate student in the School of education, this time majoring in student personnel administration. His very satisfying experience as a dormitory counselor during his junior and senior undergraduate years convinced him his change of course suited his taste.

Fitzpatrick comes to UMass from the University of Michigan, where he worked in the Student Affairs Office. Although the alienation problem at UMass is less than at Michigan, Fitzpatrick is concerned about it. An easy solution, he believes, can have no foundation in reality. The new dean believes also in the cooperative efforts of the student community and the administration toward a goal of a mutually acceptable answer.

"Closeness to students is a matter of personal preference and position," he said. He believes that many administrators might like to be closer to students but cannot, by the nature of their duties and the pressures on them. For sure, the "in loco parentis" concept of administration is now obsolete. The deans now serve a primarily educational, rather than a parental function, he says.

As for the manifestations of a liberal campus, Fitzpatrick is not opposed to the establishment of co-ed dormitories, such as that planned for Greenough House in 1970. He approves of the innovation, as long as all the participants in the project, particularly the residents, reach an understanding of their goals and rules. He feels the same way about the Free University City domes - as long as the community receives the project, he backs it himself as a means to help reduce alienation.

Fitzpatrick hopes that his new position will permit him to do some counseling of students. He accordingly serves as a sort of main counselor to the residence hall system and the housing office, and to the Student Union operations staff.

In his personal growth, Fitzpatrick has been engaged in a rebellion against alienation, as evidenced by his exit from the business world. His main contribution toward bridging the gap between student and administrator might well be through personal discussion.

Pentagon Report on R.O.T.C. Urges Flexibility by Armed Forces, Universities

By ROBERT M. SMITH
Special to the New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 - A panel of educators and military officials, set up by the Defense Department to take the first broad look at the Reserve Officers Training Corps, is putting the finishing touches to a report recommending greater flexibility in the program.

The 65-page document asks, among other things, that both the armed services and the universities be more flexible in considering changes in R.O.T.C.

Although the program has recently been controversial on several campuses, the report - which has not yet been submitted to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird- is "quite a bland" document, according to one of its authors.

The special committee, appointed in June, consists of six educational administrators, two generals and one admiral. The members were asked not to discuss the report until its public presentation, which the Pentagon says will probably be within the next two weeks.

DOCUMENT BEING 'STAFFED'

The official reason given for their silence was that the document was still being "staffed" - being given final minor revision and submitted to the appropriate Defense Department officials.

One of its authors said, however, that the silence could be related to a fear that the report might be "too soft" for the taste of a Congress interested in being firm with student dissidents, not in providing a "flexible" approach to R.O.T.C.

The report, which is subject to revision, calls on the universities to take a more active hand in the planning of R.O.T.C. curriculum. It mentions, for example, the possibility of looking for ways to teach military courses within the academic curriculum - military history in the history department, for instance.

It also calls for taking strictly military instruction - such as tactical training - off the campus and fitting it into the summer training that R.O.T.C. cadets and midshipmen receive at military bases and on ships.

STRUCTURE OF PROGRAM

The report recommends that the universities and their faculties take more of an interest in the program and that they work to correct deficiencies rather than withdraw academic credit for its courses or force the program off the campus.

In urging both the services and the universities to be more flexible, the report mentions the way R.O.T.C. programs are set up on campus. The authors ask, for example, whether relations between a university and its R.O.T.C. program should be handled by a faculty committee or by an administrative officer.

The committee was commissioned by Mr. Laird to look into the Army, Navy and Air Force programs, and its members were selected by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Reserve Affairs, Roger T. Kelly. In the past, the only studies of R.O.T.C. have been done by the individual university services.

Tables Turned on Teachers at Columbia

Many freshmen who registered for courses at Columbia University yesterday used a guide that graded their teachers more severely than the students may be judged after classes start on Thursday.

"My instructor got an F," said Stanley Fertig, a freshman from Hillside, N.J., "but his section was the only one left that I could fit into my schedule."

A majority of the freshmen at the Morningside campus yesterday were clutching copies of the blue guide, which is published by the student-run Ted Kremer Society, together with the official course catalogue as they signed up for classes.

The dean of freshmen, Henry S. Coleman, said he thought the guide gave "a very good insight." Because of this he made arrangements for each of the 850 freshmen to have one.

B-MINUS CONSIDERED GOOD

John Russo, a student from Bridgeport, Conn., said that when he went to sign up for the "really good sections" of the Western Civilization course earlier this week, he found that they were already taken, but he wound up with an instructor the guide rated at B-minus - "I was really lucky." Mr. Russo said.

Prof. Ralph F. Hefferline, who got a failing F for his instruction and for his course in human personality last year, said this week: "Some people took it as a joke that I got such low marks, but I don't. I have reworked the course completely, but now I'm wondering if I'll have any students at registration!"

Prof. Donald J. Dewey of the economics department was awarded a D by the guidebook for his course in micro-economics - for what the book said were his "very dull, unorganized, unrelated lectures" - but he said he would not change his course this year because of that.

"I have my own views on what is to be taught, and I teach it that way," Professor Dewey said. "Presumably the kids have their own opinion of the course, and this (the guide) lets them air their views."

Harvard's "Confidential Guide" is familiar to generations of alumni who know it as the "Confy Guide," and Columbia had a less extensive critique for six years before the present edition came out in April.

HARVARD BOOK UNASSISTED

The Harvard book is published by the independent Harvard Crimson, while this year's Columbia Guide was aided by grants and facilities of the university.

Howard Selinger, a junior who is president of the Ted Kremer Society, the publishers, said his group went to Dean Hovde last year to propose a larger, more thorough and more comprehensive guide than those that had appeared in previous years.

"All opinions in the book represent what the students who took the courses thought," Mr. Selinger said.

The criticisms are generally not so acerbic as those in the Harvard guide, but there are examples of wit.

An evaluation of a course on the politics of foreign policy decision-making by Prof. Roger Hilsman, who was a State Department official in the Kennedy Administration, says some students thought it should have been titled "What Roger told Jack and Bobby," but nevertheless gave it a good billing.

At least one freshman yesterday feared that the severity of the students' judgments might be reciprocated by their instructors later on.

"I've got to live with this guy for a whole year, so please don't associate my name with his," said Mr. Fertig, after he expressed disappointment over his F instructor.

At 9 p.m. on Monday, WMUA's "Focus" will take a look at the approaching October 15th "National Moratorium," a day's time meant to be set aside for contemplation, debate, and protest over the Vietnam War. Ken Mosakowski's scheduled guests on the program include Sam Johnson, Tony Teso, Bob Solomon, and Wanda Segar--some of the organizers of Moratorium activities at the University of Massachusetts.

Another Way

Would you please "forward" this letter to the 1980 President of the United States.

Dear Mr. President--1980

To let you know, Kevin will not be available for killing in 1980. Kevin is my son, aged six (6), my only son.

It may seem early for such notification but then it probably seemed early to the parents of Skip Kelly in 1963. Skip was only twelve (12) at the time, a happy, carefree sixth grader.

Skip's parentd used to watch him play Little League Baseball and think, the war will be over by the time he's old enough to be called into the service. It can't possibly last that long. (Didn't World War II end in less than four years.) The Vietnam war didn't end (will it ever?) and sure enough six short years later Skip was called. He was eighteen years young at the time. Skip gave the war and it's meaning a lot of thought. (How much thought can an eighteen year old give a situation like that?) He could have saved himself the trouble. He was psyched from the start by old traditions, "The American Way," the waving flag, mom's apple pie, etc. Also by a lot of self righteous conservative editorial writers, and old veterans' who used the old cliche, "I went when called in the 40's now it's your turn."

Skipwent. He went proudly but with many misgivings. Less than six months later Skip went again, for keeps. An attack at dawn by the Viet Cong, a quick skirmish, as they say, and Skip was no longer. Read it fast and on to the funnies and sports pages. What a war, what a world!

Skip was dead, so were his parents, but in a different way, a worse way. Skip was only dead physically, his parents were dead emotionally and spiritually.

In one of his last letters, Skip expressed bafflement over just what he was doing in Vietnam. Could you have explained it to him, could any of us? I think not.

Again Mr. President of 1980, I remind you; Kevin will not be available for slaughter in 1980. There has to be another way.

By RICHARD MORIARTY
Plainville

"Can You See..."

"Oh, Say can you see', "My country tis of thee, sweet land of liberty", is what I was taught to sing. That this is the land of the free and the home of the brave" and that all men are indeed created equal, is what I was taught to believe.

Now ain't that a gasp. To the black in the United States freedom is non-existant. It is a variable that has virtually no substance. THE MAN, you have systematically enslaved and exploited my people. You have told us we weren't men, raped our women, changed our names, and starved and killed our children. You have stripped us of our pride, identity and history. You have taken the land we built, danced the dance we danced, and sang the song we sang, and we made millions. Then you tell us to work, dance, and sing some more. You have denied us the right to work, obtain a decent education, learn of ourselves, vote, buy food, sleep, and for that matter, live.

You have coerced us to take smack and codein. You have killed us. You have made us kill ourselves.

Then you have the nerve to say you're sorry. With the same stroke of the pen you pass the Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation, the Compromise of 1850, the 15th and 16th amendments, and the Civil Rights Bill. Then you tell me to celebrate the Fourth of July! Now I'm supposed to be free.

Today, you send me to Vietnam to kill someone I've never seen before. You killed Malcolm, Medgar, Martin, and those three innocent little girls. You have attempted to make Eldridge, Huey, Stokley, and Rap extinct. You have killed more people in the Orangeburg Massacre than you did in Boston.

In elementary school you conditioned me every morning to stand up passionately, place my hand on my heart, and sing "Oh say can you see?" But that's where you messed up, because now I can.

That's what happened and what is happening.

Why It Should Stop

I am an active member of the M.L.K. council and more specifically related to the beautiful efforts being made to stop the Vietnam War via the October 15th moratorium. It is for these reasons that I was sitting at the moratorium's literature table in the student union today, October 7.

As is my custom, I ask all the people that come to the table if they have any questions pertaining to the moratorium or otherwise. Most of the students show sincere enthusiasm for the efforts being made and ask questions as only concerned persons can.

I have, however, received several rebuffs in the form of quips such as, "What the Hell do you think you're doing?" and "You won't accomplish anything." Up until today I have been able to take these statements in my stride, being resolved to the fact that all students, let alone people, don't share my views. Today a girl shattered my conscience comforter and made me realize how truly perverted man can, and in some instances has, become.

"What are you going to do with the 500,000 troops when they are brought home? The unemployment rate is already too high." an indignant coed stated. This may seem, as, at first, it did to me, a simple sentence of no consequence. But just think of its far reaching implications.

The picture becomes even darker when you add to the first, another statement. 'Then you'd rather have the boys over there dying.' I asked? "No, not really," she said. She doesn't want the boys dying, yet she doesn't want them brought home. What does she want? Please, tell me what do you want?

Return now to the implications of her combined statements and try to figure out what she, consciously or unconsciously, does want and is doing.

She told me she didn't want the boys dying, but she immediately contradicts and defeats this statement by saying that the boys can't come home because it will hurt the economy. (This reason I find rather dubious, as the United States has, in the past, survived the return of the troops after previous wars.) She backs up her belief of not allowing the soldiers' return by not supporting the moratorium. What she is doing, in effect and practice, is one of the reasons which makes the Vietnam war so completely wrong and unjust. This coed and millions like her are putting money above and before human life; and it is ghastly and frightening, and IT MUST STOP!!

So please, please, think about what is really happening and where it might lead us and why it should stop.

Work for peace!

Meal Tickets and Lines

Hampshire Commons (D.C. #5) was designed with four lines to serve the students of T-1 and surrounding low-rise dormitories. However, there is often a line of students that extends outside the commons. Is this because Southwest took the brunt of tripling and over-crowding? Partly. But there is another, more ridiculous reason.

Let us assume that a student from Southwest has an 11:15 and a 12:30 class. He must eat lunch between 1:10 and 1:30 when the food is taken away. Our student arrives at Hampshire Commons at about 1:15 and has to stand in line until 1:25 or later. What is he thinking? Possibly, he imagines the second helping of food he will be deprived of. More probably, however, he is thinking about the idiotic reason why he has to stand in line: ONLY ONE OF THE FOUR SERVING LINES IS BEING OPERATED! That's right, Oswald, one. The other three lines were shut down at about 1:00 (if they were all running to begin with).

It is now 1:30 and the sweet ladies are using nasty language because they have to work ten extra minutes to get the line through. Where are all the workers from the other three lines? They are in the dining room on the far left of D.C. #5, eating their dinners.

One might ask: "If you don't like the service, why did you buy a meal ticket?" In Southwest, even seniors have to buy a meal ticket. It must be great to know that you can force people to stand in line.

A Foible of Our Times

Ouce upon a time in the jungle there lived an innocent young antelope. Only two days ago, her mother was killed by a lioness in order to feed her cubs, for such was the law of the jungle. Now the young antelope was alone in the world and in her innocence she was not afraid. She bounded along the plains passing zebras and giraffes and elephants and waving happily to each and they waved back. She soon came to the end of the plain and the jungle lay before her. She has never been in the jungle so she decided to walk through it.

Passing the laughter of monkeys and the screeching of birds she could not help feeling happy at the new wonders of the jungle. Suddenly the ground under her feet gave way and she found herself in a slimey kind of sand. She struggled to get out but her efforts only served to make it more difficult to escape. She started to scream and soon a hyena and a monkey came to the edge of the pit.

"I don't know , replied the hyena. Do you have any suggestions?"

"Well, the monkey said, we could get a rope and hang it from that branch overhead."

"I don't know. That branch doesn't look very strong," replied the hyena.

"How about using that other branch?" said the monkey. "It looks much stronger."

"I think we should forget about using branches; it's too dangerous", replied the hyena.

"Maybe we should throw her a rope from the side and pull her out", offered the monkey.

While the hyena and the monkey were intellectualizing about the rescue, the helpless young antelope was being sucked deeper into the quicksand until it was up to her neck.

"That's a good idea," stated the hyena, "but how shall we go about it? Should you be in front of me or I in front of you?"

"I think you should pull in front of me", replied the monkey, "for you are stronger."

"Yes," said the hyena, "and for that reason I feel I should be behind you."

"I don't understand your reasoning", stated the monkey.

"My leverage will be better behind you than in front of you", replied the hyena.

"But if you are in front of me," said the monkey, "she will get out quicker."

"You forget", said the hyena, "that the tension of the rope must be sustained and if you are behind me this is impossible."

"That is a minor consideration; the stronger you are, the closer you should be to the antelope" said the monkey.

"Nevertheless, I insist that I be behind you" replied the hyena.

"You fail to understand what I am saying", stated the monkey.

"I understand only one thing and that is that you are mistaken", replied the hyena.

"Please, let's not argue", said the monkey, "there must be an easy solution."

While the hyena and the monkey were weighing the merits of a good rescue, the young antelope had disappeared under the quicksand. Such was the law of the jungle.

UMass Lincoln Center Completion Due Jan.'70

By JULIE JONES

The Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center is scheduled for completion January, 1970, according to the Manager of the Center, Mr. W. T. Grinnan. It will be adjacent to the current Student Union.

World renowned Marcel Breur and his associate, Herb Beckhand, are the architects. They also designed the H.U.D. Headquarters in Washington, D.C., The Whitney Museum in New York City, the U.N.E.S.C.O. Headquarters in Paris and the St. Francis Church in Muskegon, Michigan. The ski town of Flaine, France was designed by Breur and Robert Gatje.

The Breur and Beckhand plan of efficiency and convenience are obvious throughout the Center. The lower two levels are underground and highly oriented toward student activities. This area will include the book store, barber shop, post office. It encompasses two-thirds of the total structural space.

Four floors of hotel accomodations for 220 persons are planned to include vending alcoves on each floor. Private phones, T.V., and baths are provided in each room.

The administrative offices, containing educational office and conference rooms for 1,500 persons will occupy two floors. Every conference room will have a completely equipped audio visual room.

The top two floors will provide dining and ballroom facilities. Open terraces, eighteen foot ceilings, and extensive carpeting are included. These dining areas will function as laboratories for students majoring in Restaurant and Hotel Management.

The interior design accounts for $1 million of the total $11 million which the Center will cost.

Form follows function in regard to the exterior design also. The windows are designed specifically for the needs of the room they service.

The Board of Trustees has honored the late Murray D. Lincoln, class of 1914, by naming the center after the founder of the Nationwide Insurance Company. President Kennedy named Lincoln to be Chairman of his "Food for Peace" task force which is still in effect. President of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., Lincoln was also a member of the first Peace Corps advisory board.

Support Grows Strong for 15th

Tito Craige, Amherst College '70, Vietnam Moratorium co-ordinator announced the results of a student referendum held on October 6: of 833 students voting, 86% (716) pledged to "support the moratorium and to participate in that day." Only 99 students would neither participate nor support the idea of a moratorium.

Along with this show of support for the October 15 anit-war action, the faculty of Amherst College is circulating a petition in favor of the moratorium and suspension of classes for the day. On the first evening, 55 signatures were collected. As with Smith College, the professors had agreed to reschedule their classes at a later date.

Renee Yuen, Smith '70, announced a candle light procession from the Fair Grounds to the memorial service at the Unitarian Church lawn at 7:00 p.m. in the evening. Citizens and students from Amherst will join Northampton in this culminating activity.

At Amherst College, Professor James Bierman of the Dramatics Arts Department has created a multimedia show with the theme "The Vietnam War" to be presented following the service, in the lobby of the Music Building at Amherst College. A student-created anti-war sculpture is also on display there.

The public is welcome to visit and attend the showing.

4000 students from all four colleges in the valley and faculty and towaspeople as well as Northampton Junior College students are expected to be canvassing the towns of Northampton, Amherst, Pelham, and Easthampton on the day of the moratorium. They will be asking citizens to join in the 4:00 Amherst peace rally on the Amherst Green and to send a post card to President Nixon asking for immediate and unilateral withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnam.

B.U. Medical Supports 15th

BOSTON (AP) - The faculty of the Boston University School of Medicine voted Wednesday to suspend classes Oct. 15 and also approved a motion favoring total withdrawal of United States forces from Vietnam within a year.

B.U. said a teach-in will be held at the student lounge Oct. 15 to mark the national peace day observance, and afterward some faculty and students will march to a mass meeting on Boston Common.

Plans Proposed for State School Financing

Across the nation, governors are busy endorsing the idea of a new federalism that would pump tax revenues back from Washington to the state capitols. But in Michigan last week, Gov. William G. Milliken proposed a different kind of federalism under which the state would assume full responsibility for financing local schools.

The two concepts are related. If Washington does indeed permit a flow-back of dollars to the states, a sizable amount can be expected to go to education. The states would thus become central points for channeling funds to the local school districts.

For the moment, this is not part of the Milliken plan. The proposal calls for substitution of a uniform statewide property tax for the present system of local school taxes, probably leading to a sharp rise in state income taxes to provide enough money for the local schools. The reform would require state constitutional amendments to allow the property tax and to restructure the state's education organization.

Fair Opportunity

The goal of the proposal is simple: to eliminate inequalities in local ability to pay which now make so huge a difference between rich and poor districts everywhere, despite a variety of state aid equalization formulas in effect in most states.

In Michigan, as in most states, local school budgets are growing because of increasing expenses for salaries, materials and construction; and more and more they are running into resistance by local taxpayers. Since most tax money already flows to the state and Federal governments on the basis of income taxes, the schools supported in part by property taxes, are hit hard. They are the only major expense against which taxpayers can vote directly and thus express their anger.

Dramatic Approach.

The concept of state financing was first proposed about three years ago by one of the country's leading school reformers, Dr. James B. Conant. He said, in effect that the only way to improve local decision-making on substantive educational issues was to divorce such issues from considerations of local taxes and bonds.

Although this approach is dramatic, it is not as complete a break with realities as it seems. The states are already deep in local school financing. In a few states - Hawaii, Alaska, Delaware and North Carolina - the proportion of local school funds provided by the state ranges from 70 to almost 100 percent. In 21 additional states, it exceeds 50 percent. In 1940 only nine states were above the halfway mark.

A year ago, speaking at Teachers College, Columbia University, James E. Allen Jr., then New York State Education Commissioner and now United States Commissioner, presented a persuasive account of the Conant plan, without giving it his official approval.

Dual Advantage.

Dr. Allen stressed among the advantages of the state-financed plan the ability to redistrict, not only for educational but for integration purposes. He pointed to the many places where the high schools are too small to offer a full range of academic subjects and to the many districts that are too large and unwieldy to permit responsive and cohesive administration. At present school-district boundaries are determined largely by the municipalities that collect the school taxes.

Moreover, Dr. Allen stressed that collective bargaining on teacher contracts, as it becomes the rule rather than the exception, leads to confusion and wasted effort, along with unhappy whip-saw effects between competing districts. This process involved hundreds of local boards made up of volunteer members, many of them ill-equipped for complex collective bargaining.

Inequity in System.

But the heart of the matter is the inequity of the present system. In New York State, for instance, the local expenditures per pupil range from $470. to $1,600. Even after equalization aid, large differences remain. And these differences are attributable to the fact that the amount of taxable property value behind each pupil ranges from less than $5000 to more than $200,000.

The first question posed by any proposal for state financing is: Will it lead to state dictation?

Part of the answer is again in existing conditions. Dr. Conant has stressed that when the local district is impoverished or has exhausted most of its financing possibilities, its local options, though considerable in theory, are extremely limited in practice.

More important is the fact that, under the existing system, state control is already a major factor. The state sets and enforces standards. Local boards are responsible to the state education authorities. Those who doubt this might remember that the state had dismissed three of New York City's Boards of Education since 1961.

This is not, of course, an argument for abdicating all power to the state. On the contrary, in order to make the state's fiscal responsibility palatable, there should probably be clearly stated legal safeguards to assure local districts of their rights of educational leadership and of effective appeal against improper interference.

Quite apart from the issue of control, there are other dangers to be considered. While it may be true that central bargaining for teachers' salaries would be more orderly and eliminate wasteful and coercive competition between unequal districts, it would also lead to bigger and more ferocious strikes.

Moreover, there would have to be recognition of the huge differences in working conditions, the relative difficulty of the job and even the cost of living. To put teaching in slums and in favored suburbs on a par would be as untenable as computing the educational needs for such diverse sectors on the same dollar scale of investment in staffing and equipment.

In the end, there remains a crucial issue to be faced: the unfortunate tradition of mediocre educational leadership at the state level. While there are exceptions, the very fact that state education departments are bureaucratic rather than operational in function and outlook has not put the premium on academic leadership. In those states where the state commissioner is still elected, he is often more committed to the party than to the schools.

Critical Situation.

Most serious, the state leadership, under pressure from upstate rural legislatures, has often discriminated against the cities, where, at least in the North, the school situation is most critical.

Dr. Conant was aware of these problems . He called for a rapid upgrading of the states' educational leadership. If this need is underscored, the Michigan plan could speed such reforms. Then, if the plan comes to fruition - large if local - school boards would be able to spend their energies on improving the schools instead of worrying about how to pay for them.

"Sophia's Myth" Smith Circus

A "Sophia's Myth" circus - that's what Smith College students would have us believe. They have chosen the theme for a benefit circus on campus honoring the founder of the college, Sophia Smith.

Smith was started in 1871 with her money and now the students are carrying on, with costumes and booths and games, for social betterment in her name.

Festivities take place Tuesday, Oct. 14 on Smith's campus. Costumed freshmen from the 35 houses at Smith will start the circus with a parade through the campus and adjacent streets. The booths, on the Chapin House front lawn, will be open from 1 to 5:30 p.m.

Greek myths will be the inspiration for the entertainment, witness: a dart game - "Thunderdarts!," and penny pitching - the "Mini-Discus Throw."

Food, billed as "fit for the gods," will be on sale for lovers of Greek legends with American collegiate appetites. Among the fare will be "Golden Apples of Hesperides" (candy apples), and "Ambrosia from the Fountain of Immortality" (make-it-yourself-sundaes). Mini-togas will be for sale in the "Olympus Creations" booth.

At "The Face that Launched 1000 ships" stall, polaroid pictures will be taken and an "Oracle at Delphi" will be on hand to make predictions and prophesies.

Other games, goods and items for sale will be offered. The junior class stages the annual circus to raise money for the Service Organizations of Smith, which in turn give funds and services to the local community. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

Construction Correction

Construction of the new fine arts building is not scheduled to begin until the spring. Construction of Tobin Hall, the new psychology building to be located where the tennis courts are behind Boyden, is scheduled to begin within the next few weeks.

Latin American Head Leads Dept.

The evolvement of the University of Massachusetts as a national center for studies in Latin American history is reflected by the off-campus activities of Professor Robert A. Potash, who served as Head of the history department in 1968-69.

This past week, Professor Potash, along with Professor Lewis Hanke, also a Latin American specialist in the University's department of history, as well as other scholars in the field from Yale, the Fletcher School and Georgetown University, consulted with officials of Hampshire College on the development of a Caribbean Studies Center.

In late October, Professor Potash will attend a Lincoln, Neb., meeting of the Steering Committee of the National Consortium for Latin American Studies. This seven-man committee represents over two hundred colleges and universities of several nations which have interests in Latin American studies.

In early November, he will present the principal American paper at the Third Meeting of U.S. and Mexican Historians, to be held at Oaxtepec, Mexico. The subject of the paper will be "Syntheses of Mexican History: the U.S. Writers." Meeting every ten years, the international congress was organized in 1949 by Professors Hanke and Silvio Zavala, the latter representing the Colegio de Mexico. The University of Texas was the site of the 1959 meeting, when Professor Archibald Lewis, currently head of the history department at the University of Massachusetts, served as Secretary-General.

In mid-November the Seminar on Argentine History at Indiana University will hear Professor Potash on the subject of "The Argentine Military."

The role of the military in the recent history of Argentina has been the historian's chief interest. His book, "The Army and Politics in Argentina, 1928-1945," was published earlier this year, and he will leave for Argentina in January to complete research on a sequel, which will examine military affairs in that country since 1945.

Wise Speaks

Dr. Donald Wise, former NASA geological scientist, delivered a comprehensive talk on the selection of the lunar landing sites for the Apollo space program. Photographs of various landing sites with their age profile, in color, were used to reveal the selection process used by NASA.

Revealing characteristics of the terrain of the moon provided a conceptual understanding of the meteorite bombardment effects and the earthquake and volcanic occurrences. The role of the Apollo program in supporting the experimental acquisition of data and investigation of the moon was discussed.

Finally, Dr. Wise stipulated the benefits of the lunar exploration program toward the enhancement of the scientific knowledge of the Earth and the universe.

Review
Restaurant Dissappoints

By SUSAN SCHMEID

Now being locally shown are two reasonably good flicks - "Last Summer" and "Alice's Restaurant". "Last Summer" by virtue of its title alone may sound like another surfing or "beachy" type film. However under its rather simple story line involving four youths and a seagull, there's a message - one concerning men's relationships with each other - the powerful versus the weak. The analogy used may not have been that subtle but it does work with an impact of disturbing cruelty and helplessness. There is also present in this film the bitter sweet humor of adolescence and sexual frustrations.

It annoys me to see in many films, as in this one, the kids involved depicted as being from the upper income brackets. Perhaps the producers feel this makes for more colorful interior shots. Despite this and some rather stilted dialogue in spots, "Last Summer" comes out as a film of some interest.

"Alice's Restaurant" is a flick that I frankly did not expect much of apart from a takeoff of Arlo Guthrie's little ballad of the same name. I was anticipating a happy slap-stick sort of film. Instead it very nicely departs from the supernical and sinks a bit deeper. It becomes very real, very relevant and Guthrie follows it through with perfect aplomb. It moves quickly, almost too quickly and you are left wanting to see more of what Guthrie with his quick little smile can offer.

This might well be called the "Year of the Foreign Student" at the University of Massachusetts. Several innovations have been in effect for the past six months which have smoothed the path of both the foreign students and the Administration, and engendered a more helpful climate for all concerned.

Last spring the Faculty Senate Committee for Foreign Students looked into the possibility of holding an Orientation Program for Foreign Students. The program was held this fall and was most helpful for the students. The major asset was the large number of American students who returned to campus early to lend a helping hand with the orientation and answer the foreign student's questions.

During the summer the New Friends-International Host Program was very active in contacting foreign students before they left home and answering their questions about life here in Amherst. These contacts were the start of many friendships, and many of the students were met by, and stayed with their New Friend for the first few days in Amherst. Many of the families then helped the students find housing, and combed attics and basements for furniture for the students' use. This program hopes to expand its activities for the following year, as both hosts and students were loud in their praise and appreciation.

The Graduate Senate made a small grant that enabled the Office of International Programs to establish a Foreign Student Emergency Fund. They also co-sponsored a dance with International Club recently and will do so again during the year.

International Club is making a vigorous start in expanding its programs. The year started before registration with a tea to welcome the new foreign students and there has already been a most successful picnic at Look Park in conjunction with the other International Clubs in the area. The emphasis this year is on Four College cooperation on interesting excursions in addition to the regular Wednesday evening meetings, 7:00 p.m., Prince House.

On October 22, in the Student Union Ballroom, at 8:00 p.m., the Undergraduate Senate will sponsor a reception for foreign students. President and Mrs. Lederle and officers of the Undergraduate Senate will form a receiving line to greet guests as they arrive. It is hoped that all those students who can will wear national dress, and that they will invite their New Friends - International Hosts and other friends in the community to attend.

Frat. Presidents' Association Declares Moratorium Support

At the weekly meeting of the Fraternity Presidents' Association the members declared their support of the October 15 Moratorium.

As the representative body of the University of Massachusetts Fraternity System, the presidents voted to allocate funds to help defray some of the costs that the Moratorium may incur.

Each fraternity and its membership will plan activites and take individual action on Wednesday, the fifteenth of October.

It is the contention of the Fraternity System that it will not be taking a "band-wagon" approach on its support of the Moratorium-the members want to reach the leaders of the United States through letters and news articles, and they are prepared to offer further financial and manpower support beyond the Moratorium of the fifteenth to achieve an end to the Vietnam War.

The Fraternities urge President Lederle to reconsider his stand and to call a halt to ALL ACTIVITIES of the University for the Moratorium.

The Fraternity System also urges other groups of the University Community to undertake actions that will express their concern for a matter that encompasses individuals that are not found in their immediate organization.

Graduate Research Center Set for Dec. 70' Completion

Construction of the new Graduate Student Research Center, started in May, 1968, is following its schedule closely and should not require extra time for its completion, according to Bob Hart, superintendent of construction for D. O'Connell's Sons, Inc. Completion date is set for December 1970.

Most of the laboratories will be situated in the lowrise section of the research complex while the 17-story tower will house classrooms and offices. The entire project will cost approximately $15 million, about $3 million from a federal grant.

Mr. Hart said his firm has done much construction work for the University, including Southwest Residential College, Morrill Science Center and Whitmore Administration Building.

Black Studies to Hold Teach-In

What relationship is there between The war, white racism, colonialism and the black demands for "Black Studies"? This will be the theme of a "Teach-In" by members of the UMass Black Studies Program on Wednesday the 15th. According to the committee, the purpose of the Teach-in, which will begin at 1:30 p.m. at Mahar Auditorium, will be "to educate the general university community to the goals and purposes of Black Studies in the proper context".

The program will include discussions of different aspects of Black Studies by members of the Black Studies Faculty as well as plans and recordings dealing with the question of racism and Black Heritage.

The Spanish and Portuguese department wishes to clarigy its position towards classes on Oct. 15. The official position of the faculty of these departments is that the matter of the Vietnam Moratorium was left up to the judgment and conscisuce of individual teachers. Teachers are not in any way to penalize students who wish to participate in the moratorium and were asked to make arrangements for instruction for those students who did not wish to take part.

Dichter Concert Memorable Affair

By STEPHEN WALT
Fine Arts Editor

Wednesday night, October 8, Mischa Dichter gave a memorable recital at Bowker auditorium. His program was arranged chronologically, beginning with a Bach organ prelude and fugue written in 1709 and ending with a Prokofiev sonata, written in 1942. Dichter seemed as comfortable playing one style as another. Each piece generated so much more excitement than the last, that Dichter found himself called back for an increasing number of curtain calls.

From the start, Dichter projected incredible musician-ship and involvement in the music. The program opened with Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D-Major, in which one immediately noticed the tremendous dynamic contrast which Dichter was able to obtain from the piano. Next on the program were two Beethoven sonatas: D-Major, Opus 10, No. 3, and F-Minor, Opus 57, "Appassionata". The former is a delicate work and exhibited the artist's fast and accurate fingers. It was played perhaps with more reserve that Dichter normally allowed. The "Appassionata", one of Beethoven's most popular sonatas, is a stormy and brooding work which showed Dichter at his most exciting. The display of virtuosity and emotion in the last movement was breath-taking; the audience literally needed the intermission to recover.

If possible, the second half was more exciting than the first. Dichter's genius for involving his audience was revealed from the opening notes of Brahms Six Pieces for Piano; he seemed most in his element playing romantic music. His liquid sound and fluid technique cast more moods than one would imagine possible from the piano, from light-hearted playfulness to heavy, intense passion. The program closed with the Prokofiev Sonata No. 7, Opus 83. The opening movement, marked Allegro Inquieto, showed the Demonic brilliance of both the composer and the artist. After a lyrical second movement, the piece closed with a brief, driving, frantic finale, bringing the audience to its feet at the last chord. After abashedly taking his third curtain call, Dichter again took his place at the piano for an encore, a short romance by Schumann, earning him two more curtain calls.

In an interview Wednesday afternoon, Dichter stated that classical music, like any other, has no relevance in and of itself; it is the responsibility of the individual artist to involve his audience and thereby give meaning to the music. Further, he said that campus audiences are his favorite, as they are most willing to become involved. His performance Wednesday night, and Thursday I'm sure, was a fitting aftermath to these statements.

UM Booters Face Iron Meet UConn Next

By RAY ESONIS
Staff Reporter

Coming off an important victory over B.C. last weekend, the varsity soccer team takes to the road this Saturday for a match with the University of Connecticut.

Coach Peter Broaca cites the next three games, against UConn, Trinity, and Rhode Island, as comprising the roughest part of the Redman schedule this season. All three tough University division teams present a formidable threat to UMass' chances of a winning record.

As far as UMass and UConn are concerned, Broaca states that, "both teams are evenly matched according to ability. The only advantage that might arise would be a result of UConn's playing at home."

The Huskies boast a hustling squad this year, and are better than their 1-3 record implies. They have lost to Vermont (5-4), Harvard (5-0), and Weslyan (1-0), while their sole victory came at the hands of the University of New Hampshire (3-0). Vermont and Harvard are two of the strongest teams in New England this season.

Connecticut has a big asset in John Sahnas. He scored two goals against the Redmen in last year's contest, and Broaca says it is imperative that Sahnas be kept under control. Another Huskie stand-out is goalie Donnie Smith, who is considered one of the best in New England at that position. UConn's Joe Marone, in his first year as head coach, has the nucleus to build a solid team. He was formerly soccer coach at Middlebury College, Vermont, where his success was well established.

Coach Broaca was pleased with last Saturday's 3-0 victory over Boston College. "I was especially pleased with our defense and midfield play," he said. "Our sophomores are really coming along, and the fact that we allowed only two shots in the second half proves that our defense was the key." Broaca praised John Mercury, Joe Cerniawski, Dick McCarron, and Gary Hart as big factors in the B.C. game.

In mentioning the offense, which in the past had been unable to score, Broaca stated that "juggling the lineup, due to injuries, was the prime reason why it had failed to jell. The defense, on the other hand, has remained relatively intact so far this year, and thus proved instrumental in last week's victory."

There was one sad note that came out of the B.C. win, which was the loss of co-captain Rich Meyer, possibly for the remainder of the season. Meyer's knee buckled during the first few minutes of play, and he had to be taken out. Otherwise, the squad is up to par physically, and is looking forward to the match with UConn.

UMass Travels to Beantown Growing Terriers Await

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

Before beginning the stretch run of Yankee Conference play, the UMass football team will have to contend with possibly their roughest opponent when the Redmen take on Boston University, at Nickerson Field in Boston Saturday. WMUA (91.1 f.m.) will broadcast the game with air time at 1:00.

The Terriers will be seeking to win their first four games for the first time since 1954 when they tangle with the Redmen tomorrow. And, B.U., rated in Football Weekly as being in the top 50 of the country, and probably either one or two in New England by the wire services, will be seeking to satisfy a homecoming crowd.

For the past two weeks, UMass has said they would be facing one of their toughest tests that Saturday. This week is no exception. Coach Vic Fusia says it this way. They have great personnel returning and are generally a very Coach Vic Fusia says it this way. "B.U. is one of the top teams we will face. They have great personnel returning and are generally a very sound football team."

B.U. was weakened somewhat with the news that starting offensive tackle Darryl Hall has been suspended for three games due to "dormitory disturbance". Otherwise the Terriers are in good shape, with their rugged defense and ball control offense intact.

UMass is also in good physical shape, with only one possible exception. Sophomore John Hulecki, who has been playing on both offense and defense, is a doubtful participant due to a back injury suffered against Delaware. Hulecki was being examined today to decide whether to take him to Boston. In his absence, Steve Parnell or John Decembrele would take up the spot on offense with Paul Toner filling in at defense.

The rest of the UMass lineup will be the same as the past three weeks. However, the starting lineup doesn't mean much if the last three games are any indication. For Fusia has been rotating personnel constantly during games and expects to do the same again this week. This will hold true of virtually every position including quarterback where Tim Adams and Ken Hughes will be alternated.

REDMAN RANTINGS -

It will be the first UMass game ever played on astroturf, the all weather playing surface installed at B.U. last year.

B.U. has not beaten a Redman team in Boston since 1960. Also, up until last year, UMass had defeated the Terriers five straight times, before essentially B.U. knocked off UMass at Alumni Stadium last year.

The Boston game will be a sort of homecoming for a large portion of the UMass team who are from Eastern Massachusetts.

B.U. plays in all five Yankee Conference schools, with only New Hampshire not being on this year's schedule.

Pro scouts are reportedly interested in a host of Terriers including linebacker Pat Hughes, and cornerbacks Fred Barry and Bruce Taylor.

A conference game to watch this weekend could be the Maine-New Hampshire clash at Orono. The Wildcats surprised a lot of people with a relatively easy win over Connecticut last week, while Maine began to live up to its optimistic pre-season predictions with a rout over Rhode Island. Also, Vermont, who may be tougher as the season progresses, takes on Rhody, after upsetting Northeastern a week ago.

Runners Meet UC at Home

By BOB JAYES

This Saturday morning, to the delight of all, the University of Massachusetts cross - country team returns after a year's well-hidden absence to meet the University of Connecticut on the new UMass course (located behind WOPE, where the old course was).

The Redmen have trained long and hard for this meet, their first Yankee Conference encounter of the season. Co-captains Ron "Ron" Wayne and Leo "Ratso" Duart will lead the charge, as an expected crowd of 3 or 4 cheer them on. Tom "Speed King" Derderian will hope to once again run a close third, building an impenetrable nucleus as he will beat off opponents with his guitar (or is it his singing?).

"Dirty Dave" Evans, coming off two outstanding races, hopes to mesmerize all with another display of courage and valor, together with some smiling and waving. "Big Lar" Paulson, the team's hatchet man and fast dresser, should keep the score low with another fine performance. "Dancin' Don" Dunsky and Bruce "Old Marvin" Blackburn will be hot in pursuit of the front men, hoping to capture some much-deserved glory. Rounding out the topten will be UMass's answer to Nathan Knee, Steve "Gomer" Whicher, Jeff Scagnelli, and Dave Elben, threats to score in any meet.

The University of Connecticut is one of the top rated teams in New England, and are the defending New England champions. Led by John Vitale, second to UMass' Ron Wayne in the Yankee Conference last year, they field a team of distinguished veterans in Rich Spurling, Craig McColl, Steve Flanagan, and John Cody. UConn has always been noted for its early season strength, and this year is no exception. Slightly weakened by the loss of sophomore Scott Carter to mono, they none-the-less are a tough team. To win this meet, the Redmen must break the lead runners of UConn apart, a difficult task, but well within their grasp. The rapid improvement of this year's Redmen team has made them a team to watch in the coming weeks.

University Sets For War Moratorium

Canvassing Amherst To Highlight Protest

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

Joining Americans across the Nation in what is supposed to be the largest anti-war demonstration ever to be held in this country, UMass students and faculty today are finalizing plans for tomorrow's Vietnam Moratorium.

Official events tomorrow include a rally at the campus pond, a march into Amherst Center for door to door canvassing, a rally on Amherst Common, and a motorcade to Northampton, where the day's events will be concluded with a rally with students from other area Colleges.

Meanwhile in Washington, President Nixon said yesterday that he will not be affected by the Nation-wide demonstration, and added that the Moratorium "was nothing new."

A teach-in, sponsored by members of the Government Department, will open tomorrow's events at 7:00 a.m. in Thompson 104. Chaired by Faculty Senate secretary Glen Gordon, the symposium will include talks on the Moratorium itself - its beginning, its political power, its relationship with the University and with personal conscience - and a discussion on the Vietnam War itself.

At 8:00 a.m., the group will move to the 6th floor lounge in Thompson for coffee and donuts.

The campus pond rally at 9:00 a.m. will feature the School of Engineering's Ron Rubel, who will discuss the history and intent of the Moratorium. Then, Gil Salk, King Council executive secretary, will instruct students and faculty on the general procedures for canvassing Amherst, the major activity of the day.

King Council spokesmen say, "The purpose of the canvassing is to carry word of the Moratorium and a discussion of the War to every household in the area."

Each canvasser will distribute post cards, addressed to President Nixon, urging him to end the war immediately, and they will attempt to get signatures of Amherst residents on the post cards.

They will also distribute "peace packets" - material explaining the rationale behind opposition to the war.

The canvassing is scheduled to continue until 3:00 p.m., when a mass rally will be held on Amherst Common.

Dean Allen of the University Health Service will lead the rally.

Following the rally, a motorcade will be staged through Amherst and to Northampton, and will enjoy a rally of Smith and Northampton Junion College students. This last rally is slated to be conducted in front of the Northampton Draft Board.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy will sponsor a forum on "War and Peace - the Scientist's Role" tonight in the Cage at 8:00 p.m.

The discussion will center on the military-industrial complex, scientists and social problems, federal support of research, scientists and political action, and weapons research, production and control.

Nixon to Talk on T.V. On Vietnam War Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon will take his Vietnam case to the people in a nationally broadcast speech Nov. 3, This White House announcement came a few hours after Nixon insisted anew that he will not be swayed by nationwide antiwar protests set for Wednesday.

In announcing the Nov. 3 speech, presidential press secretary, Ronand L. Ziegler said Nixon will report fully on the Vietnam situation "as it exists at that time." But he refused to say whether this is a hint that the President expects to announce some major development then.

Ziegler said the speech has been under consideration for some time and refused to acknowledge any link between it and the Vietnam Moratorium demonstrations of Oct. 15.

White House reporters noted that it is somewhat unusual to announce a major presidential speech so far in advance. And the fact that the disclosure came as Nixon began talks with his chief Paris negotiator naturally stirred speculation that the speech may bring to light some major change in course.

Nixon already has scheduled a major public speech for Oct. 31 to outline his position on Latin America. Ziegler said that later this week the President may make a statement or speech on inflation but gave no details on this.

Earlier Monday Nixon said his policy will not "be swayed by public demonstrations" and dismissed the planned Wednesday protests as adding nothing new to Vietnam discussion.

The Hampshire County District Attorney's office is continuing its investigation into the death of a Harvard University sophomore early Sunday of injuries suffered Saturday night in a fall at Amherst College, where he was visiting friends.

George E. Mountcastle, 19, of Baltimore, Md., was found injured outside Pratt Dormitory about 10:30 p.m. Saturday. He died about 5:00 a.m. Sunday in Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Although medical examiner Dr. R. Sheldon Clapp ruled cause of death due to multiple fractures of the pelvis, following an autopsy, the DA's office is investigating the possibility that the youth was tripping on acid at the time of the fall.

A doctor at Cooley Dickinson hospital, C. Richard Hinkley, said that Mountcastle admitted before he died that he had been using L.S.D.

College Secretary Horace W. Hewlett said Dist. Atty. Oscar Grife had ordered the autopsy.

Hewlett said ther e were no known witnesses to the incident, which occurred on the north side of the dormitory.

He said a group of students found Mountcastle lying on the ground. They notified authorities.

There are a number of windows and a fire escape leading up the side of the four-story building where Mountcastle was found.

Hewlett said the student had come to Amherst Saturday with a Harvard classmate to visit an Amherst student. All three were from Baltimore, according to Hewlett. He declined to identify the two friends.

He said the Amherst student whom Mountcastle had been visiting lives in Pratt Dormitory, but in a section away from where Mountcastle was found. Hewlett said Mountcastle did not fall from his friend's window.

Faculty, Other Groups Support Oct. 15th

A group of UMass faculty members has urged students, faculty and administrators to participate in tomorrow's Moratorium, and to join a growing number of campus groups supporting the Moratorium.

Other groups rallying to the demonstration's support over the weekend include Hillel, Wesley Methodist Church, The United Christian Foundation, and the Newman Center.

Also, 57 members of the UMass psychology department have signed a petition endorsing the Moratorium.

In a published statement, the faculty group urged "Mass participation of the University community in order to fulfill the objectives of the Moratorium... in order to put pressure on the Nixon administration for a swift end to the Vietnam War."

The Newman Center program will center on a community Mass Wednesday at 7:30 a.m., and will offer "the campus community the opportunity to rededicate themselves in public prayer to the cause of peace."

The Newman Club has stated that it invited all men to join with it in praying for peace at the special Mass.

Federal Gov't To Investigate Chicago Riots

CHICAGO (AP) - The federal government is investigating the four days of demonstrations and violence-marked parades and rallies sponsored last week by Weatherman, a militant wing of Students for a Democratic Society.

A spokesman for the U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Illinois said Monday that FBI agents and Justice Department officials were in Chicago last week and they are questioning witnesses to the incidents.

There is a possibility that the federal government may prosecute some of the demonstration participants under the federal antiriot law.

The Cook County state's attorney's office is also attempting to determine whether a grand jury should study last week's episodes in which more than 150 persons were arrested

Parade Ok'ed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A federal judge rules Tuesday that a peace group in Charleston, W.Va., could have the parade permit if had been denied for Wednesday's Vietnam moratorium.

The ruling came amid growing national controversy over the day of protest, which W. Averell Harriman, former chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks, endorsed as a "move toward peace."

Charleston Police Chief Dallas Bias had refused to grant the Charleston Coalition for Peace a permit for a candlelight procession, but Judge John F. Field overruled him and said Bias' views and the judge's own views, were "utterly irrelevant." Bias had said the demonstration would aid and comfort the enemy.

Harriman made his endorsement of the moratorium at a news conference, where he was announced as one of the winners of the New York Council of Churches' "Family of Man" awards.

The former New York governor and rowing ambassador said he did not agree with Secretary of State William Rogers that criticism of President Nixon's policy would delay peace.

"We're not running this country by the Hanoi propaganda mills," Harriman said.

Psych Department Appoints New Head

Dr. Kenneth Purcell has been appointed head of the department of psychology at the University of Massachusetts, according to an announcement by Provost Oswald Tippo.

He succeeds Dr. Mortimer H. Apply, who left the post this year to become dean of the UMass Graduate School.

Before joining the UMass psychology department as a professor a year ago, Dr. Purcell was director of the Behavior Science Division of the Children's Asthma Research Institute and Hospital in Denver for six yers. He held a concurrent appointment as assistant clinical professor of psychology at the University of Colorado Medical School.

He has also held faculty posts at the University of Denver and the University of Kentucky, has been a research psychologist for the Veteran's Administration, director of the Kentucky State training program in clinical psychology and chief psychologist for the Army's Ft. Dix mental hygiene clinic.

Dr. Purcell holds B.A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Nebraska. A specialist in parent-child relationships and psychosomatic illnesses, he is author or co-author of more than 25 publications. His research has been supported over the past 13 years by 10 grants from federal and other sources.

He is currently worcing under a $250,000 National Institute of Child Health and Human Development grant on the emotional antecedents of asthma

State College Newspapers Test Censorship

Two state college newspapers have gone out of business temporarily because the college presidents refused to pay printing bills on the latest issues containing a controversial article. Fitchburg State's "The Cycle" and Salem State's "The Log" both have foundered on trying to re-print an Eldridge Cleaver piece from Ramparts Magazine's September issue. However, two other state college papers - Lowell State's "Advocate" and Bridgewater State's "Comment" - printed the same article this week without administrative veto.

Editors from three other state colleges - Boston, Worcester and Framingham - have agreed to test the issue on their campuses by trying to print the same piece soon.

The contested article is the opening part of a novella by Cleaver entitled, "The Black Moochie," an account of his early life in Los Angeles.

The controversy began last month in Fitchburg when a local printer refused to print the "Cycle" and phoned Fitchburg State President James Hammond, who in turn said he would not pay any bills if it were printed.

State college newspapers supported by student activity fees, which are mandatory and therefor technically become state funds. As such the college presidents control them.

At Lowell State, where the student newspaper was separated from the college in recent years, though it still receives student fee support, President Daniel O'Leary said he had read the article and "couldn't see anything terribly wrong with it."

After the Fitchburg paper failed to print the piece, the editors of the six other abovementioned student papers met at Salem State last week and all agreed to print it.

Salem State President Frederick Neier said he had never pre-read Salem's "Log" in 15 years, but that at Thursday's State college board of trustees meeting at Bridgewater, he was shown the Cleaver piece by a Framingham State official.

"If I'd never seen the article, I probably wouldn't have done anything. I didn't go out of my way to see it, but once I had, I felt I couldn't use state funds to print it," he said.

It is known that President Justin McCarthy of Framingham State holds views on the article similar to those of Hammond and Meier.

"The Log's" (Salem) news editor, Helen Auchterlonie of Andover said, "We're not going to print another issue until we have some assurance we're not going to be censored."

The controversial article contains a number of words which are still not legally considered "obscene" under recent Supreme Court rulings. The words are common in both newsstand and book literature but many people might consider them obscene or lacking taste.

Antipopulation Protestors Stage California Starve-in

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) - Sandwiched between a restaurant and supermarket, 100 antipopulation protesters spent their second starving day in a plastic enclosure Monday, bobbing for plastic fruit and dreaming of food.

The so-called Hunger Show, a week-long starve-in aimed at dramatizing man's future in an overpopulated, underfed world, lost 20 participants in its first day.

Organizer Stewart Brand said he is optimistic that many of those remaining - about evenly divided by sex and ranging in age from 14 to 52 will last out until the show's finale next Saturday.

Most of those who left had jobs to get back to, but for some of them, it was just too hard. They were hungry and felt confined," he said.

As Brand spoke, the sound of sitar music mingled with the aroma of chili from an unknown source and a group of participants practiced yoga in one corner of the 80 by 100-foot plastic enclosure.

Though food is paramount in the minds of the participants, chilly nights, headaches and lack of privacy also have been bothersome.

Water is available to the protesters. Some requested aspirin for the headaches but were turned down. Dr. Gene Shoenfield, who is manning a "hospital tent" for the protest, said his services were reserved for emergencies and refused the aspirin.

"Yesterday I just sat around and thought about food. I thought about all the food I would eat for the rest of my life and last night I dreamed about shopping in a supermarket," said Stephanie Mills, 1969 valedictorian of Mills College.

But Miss Mills, who announced in her valedictory address that she would refrain from having children because of overpopulation, said "I think the biggest problem is going to be boredom."

LAURA NYRO

Like Bob Dylan, another writer who was discovered only after other artists began recording his songs, Laura Nyro is a poet. Her poetry, however, is a totally musical form in which lyrics and melody are inseparable.

The Fifth Dimension's recording of "Stoned Soul Picnic" brought Laura to the attention of many other musicians. One of them, Stephen Sondheim (who, incidentally, wrote the music and lyrics for "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum"), says the song's complexity, economy and spontaneity sum up for him what music is all about.

Laura Nyro will appear in concert this Friday with Tim Hardin at the Curry Hicks Cage. Show time is 10 p.m. Tickets are $2.50.

August 15th

The opinion opposing the moratorium, it seems to me, is having trouble making itself heard against the chorus of voices in its favor. I wish I had the time and energy to organize a group protest against the moratorium method of protesting. Since I do not, I want to go on record publicly as one who is opposed to all actions of this kind.

I am opposed, first of all, on grounds of appropriate procedure. In a country where legal channels for political activity and opposition have been wide open, there is no justification for converting educational institutions into instruments of political pressure exerted by individual groups within the academic community. They can hold meetings, conduct discussions, distribute leaflets, publish statements in the press, organize petitions, etc., without disrupting the normal life of the university which permits it to participate in the social and political process in a unique way, specific to an institution of study and learning. This contribution of the University is in danger if an attempt is made to turn it into a political platform for one stream of opinion.

It does not matter whether such attempts have majority support, or whether the disruption of the educational routine is organized by groups of students or members of the teaching staff. Concern for academic autonomy calls for giving priority to the preservation of procedures guaranteeing that autonomy. That means, in this instance, resisting attempts to put universities at the service of group purposes. "Leaving it up to individuals whether to conduct classes or not" makes it effectively impossible to conduct classes for those who want to. It is a clear case of the freedom of some conflicting with the freedom of others. Hence it is important to desist from methods of the Moratorium in order to protect every group and individual from being imposed upon by others, and eventually by outsiders. That may mean the protection of today's initiators of the Moratorium against analogous actions possibly coming from other groups the next time around. This is the significance of the need to prevent the University from becoming a vehicle for political pressure groups. The academic integrity of the University as an institution of learning, scientific research, and free discussion ought to be preserved no matter how worthy a given political cause may seem.

This position is independent of my opinion of the substance of Moratorium objectives. I would adhere to it even if I were in favor of the immediate withdrawal from Vietnam.

VACLAV HOLESOVSKY
Associate Professor Department of Economics

Minority Rights

President Lederle didn't have the power to cancel classes for the Moratorium, but he does have the power to reschedule classes that were cancelled. Do you smell something?

Supposedly, Dr. Lederle is concerned about the rights of those students who want to attend classes on the 15th; he has made minority rights an issue in the Moratorium. I feel this is a false issue. We have no minority rights in America. Our young men have no real choice about whether or not they will be drafted; if called, they must go - either to Saigon, or Canada. The war that they must fight in is unconstitutional; Congress has had no chance to vote on a declaration of war. Meanwhile, some 30 to 50 million US citizens are being denied their right to adequate housing, education, and medical care; many of these poorer and under-educated citizens are the very ones dying for "democracy" in Vietnam.

We have no minority rights in Amherst, even. Students and migrant workers pay exorbitant rents for substantial housing, while other students are crowded into triples.

The real issue here is a moral one; men are dying for naught in Vietnam; YOU can stop the killing. Bring them home. Alive.

UM Professor Leads History Field

The evolvement of the University of Massachusetts as a national center for studies in Latin American history is reflected by the off-campus activities of Professor Robert A. Potash, who served as head of the history department in 1968-69.

This past week, Professor Potash, along with Professor Lewis Hanke, also a Latin American specialist in the University's department of history, as well as other scholars in the field from Yale, the Fletcher School and Georgetown University, consulted with officials of Hampshire College on the development of a Caribbean Studies Center.

In late October Professor Potash will attend a Lincoln, Neb. meeting of the Steering Committee of the National Consortium for Latin American Studies. This seven-man committee represents over two hundred colleges and universities of several nations which have interests in Latin American studies.

In early November he will present the principal American paper at the Third Meeting of U. S. and Mexican Historians, to be held at Oaxtepec, Mexico. The subject of the paper will be "Syntheses of Mexican History: the U. S. Writers." Meeting every ten years, the international congress was organized in 1949 by Professors Hanke and Silvio Zavala, the latter representing the Colegio de Mexico. The University of Texas was the site of the 1959 meeting, when Professor Archibald Lewis, currently head of the history department at the University of Massachusetts, served as Secretary-Genral.

In mid-November the Seminar on Argentine History at Indiana University will hear Professor Potash on the subject of "The Argentine Military."

The role of the military in the recent history of Argentina has been the historian's chief interest, his book, "The Army and Politics in Argentina, 1928-1945," was published earlier this year, and he will leave for Argentina in January to complete research on a sequel, which will examine military affairs in that country since 1945.

Prominent Chem Engineer Named Visiting Professor

Dr. Thomas H. Chilton has been appointed visiting professor of chemical engineering at the University of Massachusetts for this semester, it has been announced by John W. Eldridge, head of the chemical engineering department.

Dr. Chilton's industrial career with the duPont Company spanned more than 30 years, including 11 as their director of engineering research. Since retiring from duPont, he has taught at a number of domestic and foreign universities, including the University of California at Berkeley, where he was Regents Professor of chemical engineering, and Kyoto and Nagoya Universities in Japan and Nancy and Toulouse Universities in France. He was Fulbright lecturer at all four.

One of the outstanding chemical engineers in the country, Dr. Chilton was awarded an honorary degree from the University of Delaware in 1943. He has received many other honors, including election to the National Academy of Engineering in 1966. Dr. Chilton is a past president of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. He is the holder of several patents, and the author of many contributions to technical literature.

Dr. Chilton chaired the National Research Council's Ad Hoc Panel this past summer on the control of sulphur dioxide from stationary combustion sources. The panel was concerned with reviewing current efforts to remove SO2 from power plant smoke discharges. The study was conducted for the President's Office of Science and Technology at the request of the National Air Pollution Control Administration.

US Information Agency Officer Visits UMass

William Zavis, an Information Officer for the United States Information Agency, will be on campus October 14 and 15 to talk to interested students.

Foreign Service Information Officers in the U.S.I.A. act as official spokesmen of American policy and interests throughout the world. They must be alert to changes in currents of international public opinion. To carry out these goals all media of communication is used.

Mr. Zavis has an educational background in the arts and theater and prior to joining U.S.I.A. he spent time in theater in Norway, France, England, and Spain. Since joining U.S.I.A., Mr. Zavis' duties have taken him to the Ivory Coast, Niger, France, Washington D.C., and New York.

Mr. Zavis will be in Room 167 Whitmore Building from 9:00 - 11:00 a.m. and 2:00 - 4:00 p.m. on October 14, and 2:00 - 4:00 p.m. on October 15.

Builders Attend UM Conference

An estimated 100 building officials from all over New England are expected for a four day training conference Oct. 13 through 17 at the University of Massachusetts, sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service at UMass and the Municipal Building Officials of New England.

The program will cover four main areas: management, building technology, municipal law and building regulations.

Participating UMass faculty members include Harold B. Gatslick, professor of wood science and technology; Joe T. Clayton, professor of agricultural engineering; curtis Johnson and Robert Light, both associate professors of agricultural engineering; and Arthur Carlisle and Stephen Michael, both associate professors of management in the School of Business Administration.

Tim Hardin

The easiest way to explain who Tim Hardin is is to mention that he wrote -- and sang -- the original version of "If I Were a Carpenter", a song strong enough to withstand stylistic pressures as diverse as those of Bobby Darin and the Four Tops.

As a writer, Hardin is almost invariably a romantic, never topical, didactic or surrealistic. He thinks of himself as being a jazz artist, although most of his music has gained him a following among folk music devotees.

Tim Hardin will appear in concert this Friday evening with Laura Nyro in the Curry Hicks Cage at 10 p.m. Tickets are $2.50.

Tufts Downs Ruggers For Third Defeat, 17-3

The UMass Rugby football club had its third outing of the new season on Saturday when they faced Tufts R.F.C. on the fields west of Boyden. The UMass club, touted as fielding one of its strongest teams ever, went down to its third defeat of the season. The "A" club started the game well but it soon became apparent that Tufts was to dominate the scrums, as they kept UMass on the defensive for the greater part of the first half. Tufts scored on open field play when their forwards rallied round the ball and drove it over for a try. The conversion was successful and Tufts led 5-0. The play steadied until near the end of the half when a Tufts winger broke through for short yardage and a score. An unsuccessful conversion left the score at 8-0. During the first half, two UMass forwards, Frisbee and Laurence, suffered injuries and were forced to leave the game. Laurence returned, but was ineffectual. The club rallied in the second half when the undermanned forwards managed to control the rucks and lineouts. From one ruck at midfield, the ball went down the line to UMass' Frank Desiata who put on a dazzling display of broken field running and scored UMass' only try of the season. The conversion was unsuccessful and Tufts led 8-3. The undermanned forwards took the game to Tufts and then proceeded to give it to them. Tufts scored on two lineouts when their forwards broke through, forcefully disengaged the ball from a UMass player and then scored. This sufficed and the Redmen ruggers went down to defeat 17-3.

The "B" team fared better. In their 11-0 loss, they pursued, challenged their more experienced opponents, and lost on the basis of their errors of omission. Outstanding in the game were John Long playing his first game at scrumhalf and Ed Chamberlain at prop.

The Redmen lost their first two outings as well. Against an experienced Mystic River R.F.C., the UMass boys sank to 22-0 and 20-0 defeats. The Boston boys, whose forwards averaged over 35 years young, demonstrated that strength and speed are not enough. The "A" game scoring was started by Mystic's 35 year old bearded physicist-prop, Ken Jones, a 15 year veteran of the rugby wars. From the outset, it was apparent who would dominate play, inasmuch as UMass was singularly uninspired.

The "B" game, though equally one-sided, did demonstrate the promising play of several UMass ruggers, Bob Grosman, Jess Kane, and Barry Webb.

The ruggers travelled to Cambridge for their second game and took on what has been recognized as one of the better clubs in New England, Harvard Business School. The UMass played its best game of the season, dominating play, containing Harvard, but for one defensive error. The Cantabs gained possession of the ball following a loose ruck, the ball travelled down the line of backs to the outside center who, upon being hit, tossed the ball wildly into the air. UMass' Couture and the Harvard wing both jumped for the ball. Couture lost and the wing, a former Southwest Conference football star, streaked 80 yards for the game's only score. UMass lost 5-0. The B's played creditably but lost 9-0.

This week the Rugby club travels to Cambridge again to do battle with the footballers from the other institution along the banks of the Charles, M.I.T. This game last year was UMass' first rugby victory and could very well be the first for this season. Coach Laurence, anticipates numerous changes this week in search of a win. He looks forward to the return of Jim Vilkitis and Bob Grossman to bolster the ailing club.

Family Stone

Sly and The Family Stone, Epic's exciting new recording group, was formed a little over a year ago in San Francisco. It was organized by Sly Stone who, although only in his early twenties, has achieved notable success as a writer, producer and disc jockey on the top rhythm-and-blues station in SF.

Of the group's initial organization, guitarist Freddie "Pyhotee" Stone (Sly's brother) recalled, "We all got together in the basement of Sly's house. It seemed like a little miracle the way we all got together..."

This Saturday Sly and The Family Stone will appear in concert at the Curry Hicks Cage at 7 & 10 p.m. Tickets are $3.50.

Martin Axed

NEW YORK (AP) - Tempestuous Billy Martin, who won battles on and off the field in his first year as a major league manager, lost a war Monday when he was fired by the Minnesota Twins.

Twins President Calvin Griffith, citing Martin's refusal to follow front office "policy and guidelines," announced the dismissal in New York, where he is attending the World Series. Griffith broke the news to Martin in a phone call to the manager's Minneapolis home.

"It was the hardest decision I've ever had to make about a manager," said Griffith, who dropped the axe on Sam Mele and Cal Erner in successive years before Martin, extremely popular with Minnesota fans, piloted the Twins to the American League West Division title.

Although Griffith would not talk about a possible successor, several names have been circulated as prime candidates, among them Eddie Yost, a New York Mets coach, and two recently deposed managers - Dave Bristol and Hank Bauer.

Martin is the ninth manager in the majors this year to lose his job,....and the fifth in the American League West.

Last Minute Score Upsets BU, 14-9

Defense Leads Redmen Over Terriers in Last Forty Seconds

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

BOSTON- Playing defense as if it had invented the term, UMass stung unbeaten Boston University 14-9, here on Saturday as the Redmen scored a touchdown with 40 seconds left in what was an exciting hard-hitting football game. The win evened UMass' record at 2-2; BU slipped to 3-1.

The role played by the defense in this upset victory cannot be overstated. It was magnificent. It was tremendous. It operated with an efficiency not seen from a Redman defense in many moons.

First off, the defensive squad held the Terrier offense scoreless; BU's nine points resulted from a record return of a UMass field goal attempt and an unlikely safety. Secondly BU was able to manage only 51 yards on the ground and 122 through the air.

All in all the defense yielded but nine first downs. In fact the home team was successful in picking up the first down only four times out of 17 third down situations.

In the fourth quarter, with the visitors trailing 9-7, the defense stole the ball from BU twice, first on a Dennis Collins interception and secondly on a fumble recovery by tackle Bill Sroka.

Collins' interception came in enemy territory at the 37 with about seven minutes left in the game. However, a personal foul against UMass on the very same play moved the ball back to the Redman 47. Three offensive plays netted only six yards and Steve Rogers punted on fourth down to the home 16 yard line.

Calascibetta, a hard-nosed athlete, took the ball for two yards on the next play but was injured and left the gridiron amidst a standing ovation. It marked the last time the home fans would have something to cheer about, for Gary Capehart took the handoff on the next play only to fumble the ball into the waiting arms of Sroka and a deserving Redman defense.

Five and eight-yard gains by Ed Sarno and Jerry Grasso gave the visitors a first-and-ten on the 28. Three plays later found UMass faced with a fourth-and-one situation on the BU 19. Quarterback Tim Adams was in charge and, in unorthodox fashion, he sent halfback Pat Scavone around left end for nine big yards down to the ten.

Fullback Dick Cummings lugged it nine more yards on the next play. The ball rested on the one yard line and everyone anticipated a handoff to Cummings. Instead Adams called upon halfback Craig Lovell, who swept untouched around right end into the end-zone where he flipped the pigskin happily into the air.

Dennis Gagnon came on the scene to add the 14th point, and the Redmen were 40 seconds away from a significant upset.

The ensuing kickoff was of the squib variety which BU's Bruce Taylor returned to his own 30. The next 24 seconds proved to be the moment of greatest glory for the UMass defense. It chased Terrier quarterback Pete Yetten out of bounds at the 26 on the first play. The next play and Yetten had to ball out at the 24. Yetten then faded straight back on third-and-16 only to be dumped at the 14.

A penalty moved the ball to the nine where a screen pass by Yetten fell incomplete, and the Redmen owned the football with nine seconds remaining in the fray. A delay-of-game penalty pushed it back to the 14 where Adams smothered it on the last play as the clock ran out.

The biggest thrill for BU's Homecoming Game crowd of 9,772 came very early in the game after the Terrier defense forced the visitors into a kicking situation on the BU 35. UMass elected to try a field goal, figuring that it would serve the same purpose as a punt. In fact it turned out to be an excellent punt, sailing into the right of the endzone, four yards deep.

Taylor fielded it, but surprised everyone by returning it. He high-stepped, side-stepped and feinted his way through heavy traffic out to the 20 where he moved to his left behind sometimely blocks and scooted into paydirt for a 104-yard touchdown, possibly an NCAA record because it had the distinction of being the return of a field goal attempt.

Both defenses took over for the rest of the half and well into the third quarter. With 3:30 remaining in that period, BU scored its last two points as Steve Parnell was nabbed for a safety in an attempt to run back a punt.

Afterwards the football changed hands five times until Collins came through with his interception and BU and UMass embarked on the storybook antics of the last seven minutes.

Booters Down UConn, 2-1 On Penalty Kick

The University of Mass. soccer team scored two fourth period goals to gain an upset 2-1 victory over the University of Conn. on Saturday. The win gave the Redmen a 2-1 season record and evened their conference mark at 1-1.

UConn dominated the play early in the game, scoring with only three minutes elapsed in the first period. Coach Peter Broaca felt that the Redmen gave away the goal on what he termed a "fullback mistake" on a UConn throw in. The score held up until the last period even though the Redmen began to dominate the Huskies in the second half.

Broaca was very pleased with the win. "It was a great effort by our kids in the fourth quarter," he said. "The entire team did a fine job." Joe Cerniawski came in for praise from the coach by shutting out UConn's All Yankee Conference star John Sarnis. Broaca also praised the play of John Mercury and Dick McCarin and by the time he finished, he had favorably mentioned the work of the entire team.

It was a great win for the Redmen, but they must forget it quickly as they travel back to Conn. today to face Trinity, the number three team in New England.

Trinity finished last year with a 9-1 record and participated in the NCAA tournament. This year they have a 2-1 record and are averaging four goals a game. According to Broaca, "they probably have the finest front line in New England. Four of their players have been together for four years." For the Redmen, Marc Cantor will replace Larry DeFelice in the starting lineup and Paul Slack will replace Gary Hart at fullback.

Redman fullback DICK CUMMINGS (30) breaks through a hole in the line for a gain of nine yards before he is brought down on the one yard line. On the next play, the Redmen scored to defeat B.U., 14-9. (MDC photo by Ken Stevens)

Harriers Lose, Meet Today

Grabbing the first four places, the University of Connecticut harriers downed UMass, 20-35 in the Redman's home debut, Saturday.

John Vitale, Craig McColl, Rich Spurling and Steve Flanagan all finished in front of UMass' Ron Wayne who ran a respectable race considering that he had missed some workouts during the week because of a sprained enkle.

Following Wayne across the finish were the remaining four scorers for the Redmen. Leo Duart just outlasted a strong kick by Larry Paulson for sixth place. Tom Derderian ran a strong two miles before he weakened because of a cold and dropped to eighth place. Bruce Blackburn again moved into the Redman's top five as he placed ninth behind Derderian.

The inability of UMass to break up the front power of UConn meant defeat. The team was tired after two weeks of hard work but have a chance to redeem themselves when the Huskies return here for the Conference meet on November 1.

Today, both the varsity and frosh meet Yankee Conference opponents Vermont and Rhode Island on the UMass course that begins in front of WOPE.

A People's Protest

Today's Moratorium is no longer a student protest. Granted, campuses and college students will play a large role in the day's events, and the larger the student turnout, the stronger the message that will be sent to Washington. But the aspect of today's protest which makes it a legitimate popular call for the end to the war is its broad base.

A Weymouth housewife held a bake sale this weekend to raise funds to buy postcards which she plans to distribute to her neighbors today. A Boston radio station will suspend all regular broadcasting today, and carry only news of the moratorium. A large group of U.S. Senators and Congressmen plan to stay home from work today and to work for peace.

Over the past two weeks support throughout middle and working class America has snowballed. The strength of the movement in these voter-heavy areas of American society have forced several politicians to jump on the band wagon of Moratorium support. Gov. Sargent and Senate President Donahue are two examples.

Politicians know when to ignore protest movements and when to recognize them. In 1965, civil-rights marches became politically important because politicians realize that they could not be reelected if they ignored them. When the American middle class gets behind something, politicians are forced to act; their political lives depend on it.

The war in Vietnam and today's moratorium have now become middle class causes. Because of college student's vocalizing, dissatisfaction with the war has spread throughout the nation to a degree where, it appears, a sizable proportion of middle class voting Americans will work for peace today.

Richard Nixon can no longer ignore the anti-war movement; it's too politically powerful for him to brush aside. He can no longer ask for three more months or three more years to end the war--Americans are sick of waiting. The people who elected him last year and who have the power to reelect him in 1972 want action now.

The Editors

Nixon's Latest Position

(Editor's note: the following is the text of President Nixon's reply to David Dicks, a college student who wrote the President on the issue of the moratorium. The letter represents what many Americans have called "the President's insensitivity to public opinion".)

Dear Mr. Dicks:

In reply to your comments about my press conference remarks that "under no circumstances will I be affected whatever" by the demonstrations planned for October 15, I would suggest that there are several points you should bear in mind.

First, there is a clear distinction between public opinion and public demonstrations. To listen to public opinion is one thing; to be swayed by public demonstrations is another. A demonstration - in whatever cause - is an organized expression of one particular set of opinions, which may or may not be shared by the majority of the people. If a President - any President - allowed his course to be set by those who demonstrated, he would betray the trust of all the rest. Whatever the issue, to allow government policy to be made in the streets would destroy the democratic process. It would give the decision, not to the majority, and not to those with the strongest arguments, but to those with the loudest voices. It would reduce statecraft to slogans. It would invite anarchy. It would allow every group to test its strength not at the ballot box but through confrontation in the streets.

The planned demonstrations will tell us that a great many Americans are deeply concerned about the war; that some of these consider U.S. participation immoral; that many want U.S. troops withdrawn immediately and unconditionally. But all of us in the Administration are already well aware of this sentiment. We are already well aware that it is wide-spread - indeed, that no matter how many people might participate, there would be many more who share their concern.

Therefore, there is nothing new we can learn from the demonstration. The question is whether, in the absence of any new evidence or any new arguments, we should be turned aside from a carefully considered course. The Policies we are now following reflect our own best judgment, based on exhaustive study of all the available evidence, of how to achieve that goal. To abandon that policy merely because of a public demonstration would herefore be an act of gross irresponsibility on my part.

One further point: I respect the right of each American to express his own opinion. I recognize that many feel a moral obligation to express their opinions in the most conspicuous way possible, and therefore consider such expression to be their responsibility. I respect that. However, my responsibility is different. I must consider the consequences of each proposed course of action - short term and long-term, domestic and world-wide, direct and indirect. Others can say of Vietnam, "Get out now," when asked how, they can give the simple, flip answer: "By sea." They can ignore the consequences. But as I consider these consequences, in both human and international terms, I can only conclude that history would rightly condemn a President who took such a course.

One of the first acts of my administration was to review, exhaustively and comprehensively, every aspect of the nation's policies in Vietnam. We have drastically altered the policies we inherited. We are on the road to peace.

That road is not easy. It is not simple. But I am convinced it is the right one. There is no problem to which I have given more of my time and thought. For nine months, we have worked every day for a just end to a conflict which has been building for more than eight years.

On Oct. 15, I understand many will simply be saying: "I am for peace." I ardently join with all Americans in working towards that goal.

Sincerely,
Richard Nixon

How Moratorium Grew Into Nationwide Protest

The "Vietnam Moratorium" started slowly. Some weeks ago student activists around the country were trying to drum up support for a war protest, but the movement seemed to be limited to the campuses. By now, however, the effort has mushroomed into a massive national demonstration.

Last week, 17 Senators and 47 House members endorsed the day of protest. Even Representatives Rogers C. B. Morton, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, told a group of university students here, "I'm for the moratorium." Mayors in many communities decreed special observances, schools and colleges either canceled classes for the day or scheduled rallies and Vietnam discussions, churches planned memorial services for Vietnam dead, and doctors' lawyers' and businessmen's organizations pledged their support for the moratorium.

The group around which all the activity is revolving is the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, operating out of a cluttered, bustling office in Washington. A staff of 50 to 60 young people, many of whom worked for Senators Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy in the election campaigns, man the telephones and coordinate the activites. Sam Brown, 25, who helped Senator McCarthy last fall, is the chief organizer and promoter of the moratorium.

Two factors in recent weeks seem to have been the catalysts that turned the student movement into a national movement.

The first was President Nixon's statement at his news conference Sept. 26 that "under no circumstances will I be affected whatever" by anti-war protests. The statement seemed rigid and callous to many Americans who are deeply opposed to the war.

Now the major concern of the organizers of the moratorium is whether the impetus can be maintained after Oct. 15. They are planning for two days of demonstrations next month, probably Nov. 13 and 14, and three days in December.

"There are two possibilities," one of the coordinators confided last week. "One is that the mass support of the first day will create even greater sympathy for the next days. The other is that the liberals - the Congressmen and the businessmen - will say, 'Now I've done my bit.'"

Cutting Classes "Legal"

Even though classes have not been officially called off today, students participating in the moratorium cannot be penalized by faculty for not attending classes.

Student Senate President Bruce R. Balboni explained, "In the light of the Faculty Senate's resolution urging that no penalties be levied against students who wish to participate in the moratorium, any penalty given to students who participate is 'dishonorable'."

Balboni urged any students whose teachers plan to penalize them for missing class today to contact him as soon as possible.

The Senate President urged all members of the UMass community to join in the moratorium, and said, "This type of constructive expression in a free democratic society will force Nixon and other 'leaders' to heed the public opinion which they so simply choose to ignore."

Meanwhile, the assembly of the School of Education has voted its support to the moratorium, and has urged all students to join the demonstration. Another group which yesterday announced its support was the campus committee on Afro-American Studies.

Nixon's 8 Points

1 - As soon as agreement can be reached, all non South Vietnamese forces would begin withdrawals from South Vietnam. Over a period of twelve months, by agreed-upon stages, the major portions of all United States, allied and other non-South Vietnamese forces would be withdrawn.

2 - At the end of this twelve-month period, the remaining United States, allied and other non-South Vietnamese forces would move into designated base areas and would not engage in combat operations.

3 - The remaining U.S. and allied forces would complete their withdrawals as the remaining North Vietnamese force were withdrawn and returned to North Vietnam.

4 - An international supervisory body, acceptable to both sides, would be created for the purpose of verifying withdrawals, and for any other purpose agreed upon between the two sides.

5 - This international body would begin operating in accordance with an agreed timetable and would participate in arranging a supervised cease-fire in Vietnam.

6 - As soon as possible after the international body was functioning, elections would be held under agreed procedures and under (its) supervision.

7 - Arrangements would be made for the release of prisoners of war on both sides at the earliest possible time.

8 - All parties would agree to observe the Geneva Accords of 1954 regarding South Vietnam and Cambodia and the Laos Accords of 1962.

5,000 Rally at Common

Hundreds of thousands of Americans debated, rallied, marched and prayed yesterday in nationwide Moratorium Day observances that displayed the country's divisions over the Vietnam war.

Antiwar partisans wore buttons and black armbands and called the war immoral and futile. Supporters of America's Vietnam policy flew flags and turned on automobile headlights, and some called the moratorium treason. Even for the uncommitted it was hard to ignore.

Addressing a campus pond rally of 1200 students yesterday morning MLK (Martin Luther King) Social Action Council leader Gil Salk declared that the Oc . 15 Moratorium would go down in history as "the first day of the war's end."

Salk described yesterday's peace movement as one of patriotic, political, economical, humane, and traditional action, but above all "expanding and successful action."

"Those reluctant to join us today will join us in November and December," Salk stated in reference to the proposed two and three day Moratoriums in the coming months. And he continuec that already, the Oct. 15 Moratorium has forced concessions (60,000 troop withdrawal and firing of Selective Service head Gen. Lewis Hershey) from an "unaffected" President.

"The November and December actions will end the war," Salk emphasized.

Sidney Finehirsch spoke next, telling the crowd that "There is a war here at UMass." Finehirsch pointed to ROTC, industrial - military recruiting, and technical research as proof that, "The University is part of the war establishment destroying Vietnam and itself."

He called for a "coalition" already made up of Greeks, MLK, UMass SDS, SMILE and Project 10 members to make the following demands: (1) ROTC dropped from campus; (2) ROTC scholarships replaced by other University scholarships; (3) Recruitment ended; and (4) Research ended. There are no dates for these demands, though Finehirsch pointed to the Nov. moratorium as time for debate on these issues.

Finehirsch then read an open letter to Pres. John Lederle calling for the president to use the powers of his office to meet these demands.

The rally's final speaker was Prof. Ron Reuble of the Engineering Dept., who, like Salk, told the audience that the Moratorium would mean "the end of the war in Vietnam."

Reuble stated that two things must be kept in mind regarding the Moratorium: (1) "Today is not a day of meditation - but rather protest and action." (2) "There must be a timetable for withdrawal of troops from Vietnam."

Though, "the majority of Americans want the war ended - now," Reuble declared that it will be necessary to continue yesterday's action in the coming months.

"We are all going to Washington in November. It will be the largest demonstration in the history of Washington, D.C." he concluded.

Salk's final words of instruction on the canvassing were for getting support for the Moratorium and a "day of peace, bringing the boys home."

"Tell the people what you want - the killing stopped and the war ended."

One didn't have to ask why those thousands of students were gathered at the pond. The moratorium was everywhere. There was a feeling of unity, of purpose. They were out to "begin the end of the war."

The canvassers moved towards the staging area. Over a hundred cars waited to carry students to all parts of the local community, to bring the moratorium to the people.

The people who organized this splendid affair gulped lukewarm coffee. Some hadn't slept in three days. They filled cars, sorted leaflets, and gave last minute instructions.

The canvassers were anxious. There had been some delay. The sun was beginning to make the heavy early morning sweaters uncomfortable.

Once you were walking towards the front door of the first house on your list, you tried to decide how to say what you believe.

Eighty three percent of the people covered by my team were willing to sign the postcard being sent to President Nixon calling for "immediate withdrawal" of "all American troops." Some said that they were going to write their congressman and senator. Others refused to discuss the issue.

People were interested. Some were confused as to what the moratorium meant. The people raised questions. They wondered what was right. It was the first time that many had ever questioned the government. One local businessman was satisfied with "knowing that Nixon was doing all that was possible." One secretary who called herself a "Nixon supporter" expressed concern over the moves Nixon has made in the last week. People began thinking about the Moratorium. They wanted to see the killing stopped.

We were called "dirty hippies." One fast moving Ford van deposited a firecracker in our midst, then flashed the peace symbol. The canvassers learned a lot.

The rallies, the meetings, the teach-ins, the vigils and fasts all played their part. The real test for America came with the canvassing. People meeting people. People asking themselves if the "home of the brave, land of the free" was wrong.

"I think it's fine, but I wonder about the outcome," said the Amherst housewife while raking the leaves in her front yard.

"You can't convince people who are against the moratorium to change their minds, and the others have already made up their minds for peace," So said one team of female canvassers.

And so it seemed with the Oct. 15 door to door canvass campaign in Amherst that reaction from both citizens and canvassers was one of doubt and uncertainty as to just what effects the day's activities might have in shortening the Vietnam war.

"Sure there is an influence on those in authority," continued the previously mentioned middle-aged housewife, "But anyone in authority is already working for peace. You can't rush into it."

She felt that the main trouble with the Moratorium was its "ballooning into an anti-Nixon crusade. It's pathetic. There must be more of a positive attitude and standing up for something rather than an emphasis against everything in her opinion.

On Peace Place one gentleman tersely remarked, "It won't do a bit of good. It won't change the outcome of the war." Asked whether he agreed with the canvass campaign or the Moratorium he said it was "fine", "if that's all they (students) have to do.

Another Amherst citizen even felt that the day's activities was "a waste of time". "I'm not interested. I don't think it will be effective," he added.

This feeling of ineffectiveness and uncertainty of outcome also seemed to pervade the several teams of canvassers interviewed. All felt optimism and success in their ability to make contact with the people, but were not sure of the results of their action.

Two young coeds who had been to 11 houses stated that all but one had received them favorably. They felt, however, that their purpose had been to "organize and reach the people for peace, not to change minds."

"Those against us say Nixon can handle it himself," another canvass team remarked.

Perhaps as one UMass peace worker stated, "They all want the war stopped." But as one woman remarked from a lawn chair in her backyard: "I don't think it will change things that much. I'm all for it, but I doubt the outcome. Nixon will not "drop the hat" on the war just like that. This canvassing hasn't changed my opinion. My mind is already made up."

Approximately 6000 people attended the 4:00 p.m. peace day rally at the Amherst Town Common yesterday.

State Representative John Oliver noted that 200 state representatives support the Moratorium and that among them was Alan Sisitsky of Springfield well known in Western Massachusetts.

U.S. Representative for the 6th congressional district, Michael Harrington proclaimed Moratorium day as one of the most impressive days in our country's history.

Representative Harrington declared that he was not only here because of his political position but to give credence to the thinking of an orderly, legal and meaningful demonstration of concern about the Vietnam war, and he called for a reversal of the policy carried out by the last four administrations which have allowed events like Khe Sahn and Hamburger Hill to take place.

He also feels that President Nixon is very much aware of the feelings of the American people and points out the firing of General Hershey and the summoning of former V.P. Hubert Humphrey and Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to Washington as evidence of the President's cognizance of activities in the nation on Moratorium day.

Also speaking at the rally was a former captain in the U.S. Army who served in Vietnam in 1966, John Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald denounced the Vietnam war saying, "The war in Vietnam is hell, and we ought to get the hell out of there, now." Fitzgerard blamed the U.S. for the continuing violence in Vietnam and called for a unilateral withdrawal of our troops because he is concerned for the thousands killed in this "dishonorable war."

A letter communicated to Professor Dempsey of Amherst College from U.S. Representative Silvio Conte was read to the gathering. Within it Representative Conte apologized for not being able to speak in Amherst yesterday because of his heavy workload but that he supports any non-violent opposition to the war and will go on opposing the war in Congress.

After Bill Hasahn, a black poet read his own poem concerning Vietnam, Sid Fineherst spoke and asked that universities and colleges abolish ROTC and war research. He also invited Dr. Lederle and government campus recruiters to debate the role of the University in war on the next moratorium day Friday, Nov. 14 at 1:00 p.m.

Mr. Fineherst, obviously in an inviting mood, then invited all present to attend his induction into the armed forces on Oct. 29 at 7:30 a.m. in Springfield. At least half of the crowd had left by the time Fineherst began to speak.

Officials in Holyoke breathed a sigh of relief last night following the Day of Moratorium in that city, the largest demonstration the city has ever seen.

More than 1000 persons participated in the day's events, which were launched at Holyoke Community College at about 9:00 a.m. with a four-hour vigil.

Several hundred Holyoke area youth -- with a few businessmen and housewives -- were joined by another group which came to Holyoke from UMass following the morning activities in Amherst.

HCC and UMass students with placards paced around the city block on which the Community College's interim facilities are located, while other students canvassed the city door-to-door.

Officials estimated about 1000 persons marched through the city's downtown area, waving to shoppers and businessmen to join in the march. Few did. Chanting "peace now," the marchers were escorted on the entire route by uniformed police.

As the group approached the city's War Memorial, which houses several veterans' groups offices, a three-minute silent prayer was said for the dead in Vietnam.

There was little if any harrassment by Holyoke residents. Several elderly residents eyed the group with discomfort, but most people along the march route accepted printed materials, signed petitions, and mailed President Nixon postcards objecting to the Vietnam issue.

As the group passed a grammar school along the route, several students waved the peace sign, and pointed to a sign in their classroom window which proclaimed "A Day for Peace, Oct. 15."

The group marched to the city's Makenzie Stadium, adjacent to Holyoke High School, where Cong. Michael Harrington addressed the group before he arrived at the Amherst Town Green.

Also addressing the group was Holyoke Mayor William S. Taupier who received no applause and a chorus of angry shouts after he denounced the group's activities.

Curfew Clamped On Springfield Following Clash

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Gangs roamed a four-block area on State Street Wednesday night, throwing bottles, bricks and cans and injuring at least 10 persons including two policemen and a baby.

At the height of the melee some 2,000 persons roamed the streets. About 100 policemen were dispatched to the scene. The area was quiet at 11 p.m., an hour after Mayor Frank Friedman proclaimed a city-wide curfew. The area around Winchester Square, where the disturbance began, was placed under curfew at 8 p.m.

Looting was reported at an automobile supply store at Winchester Shopping Center. A furniture store was damaged when a fire was started in rubbish cans outside the building. Fire engines at a station near the shopping center were moved away as the crowd neared.

Police arrested 30 persons, most of them part of a welfare demonstration which triggered the violence. Liquor outlets were closed at 8:15 p.m.

Order was restored briefly early in the evening when police met with black neighborhood leaders, leaders of the National Welfare Organization and leaders of a Vietnam moratorium service being held in the area. But almost as soon as the meeting ended, police said gangs of teen-agers began throwing bottles. The four-block area was described as "a litter of bricks, bottles and cans."

A newsman on the scene said two policemen were struck by flying bricks. A brick thrown through a car window injured a baby.

The trouble began Wednesday afternoon when police made arrests inside the welfare building. The demonstrators had refused to leave the Winchester Square welfare office. As some of those arrested were being loaded into a police van, crowds began throwing rocks and rocking the van. Some of the crowd milling around the welfare office were students attending Vietnam moratorium services across the street.

The Masses Came to Boston

100,000 persons jammed Boston Common yesterday to observe the Moratorium, and to hear Senator George McGovern speak on the War and its effect on American Society. The MDC's Ron Labrecque was there, and he files his report on page 7. (MDC photo by Ron Labrecque)

Laird Refuses to Set Timetable

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird says "there is no question" but that the United States can withdraw all of its combat troops from Vietnam within a year or two.

At the same time, the secretary of defense refused to set any specific timetable.

The interviewer asked whether "Vietnamization can reach the point within a reasonable time, a year or two, that all American combat troops can be withdrawn, leaving perhaps air and ground support?"

"There is no question about it," Laird said.

He described the Nixon administration's Vietnamization effort as "the best program that's ever been devised to handle Southeast Asia and to handle Vietnam."

Vietnamization is the term applied to the program aimed at shifting the burden of fighting to the South Vietnamese troops.

War Debates Sought By UMass Students

A group of students has sent a letter to President Lederle, asking for a series of debates on R.O.T.C. and other campus programs which, the students say, are linked to the U.S. war effort.

The students want the debates to be held on the next Moratorium date, November 13th.

Four "negotiable" demands have been made by the students. They include 1. that R.O.T.C. be abolished; 2. that R.O.T.C. scholarships be replaced by general, academic scholarships; 3. that all campus recruitment by the military and by military related industries be terminated; 4 that all university research which is linked to the war industry be ended.

Nixon. Business as Usual

WASHINGTON (AP) - Pursuing a studied business-as-usual course, President Nixon concentrated Wednesday on Latin America and economic problems-taking no public notice of nationwide antiwar demonstrations.

Although the White House repeatedly went out of its way in pre-moratorium days to try to soften stop-the-war sentiment - claiming noticeable progress for Nixon policies - the Southeast Asian conflict played no part in Nixon's announced activities on M Day.

The President, it seemed evident, had decided in advance to sit out the day without anything that could be interpreted as moratorium-related.

As for the demonstrators, they did not ignore Nixon.

Starting in late morning, dozens of pickets of varied persuasions - including "win the war" advocates began parading in front of the White House.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon kept informed about the national protest movement throughout the day through news reports and "normal staff discussions."

Responding to questions, Ziegler said Nixon kept in touch with members of the White House staff participating in Moratorium Day activities. And he reported that no extra security precautions had been taken at the executive mansion, although newsmen noted that guard forces at the gates had been beefed up to some extent.

The President met in the morning with his National Security council but Ziegler said the moratorium did not figure in the discussion.

The World Beyond

Most students, faculty, administration have decided by now whether or not to participate in the . October 15th Moratorium, whether in teach-ins on campus or by canvassing in Amherst and neighboring communities. I suspect that few minds are going to be changed between today and tomorrow, the fifteenth.

In thinking back over dozens of conversations with students and faculty over the past three weeks, one particular matter is curious to me: why haven't we done this sort of thing before? Why are we so unresponsive to an atrocity of the magnitude of Vietnam? With nine long months of hindsight, is it not incredible President Nixon has done so little to end the war? One remembers he was elected on a peace platform -- he had a "secret plan" for terminating the war which he could not and would not disclose to anyone, (apparently not himself either).

As intellectuals, members of a community of scholars, we should be able to recognize intellectual dishonesty. And our response to dishonesty should be moral and ethical. The moratorium asks Americans to recognize and act upon the chief moral issue of their times: the responsibility of this country's policies for the suffering and death of innocent people on all sides in Vietnam. This is a moral issue no less than the issues once tried at Neuremburg. We have lost 46,000 men since the inception of this war, most of them supporting the governments of Premiers Thieu and Ky; both of these men aided the French Colonial powers in Vietnam. We are presently supporting over 90% of the budget of the Saigon government. How many of us here in Amherst, Massachusetts on this delightful fall day would be willing to die for that government?

Nine graduates of this University have died for American policy in Vietnam. These nine deaths are dreadful, wasteful beyond reckoning. But one has only to listen to the war dead at the Vigil on Amherst Common to realize the people of America who are really fighting this war: people who do not have a voice loud enough to protest or enough information to make intelligent choices. One comes to the California victims and hears the mournful cadence of last names: Alvarez, Alvarez, Alvarez, and then three or five or eight each of Chavez, Mendez, Sanchez, and Vasquelez. Or in New York, proud American sounds: George Washington Jones, George Lincoln Williams, Abraham Lincoln Smith, Jesse Carver Moses -- whole strings of such names. This moratorium and others are to speak for these persons. They are also to speak for all of the living who have changed their minds since President Nixon was elected and who have made no public expression of this change. Moratoria are an answer to the fact of there being no presidential election for three years.

We need to look beyond the Moratorium of October 15th to the possibility of a march on Washington in November, and more work and absence from the comfortable routine. For President Nixon's statement that dissent over the war will "make no difference at all" is an abomination in a participatory democracy where we are reported by Radio Free Europe and other such agencies to have a government for the people and by the people.

Beyond the Moratorium is the need for a much more alert and honest and gritty citizenry. We need to put our names down on documents we believe in. We need a great deal more fortitude. We must learn to read more, think more, stand up and be counted more, because as recent newspapers make clear, we cannot allow the State Department, the Pentagon, or the CIA to do our thinking for us. We as citizens and as intellects have been far too lazy: we have given our influence away through neglect.

Beyond the moratorium is the necessity for more honest talk about the whole military posture in this country, and indeed, the world. Most of us become "professional" students and teachers, often shutting out the pre-eminent concern of any university of scholars: the relationship between human thought and conduct and the quality of human life. Far too often I teach "courses", but hardly enough the speculative implications of ideas.

Last spring, the English department invited a series of distinguished scholars to speak on the state of literary study in the modern world. One rather confident Doctor of Philosophy from a singularly prestigious university asserted that there is nothing whatsoever oblique or questionable about an objective or anticeptic study of literature. While delivering this message he had to stop speaking three times while B-52 bombers flew low over Memorial Hall on their way to Westover Fleid.

The hideousness of the modern world is just that close, just over our heads. How many of us know or care that a single SAC B-52 bomber with a normal load of "Hi" bombs carries more explosive power that has been used in all the wars in all history? Or that we have 600 of such B-52 bombers? And 1,000 land-based ICBM's and 500 long-range polaris missiles, all of which carry warheads in the 1 megaton range? (A megaton is equal to one million tons of TNT; one fiftieth of one megaton killed a hundred thousand people in Hiroshima). Recent development of MIRV will provide ten warheads per missile, or 10,000 land-based ICBM warheads. Such statistics boggle the mind, but they must be comprehended, they must be shaped by poets and artists and scientists into forms which we can assimilate and understand. By a tie vote, the senate has now ratified ABM, and in doing so, has forced Russia to increase its offensive and defensive weapons, and about two weeks ago voted 22 billion dollars for initial appropriations for ABM and related projects. This is all happening in a democracy. Can any of us conceive what 22 billion could do in a positive way? Are we civilized enough or imaginative enough or perhaps human enough to conceive of what that expenditure could accomplish in terms of housing and food production and medical service and clothing and other humane projects? Isn't it time that we began to exercise our capacities as human beings, as civilized minds, toward just such questions?

The horrors we face are not simply centered in Vietnam, but are epitomized by it: how much of a jump is it from the use of chemical defoliants and gasses which demobilize humans to the new agents of mass death? To the use of new aerosol sprays that cause the nerve structure of the brain to deteriorate? To the use of new chemical substances so preternaturally powerful that a speck no larger than a pencil point, upon touching any part of the human skin, produces a massive heart attack, or to the use of viruses and disease germs so unbelievably virulent that no presently known antibiotic agent can prevent their precipitating ghastly plagues over massive areas. It is not the death of six thousand sheep and a few innocent humans alone which should bring about a sense of humanistic outrage, but rather the fact that we as supposedly rational beings should be so impotent and cavalier about the existence of such hideous and monstrous creations of man. The United States presently employs about sixteen thousand of its citizens to dream up and produce CBM on a budget of hundreds of millions of dollars. These are problems which are also beyond the Vietnam Moratorium.

Let us consider a quotation from Norman Moss' new book, Men Who Play God.

"When historians of some future period look back upon this particular time, they may well decide that the bomber pilot is its representative figure; physically fit, mentally alert, brave, the master of fantastic technological creations, soaring high above earth as men once dreamed of doing on precision-tooled wings of metal alloy, inflicting death, injury and pain on people far below whom he does not know, cannot see, and for whom he feels neither hate nor any emotion whatsoever."

The question in looking beyond the present moratorium is whether or not we are implicated with the bomber pilot: it is my belief that we certainly are. We as faculties, students, administrations, why have we been so unresponsive to the atrocity of Vietnam? Because we are not real students or professors of human life, of human values, of human conduct, but rather only of human jobs. If we are not to be simply manipulators of ideas for a living, or for a union card to some stable and affluent living....if we are to be in fact a community of scholars concerned with the preservation and exercise of decent human values (English is not just belles lettres, but also humane letters) then musn't we think about a serious reordering of priorities through accepting responsibility, all of us, for the thought and values of our own time? Implicit in this responsibility of what history has shown is the necessity of standing up to be counted, of asserting one's self, of making college anything but the trade school it was for me.

Slaves are trained. Dogs are trained. But people should be educated, liberated. We must feel more than a pious hope. Not for a long time can there be business as usual. We must address ourselves with more courage and creativity and intelligence and humanity, both as individuals and institutions, to the conditions of all life on this planet.

"As I Was Saying, 'Under No Circumstances Will I Be Affected Whatever By It'"

A Trip to America

"I'm eighty years old, do you kids want to give the south to the Commies? You're all Commies, they've infected you all, next it'll be Japan!"

"Think much, lady?"

"I'm thirty years older than you. I agree that Congress and the president have no right to send boys to die when war is not declared. But if we leave, all of Asia will fall, you kids will be blown to bits by the Commies in thirty years if we don't keep our strength up."

Me. A nation's strength is not only military. It's how the people feel, if they're united, a strength is in our domestic and psychological health, too. It is to our best interests that Vietnam be united under one government, even a Communist one. They hate the Chinese and the Russians. They are nationalists, albeit communists because our democracy ignored them in favor of colonial France once, when they asked for our help. Vietnam could become another Yugoslavia. All Asia won't fall to communism if we give our aid in the right places and in the right ways. No nation will fall if it takes care of its people, which the Saigon government does not.

Later. A father holding his little son's hand as they walk to the common. Suddenly ESP manifests itself, "I love you. I won't send you to die in an abortion of a war. No government of mine can put "honor" above decency."

The Common. Kids, old people, mothers and fathers. There's the little kid who sat next to me at play last week, about ten years old, with a peace sign. Sharp kid. There's hope for America yet.

The best speaker is the men who does the intros. "The real patriots are those who won't go when called." Balboni is so, so right. That line made it all worthwhile.

A dog barks, an apple hits me on the head. Is this it, has the other side come? I hope so. Hearing the speeches, then getting hit, the reaction is the same as when Bobby Kennedy was shot - a hot blind desire to kill the entire white population of Selma, a desire to fight THEM. All the nice calm reason is gone - brutality breeds brutality.

But the apple was harmless, an accident. Calm.

A Black poet spouts loud hate. The point is clear. Only how will the blacks know which whites are on their side? How will you recognize me and mine in a night of violence? How will you tell friends from enemies at that speed?

All over for me, sign a postcard and leave. Nice people all around, sharp looking women, intelligent men, old folks who still love life. "Jesus loves you" signs - well, if we can't destroy opium at least we can make it useful and relevant.

"Can I give you a ride," middle-aged lady to barefoot girls. Brotherhood, all that makes life beautiful, all that makes life what it should be, considerate, thinking people.

When we get the power will we be smarter than Dicky and Lyndon, or blind in other ways?

I think we'll stagger forward a bit. That little kid was pretty sharp.

Jerk

To the 4 or 5 people (?) crammed into the small, open sports car heading north on University Drive near Bell's Monday night. (October 6; 10:10 p.m.)

Once again real talen has expressed itself here at UMass. This time it's throwing cans. I don't know if it was a soda can or a beer can; I can't really tell the difference when something like that flies by my ear. I didn't stop to check it out. (I was jogging at the time.) Well, whoever you are, you probably had a real good laugh. You would would have laughed ever harder if the cop who was just down the road could have turned around fast enough and chased you up Amity Street to wherever you went. I'm sorry I didn't get your license number. SOME JOKE. SOME JERK.

JOHN H. THOMPSON

Queen

Saturday some lucky (?) girl will be crowned Homecoming Queen. In the eyes of many she will represent The Ideal American Woman. Predictably, she uses artificial products to make herself artificially perfect. She's the ideal date, a coquettish flatterer who builds the ego of her man. These are the characteristics our society rewards in a woman.

Yet the Homecoming Queen, along with the majority of American women, is treated more as a senseless shell than as a thinking, feeling human being. And also like most American women she is judged mainly by her physical appearance and her ability to attract men. She and her male counterpart have been brainwashed by our society into perpetuating a vicious cycle of mutual ego masturbation. Both act in the way most likely to elicit admiration and approval, the way she or he is expected to act. Each is afraid to be the one who breaks the cycle. But it can be broken and must be if people ever want to be themselves instead of programmed robots.

We propose that women and men begin to accept themselves for what they are and stop imitating absurd ideals.

By freeing women from the necessity to conform to a standard before they are accepted, men will also be liberated. We must struggle to end the glorification of the female as an object and the prostitution of her soul.

The war in Vietnam is probably one of the most critically debated and obviously obscured issues confronting the people of the United States today. The Government describes it as a power struggle between nations, and a situation where our pride and integrity must be ascertained before we can withdraw. This should be condoned because the Government is "by the people and for the people" and run by people. The result is a personification of all the emotions and characteristics which are embodied in all citizens. And all citizens want to retain a feeling of pride. Yet within this personification must lie the realization that perhaps it is better to swallow one's pride for that which is ultimately more important. I am speaking of human lives.

Of the people who are concerned with the war, some may view it as a mistake or the overextension of powers by a few individuals within the government; but ultimately all view it as a moral issue. These people who oppose it are sincere and I praise them for their determination and willingness to strive for an immediate halt to all the senseless killing. It is through their action that the government may be forced to rearrange their priorities and put human lives before pride.

I can see no justification in anyone condoning or even not opposing the war. I am disheartened by the lack of enthusiasm on the part of many UMass students. Of the 18,000 students it seems that less than 2,000 felt motivated enough to follow some course of action to help stop the war. There is a multitude of excuses to give for not becoming involved: "My own education comes first," "I'm just one person, what can I do?", but no excuse is worth a human life. Our generation will soon be responsible for running this country. I am horrified by the thought that so many people are willing to placidly accept war and killing as necessary or unavoidable. I wonder if the future will be any different from the present.

But for those who are willing to rise above apathy and believe that man can live in peace, bear in mind one point. The Moratorium should not be held for only the end of the Vietnam War - it should symbolize the beginning of the end of all war. We, as human beings, are civilized to an extent that we should and must be able to solve our differences without resorting to fighting like undomesticated animals. It has been said that we have entered the Age of Reason, but I can see no reason, no justification, and no logic in killing. The liveable space on our planet is growing crucially small, if we are to survive we must learn to exist together - in peace.

Violence

In your October 5th issue of the Daily Collegian was printed a letter by one Thomas Cardello, a professional comedian, no doubt. I do not object to Mr. Cardello's description of me as some type of wandering revolutionary, saber in teeth and a pistol in each of my three hands; nor do I object to, in fact I am flattered by, his raising me to the position of a subversive organization. But other than these very questionable statements, I do object to his quoting me out of context (whatever that means) without any attempt on his part to relate the substance of my editorial which he quotes.

Slander

In Friday's COLLEGIAN there appeared a letter which pointed out that students who eat in Hampshire Dining Commons between 1:00 and 1:30 p.m. have to stand in line and be deprived of extra helpings of food. The "idiotic" reason for this, according to Mr. Boiselle, is that only one of the four serving lines is being operated because the ladies from the other three are all eating their dinners. Mr. Boiselle further contends that "the sweet ladies are using nasty language because they have to work an extra ten minutes to get the line through."

As a student worker at Hampshire Dining Commons, I am outraged. If there is anything lacking in the services at Dining Commons #5, it is not the fault of the management or the help. If Mr. Boiselle took a little time to investigate the situation, he would discover that there are two shifts at Dining Commons #5, both critically understaffed. Yes, Mr. Boiselle, there is only one line at 1:00, but not because the ladies from the other three lines are eating dinner. To begin with, there are only two serving lines because there is not enough staff to open three or four. In the second place, some of the ladies you see eating at 1:30 have been working since 6:00 a.m. and are just then having their lunch before leaving at 2:00. The rest of the ladies are on the second shift which starts at 2:00, and they have to eat before the food gets taken away and preparations for the evening meal begin.

Mr. Boiselle is not only spreading misinformation, he is also falsely accusing the ladies who work in the Dining Commons of using nasty language. The nastiest thing I have ever heard from any of those ladies is, "Only one dessert at a time, please." This bit of slander is no small matter when the personalities involved are considered, and I feel that Mr. Boiselle owes these ladies an apology.

I am not denying that students are inconvenienced by having to stand in lines, nor do I think that students should be forced to buy meal tickets. However, it is pointless and inconsiderate to place the blame on the workers of Dining Commons #5.

LOUIS SALZA

In your October 9th issue of the Daily Collegian was printed a letter by one Thomas Cardello, a professional comedian, no doubt. I do not object to Mr. Cardello's description of me as some type of wandering revolutionary, saber in teeth and a pistol in each of my three hands; nor do I object to, in fact I am flattered by, his raising me to the position of a subversive organization. But other than these very questionable statements, I do object to his quoting me out of context (whatever that means) without any attempt on his part to relate the substance of my editorial which he quotes.

Unlike Mr. C, who seems to have saved all my old editorials from the ADVOCATE of Lowell, I do not have that product of my fecund, "radical" mind. But allowing for some deterioration of my mind due to my attendence at American institutions of higher indoctrination, I do recall that the purpose of this editorial was not to encourage the use of revolutionary, or red, terror. On the contrary, the editorial called for the beginning of the white terror, that is, government and university repression and supression of student radicals? After this action by the government, I said, the revolutionaries could "take the next logical step in the Revolutionary movement - the use of Revolutionary Terror."

As a theoritician, and not a revolutionary myself, I assumed this reasoning in the belief that the violence of the revolutionary must not exceed that of the established power, and that this power by its ever increasing use of repression and violence will make converts for the revolutionaries each time it employs these methods against students. For example, the student radical, like myself, is a student first and a radical as a hobby. But if he goes to Chicago this weekend and gets his head busted by a pig in the street fighting that SDS has planned, or if the university, for political reasons, expels him or cuts the aid that makes it possible for him to be a student, it is the established powers who have negated his existence as a student leaving him only one road to follow. Abracadabra, the former student is reborn the revolutionary.

Thus not only does confrontation make converts, but if the established powers use violence against the radicals with "the whole world watching", the revolutionaries can then match this violence with terror of their own. And here let me quote Herbert Marcuse who said at Boston University last year that "the violence on the oppressor can not be equated with the violence of the oppressed. For the former is used to maintain oppression while the latter seeks to destroy it." And if Marcuse doesn't exactly give you orgasms, perhaps the words of Thoreau who said, commenting on John Brown's Raid, "For once the guns were in the right hands," will bring you to the realization that violence, like all else in our lives, is not absolutely good or bad and is a complex instrument, at times welcomed, at times abhorred. It is my belief that our present society is repressive, morally impoverished and totally absurd. Such being the case, the people have the right to employ whatever means they deem necessary to remedy the situation.

Finally, if I may refer to Mr. C's reference to the Oct. 15 moratorium as a mass class cut and nothing more. He is wrong. From all reports it seems the majority of the students at this university lack the balls to take part in the moratorium without their father's (the administration's) consent. If mass support for a pussey-liberal epic like the Oct. 15th moratorium can not be aroused, I do not see why Mr. C should fear either me or the SDS here on campus. Yet with the radicals thick-headness and abyssmal audacity I would like to join the author of another letter which appeared in the issue of the 6th, K. Broad, in calling for massive sit-ins on the 15th. Is this possible at a university where the students have always shows a resistence to fucking the system that is fucking them, and where the all mighty grade is constantly chosen over moral principle?

Poem

I shuttle back and forth, reporting
And reported, canvassed and canvassing.
At the first house I approach on Amity,
A boy leans on his bike, is shooting caps
From a gun the light's catch.
On the roof of the porch, the painter
Lies unmoving - dead, under the sill he paints.

Halloween is coming. I can see
Night's children, loving arms,
The thousand shocking masks of gods
And demons. Children play and are Rewarded. We are older, old as war . . .
And though we love their games, we think
Of what we know, and ask insistently:
When will our toys, our filthy lucre,
Become clean?

I put my money in the pumpkin,
Sign the Moratorium petition, sign
The card. I walk upon the Common.
Nixon may disappear into the coins
And candy, reading information,
Looking at the writing. Like a boy,
He is attracted to the human.
He's confused, though not confusing.
The pumpkin grins at him.
He will throw the cards away.

That may be: but it is our day,
OUR day, to lead the unlived lines
Out of our souls and bodies.
WE THE PEOPLE the sun, beckons
And the autumn foliage, the brisk breeze . . .
Easily we are lifted up by these,
The speeches, the parade, the dreams . . .

We talk and talk - our words are angels
Salving our healing torsos, our beautiful
Necks and faces. Utterances are too weak
For the slaughtered innocent we cannot save,
Who cannot hear; but for the others . . .
For we have heaved and gagged
In the dry torpid heat of summer
On the thousand choking voices in the trees,
The thousand murders. They whisper to us
Now, and we are heard.

Our live for love draws out our sap and leaves,
Is unconditional, and mocks death's stare.
Who is afraid this winter of the perennial freeze?
Our moments out-of-doors will save the years.
We touch one another, and make Peace.

A Polaroid is clicking: news is here.
Others - the puritans, the hidden - who peer
Out of the forest's edge and gloom
Witness our celebration. What we revel
And make happen, the wind carries:
Spirits of ourselves,
The will to be free.

Militants Attempt Break Into White House Grounds

WASHINGTON (AP) - Violence broke out in front of the White House yesterday afternoon when a group of youthful black militants, joining antiwar demonstrators, threatened an attempt to break into the grounds.

More than a score of the militants converged on the northwest gate of the White House-the main guardpost - and shoved their way into an iron fenced enclosure inside the boundaries of the executive mansion.

U. S. Park Police unlimbered their clubs and moved in on the group, taking three of the young people into custody.

This touched off a fist-swinging melee that was quickly brought under control when several dozen uniformed officers converged on the scene and formed a human wall in front of the gate.

Other police officers then formed a cordon and pushed the demonstrators down Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Treasury Building.

Within minutes, officers had cleared the entire length of the avenue infront of the White House a full block in length.

Rallies Held Across Nation

In New York a crowd estimated by newsmen at 10,000 gathered outside the United Nations. Most of those attending were young people, although it had been billed as a "businessmen's rally."

A crowd of 15,000 gathered at the Cambridge Common near Boston for a rally and planned a march to the Boston Common. In remarks prepared for delivery to the group at the Boston Common, Sen. George McGovern D-S. Dak., said "the most urgent and responsible act of American citizenship in 1969 is to bring all possible pressure on the administration to order our troops out of Vietnam now."

Philadelphia Police Commissioner Frank L. Rizzo estimated 15,000 persons attended a rally at the city's John F. Kennedy Plaza. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin said an estimated 50,000 persons in the Philadelphia area observed the moratorium.

In Minneapolis; a crowd estimated by police at 10,000 jammed a one-block area in front of the old federal building for a series of speeches. About half the crowd had marched from the 41,000-student University of Minnesota.

In Vietnam, about 15 infantrymen wore black armbands on a patrol, but there was little other sign of support for the Moratorium among the more than 500,000 American fighting men there. In capitals around the world, students staged orderly demonstrations supporting the moratorium. Many of the participants were Americans.

Originated by dissidents who want an immediate pullout from Vietnam, the moratorium movement was joined and temperated by more moderate war opponents.

Bill D. Moyers, a high aide to the Lyndon B. Johnson administration, told an overflow crowd of more than 900 at a service in Trinity Church in the Wall Street district that the war should be ended in whatever way the President could.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., declared in Boston that the United States should announce "an irrevocable decision" to withdraw all ground combat troops from Vietnam within one year, and other forces by the end of 1972. He addressed the World Affairs Council.

Expressing the feelings of many opponents of the moratorium, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., declared that moratorium participants "are playing into the hands of the people whose business it is to kill American fighting men." Goldwater, Republican candidate for President in 1964, spoke to GOP women in Anaheim, Calif.

Tonight several subcommittees of the Martin Luther King Council's Committee on Poverty will meet to finalize individual projects. The meetings will be held at Alpha Chi Omega sorority house, 40 Nutting Avenue. According to Committee chairman Ken Mosakowski, meeting times will be as follows: Subcommittee on Organization, 6:30 p.m.; Subcommittee on Malnutrition 7:30 p.m.; Subcommittee on Consumer Exploitation, 8:00 p.m.; Subcommittee on Political Impotence, 8:30 p.m. Members of these subcommittees are urged to attend.

The Boston Rally: Giving Peace A Chance

By RON LaBRECQUE
Senior Reporter

BOSTON - In early morning they began to trickle into Boston Common in groups of two's and three's. By 11 a.m. there were 30,000. Shortly after noon they started arriving in larger groups until finally at around three in the afternoon they were arriving in parades of 10,000 or more.

One hundred thousand of them and they were of one purpose and goal -- peace now.

But Wednesday in Boston wasn't just a demonstration, it was the entire masacree movement in four part harmony.

It had begun early in the day, with canvassing by students all over greater Boston. In downtown Boston doctors and nurses, wearing the white coats of their profession marked for the day with armbands which displayed the simple word "peace" , passed out postcards ultimately destined for the White House.

It is too early to attempt a guess at what influence the national moratorium will have. But the numerous events in Boston alone were of such seeming import that even a President who has stated he will not be affected will have to take note of them.

While thousands canvassed and tens of thousands of others waited on Boston Common, the Senior Senator from Massachusetts was outlining his Vietnam policy to the World Affairs Council of Boston.

He had spoken earlier to a group of bankers and at that meeting Ted Kennedy's face was grim. He spoke briefly, a courtesy call. He left quickly checking notes on a large pad of yellow paper as he left.

Two hours later he was on the dais in the Hotel Somerset. Grim, sipping coffee. He is introduced.

"We meet to discuss the war in Vietnam. We meet on a day when millions of Americans are letting it be known that they, too, feel the war must end. I am familiar with those who set this day apart, and regardless of the day's success I know them to be moderate, sensitive, and deeply concerned."

He speaks with authority. "We talk with greater frankness now about Vietnam. The harshness of the real world has finally overtaken us. Finally there is light at the end of the tunnel -- but it is not the pleasant glow of victory, It is the glare of difficult compromise."

He says his criticism is not directed at the office of the President. Ted Kennedy had once supported "earlier decisions that involved us in this conflict." He "respectfully" suggests that the President not shoulder the errors of past policy but "speak to us of his own policy."

He announces his schedule for troop withdrawals. Applause. He leaves and he now is smiling.

Out side on Commonwealth Avenue they are walking to the Common. They are also walking from Cambridge and Newton.

A word from the speakers platform and on the Common go up two hundred thousand hands, two hundred thousand hands forming peace signs.

Professor Everett Mendelsohn of Harvard asks "what do we want?" and the crowd roars "peace" and he asks "when do we want it" and the crowd roars back "now".

Sen. Kennedy

Sen. McGovern

Sen. George McGovern, smiling, confident, tells the throng he has reason to believe President Nixon will respond to the nationwide Vietnam Moratorium. Overhead a skywriting plane etches a peace sign against the bright blue sky.

'The most responsible act of American citizenship in 1969 is to bring all possible pressure to bear on the administration to order our troops out of Vietnam now".

Sen McGovern leaves little alternative for "there is no way under the sun to end this war except to remove out troops."

Other speakers make impassioned pleas. The audience is most moved by Professor Howard Sinn of Boston University.

But the speakers keep their remarks short. They have made their point. They look to the future now. The future is November 14 and the city is Washington D. C.

All they were saying was give peace a chance.

Taupler, although he thanked the group for their fine conduct in the city, allegedly did not allow a welfare recipient to speak during the rally.

The welfare recipient finally was allowed to speak, and denounced the Vietnam conflict, saying the money spent there could be better utilized in the domestic war on poverty.

They walked softly into Northampton Wednesday night - 2000 people - and sang their song: "All we are saying is give peace a chance."

As they shuffled quietly to the Unitarian church that couldn't hold them all (the memorial service was held outside), the blocks were lined with town police and county sherrifs "taking the same precautions we would for any large gathering", according to police officials.

Cries of "Peace! Now!" echoed off walls as the crowds asked those on the thinly-lined sidewalks to join them.

One man, just-emerged from a bar, stood for the length of the parade and waved the peace sign as an old woman frowned at him.

The parade, which ran the length of the business section, met with Smith College students in front of the church. Police stopped traffic on Main Street as the crowd sat on the lawn and spilled out over the sidewalks.

The entire mood of the service seemed soft, but with a strong message - stop the killing and bring the troops home.

"Our appeal has been to reason and conscience today, and we have shown that violence is not needed to show our opinion.," a speaker began. A cry from the crowd interrupted, "The only violence is in Vietnam."

A musical group led the crowd through "Blowin' in the Wind", with the lyric "Ain't gonna study war no more"), and two South Vietnamese poems depicting the tragedy of war were read.

All stood as the names of the 24 Hampshire County Vietnam war dead were read.

More songs followed with strong lyrics: 'One man's hands can't bring an end to war, but if two and two and fifty make a million, we'll see it end someday..."

Police said there were no incidents and aside from the traffic tieups, the events moved smoothly. It ended an hour and a half after it began, and people returning to Amherst in cars parked at the Northampton fairgrounds reformed and marched quietly out of town singing their song: "All we are saying.....is give peace a chance."

An added thrust to Homecoming weekend will be seen Saturday and Sunday as Butterfield House of Central area goes into orbit with a giant, FREE, folkrock festival on Butterfield Lawn.

From 11 a.m. until sunset on the 18th and 19th, folk, rock, jazz, and blues will be alternately soothing and blasting appreciative minds. Groups from campus and vicinity will donate talent and time for no compensation but to have as many people as possible listen to what they have to say. The advance they make is to say - please come.

James Schevill to Read At UMass this Evening

James Schevill, noted poet and dramatist, will read his works at the University of Massachusetts Thursday, Oct. 16, at 8 p.m. in 227 Herter Hall, sponsored by the UMass Master of Fine Arts Program in English and the Northern New England Poetry Circuit.

His latest works include "Violence and Glory: Poems 1962-1968", "Release" (poems), "The Buddhist Car", and "The Black President and Other Plays". His works have been included in numerous anthologies of plays and poetry, including "One Hundred Post-War Poems", edited by M. L. Rosenthal, and "Fifty-three American Poets", edited by Ruth Witt-Diamant.

Poems by Mr. Schevill have also been included in several textbooks for secondary schools and colleges, and his works have been presented on radio and television.

Schevill, a native of Berkeley, Calif., was graduated from Harvard University. He taught at San Francisco State College and was the director of the Poetry Center there for six years. He is presently a professor of English at Brown University.

Soviet Spaceships Activity Arouses Much Skepticism

MOSCOW (AP) - The three manned Soviet spaceships carried out navigation maneuvers in orbit Wednesday increasing speculation that their mission would not produce the anticipated construction of an orbiting space station.

Soviet sources had said that Soyuz 6, 7 and 8 with seven cosmonauts on board would construct the first space platform. These sources said the ships would come together and start work no later than Wednesday afternoon, Moscow time.

Since the flight program has not been divulged, it seemed possible that the predicted space feat will take place later. The official announcements said all three Soyuzes were working normally and their crews felt fine.

But some evidence pointed toward flight difficulties that could have caused abandonment of ambitious plans for a space breakthrough.

Reports circulated in Moscow Tuesday night that Soyuz 7 and 8 were to link up as a first step toward construction of a platform. Then, after a long news blackout, Tass announced only that the two ships had maneuvered close together.

A further indication that a space station won't be built during the current space shot came in a Tass report Wednesday that said:

"The crews tested the techniques of piloting spaceships in the orbit which is necessary in the future for establishment of space laboratories and for ensuring their long-time functioning."

The reference to the future implied that construction space laboratory was not part of the current seven-man mission.

Tass said Soyuz 7 and Soyuz 8 maneuvered to within 500 yards of each other, making it possible for the crews to observe each other through portholes. Following custom, the two Soyuzes dipped their wing-like solar battery panels to each other.

The men aboard Soyuz 6, flying at an unspecified distance away, watched the rendezvous, the brief report said.

In its only broadcast from space so far Wednesday Soyiet television briefly showed commander Col. Vladimir Shatalov writing something in a log-book.

Honors Program Betters Education

By ROBERT MANGIARATTI
Staff Reporter

The College of Arts and Science's new Honors Program aims at providing intelligent and motivated students with special educational opportunities for all of their four years.

It tries to meet complaints by eliminating repetitious subject matter from its courses and allowing its students to waive some required courses.

Of the 120 students in the program, 85 are freshman. Freshmen are permitted to take upper level and special courses created to be more challenging and tailored to student interests. A student in the program can take courses like THE THEORY OF RELATIVITY or THE ORIGINS OF CIVILIZATION instead of some of the required freshman survey courses.

According to Professor Everett Emerson, chairman of the program, there are three broad categories of students: 1) serious students who are satisfied with their education, 2) students who are not serious about their education or concerned about its quality, and 3) students who are eager to learn but are dissatisfied with the standard educational channels. The Honors Program is primarily concerned with this third group of students.

Honors students were selected on the basis of high school and college grades, College Board Scores and an interview.

The program, begun this fall, is for the entire college but, Professor Emerson noted this year there is a disproportionate number of physics and Russian majors. The science departments have not been growing as rapidly as the rest of the University and so have been unable to spare faculty for the program he explained. Professor Emerson said "Unlike other departments, sciences cannot increase their faculty numbers without more lab and research facilities being built."

He said the program is not available to enough students. He believes that there are many more above average students who are eager to learn and who belong in the program. Also, many more of these students will be coming to the University because of its steady growth and its low tuition.

In light of this increasing need, Professor Emerson considers himself "a pressure group for serious and able students who are eager to obtain a first rate education." He welcomes inquiries and help at his office in Machmer E23.

Paint and Party It's Holloween

Halloween is here again. On Wednesday, October 29, 1969, the Student Union Program Council is sponsoring the Annual Faculty and Married Student Children's Halloween Party. The Halloween Party will be from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth room. Casper, Daffy Duck, Speedy Gonzales and Tweety cartoons will be shown.

Spoon races, pin-the tail on the donkey, and bobbing for apples are some of the games scheduled. All children of university faculty, staff and students are invited to join the fun.

The Special Events Committee of the Student Union Program Council is again sponsoring the Halloween Painting Contest at the Student Union. All dormitories, fraternities, sororities, and R.S.O. groups are urged to enter. Painting will begin on October 21 and must be completed by October 28. Judging will be on October 29 and the winner will be announced in THE DAILY COLLEGIAN on October 29. Applications are available in the R.S.O. office on October 16, 1969, and must be returned to the R.S.O. office by October 23. Only one window will be available to each group and water base paint must be used.

Labor Symposium Features Professor Seligman Today

Ben. B. Seligman, professor of economics and director of the Labor Relations and Research Center at the University of Massachusetts, will be the principal speaker at a symposium sponsored by Holyoke Community College and the U. S. Department of Labor.

The theme will be "The New Technology: Automation and the Worker." The symposium will be held at the auditorium of the Holyoke Soldier's Home Oct. 16, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Professor Silligman will discuss "Effects of the New Technology". Among the other speakers will be Edward T. O'Donnell of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, who will speak on the "Labor Outlook to 1980", and Professor Leonard T. Militello of Holyoke Community College, who will discuss "The Computer and Business Conservatism". The health aspects of the new technology will be discussed by Harold Bayley, chief engineer of the Massachusetts Division of Occupational Hygiene.

Professor Seligman is the author of many books and articles, including "Most Notorious Victory-Man in an age of Automation", a pioneer study of the effects of automation on human beings.

The symposium will be open to the public, free of charge.

UMass Grad Recieves Scholarship

A University of Massachusetts graduate will share a $3000 graduate scholarship in music composition with a graduate of the University of Colorado, according to Richard Hervig, of the University of Iowa music department and head of the selection committee.

Bruce MacCoombie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin S. MacCoombie of 467 Warren St., Swansea, Mass., and Dennis Riley of Lakewood, Colo. have been awarded the Sutherland Dows Graduate Scholarship. They were chosen after their compositions were selected by the committee. Each will receive $1500.

MacCoombie received both his bachelor's degree in music and his M.A. from UMass. He has been at Iowa for a year working on his Ph. D. degree. Some of his works were performed last year during a Composer's Symposium which is held each semester to perform new compositions at the U. of I.

Gov Research Hosts Confab

The Bureau of Goverament Research at the University of Massachusetts will host a regional conference of the American Society for Public Administration Oct. 16 and 17.

The conference theme will be "Intergovernmetal Relations in the New England States".

The main conference speaker will be Dr. John Ryan, vice president for Regional Campuses at Indiana University, who will speak on "The Status of Public Administration". Dr. Ryan is the former chancellor at UMass-Boston.

Who's Who Committee Requests Nominations for Consideration

Selection of nominees for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities is presently being conducted by a campus committee appointed by Bruce Balboni, President of the Student Senate.

Methods of selection and committee members remain anonymous. However, the basic criteria used for selection of nominees includes the student's scholarship, leadership and cooperation in educational and extracurricular activites, general citizenship, and promise of future usefulness. Each nominee will be recommended for the University and then accepted by the national organization.

The task of selecting a well-rounded representation of exceptional students is indeed a great responsobility for the nominating committee. In an attempt to consider all eligible students for this honor, the committee would like to solicit student support. Recommendations of qualified students, preferable seniors, will be given the maximum amount of consideration.

Please submit your nominations to the R.S.O. office in the Student Union by Friday, October 24, as the committee is working within a time limit. For additional information, please call Lois Frey at 545-2532.

Blood Donors Needed

Student Volunteers for the annual Red Cross Blood Drive have been recruiting blood donor pledges on campus for the past week and a half. A great number of students and faculty have already registered to donate blood on Nov. 4,5, and 6.

The blood donor program is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, Gamma Sigma Sigma, and the University Women, in co-operation with the Hampshire County Red Cross. Each donor will become a member of the Hampshire County American Red Cross Insurance program. Under this program, the donor and his immediate family are eligible to receive free blood for one year after donation.

Anyone in normal health, weighing at least 110 lbs., between the ages of 18 and 65 is eligible to donate blood. Parental permission is not required of students between the ages of 18 and 21.

Blood donations are still urgently needed. A table will be in the lobby of the Student Union now through Oct. 17 for all people interested in donating blood.

Get-Together

The University Women cordially invite all Foreign Students and their families to a Fall "Get-together" at the First Congregational Church, 165 Main Street, on Sunday, October 26 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Light refreshments will be served; fun and games are planned for the children. New families are especially urged to attend, as well as all other interested people in the community.

Peace Action Day Causes Little Stir in Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) - The nationwide antiwar demonstration in the United States caused a ripple but apparently no waves Wednesday among the half-million American troops whose presence in South Vietnam was at issue in the Moraotium Day protest.

The only battlefield protest reported was the wearing of black armbands by members of a platoon of U. S. infantrymen on patrol near Chu Lai, some 360 miles northeast of Saigon. There was no way of knowing immediately, however, if there were similar antiwar expressions by other GIs scattered throughout the country.

Associated Press photographer Charles Ryan said more than half of the 30 men in one American Division platoon wore the antiwar armbands and the platoon leader, 1st. Lt. Jesse Rosen of New York City, told him: "It's just my way of silently protesting. Personnally, I think the demonstrating should go on until President Nixon gets the idea that every American should be pulled out of here now."

Earlier in the day, Rosen's men had killed two Viet Cong, one a woman armed with a Chinese-made rifle. Four troopers in an adjoining platoon were wounded by a grenade booby trap.

A group of 20 American civilians assembled at the U. S. Embassy to deliver a petition with 32 signatures calling for the immediate withdrawal of U. S. troops from South Vietnam. Four demonstrators were received by Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, and a spokesman said Bunker agreed to transmit their one-paragraph petition to Nixon.

Most of the civilians, who were heckled by a man who called himself a "Hungarian freedom fighter," work for religious and social organizations in Saigon. A U. S. mission spokesman said he did not believe any of the protesting civilians were government employees.

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of American forces in Vietnam, said he did not expect the antiwar moratorium to make any difference on the battlefield. "We've got our job to do here and that's what we're doing," he said.

It reported from its hidden transmitter that "20 young Americans have gathered in front of the U. S. embassy" to ask for the withdrawal of U. S. troops and that "many American GIs in downtown Saigon" had pieces of black cloth pinned to their uniforms to show their support of the moratorium.

In Most Respects, Frosh Impressive in BU Win

tunately the frosh were unable to score because of the inconsistent play of the offensive line and the third quarter ended scoreless.

Early in the fourth period Boston University attempted to punt on its 30 yard line. UMass put on a heavy rush, forcing the punter from the pocket and tackling him before he could get the kick off.

Taking over from the Pups' 30 UMass finally put together a drive. Alternating quarterbacks Murray and Len Matuza, and running backs Ray Bouchard and Bill Daenz, they drove the ball to the BU four yard line. Here Bouchard smashed through the middle for the score.

UMass attempted a two-point conversion but it failed.

The final two points came midway through the fourth quarter when linebacker Jack Hikes and defensive end Doug Winslow tackled a BU runner in the end zone for a safety.

Frosh coach Dave Kelley termed the win a team victory, stating he felt his team just outhit BU and that they wanted to win more than did the Terrier Pups.

He thought the team showed good spirit and made up for its mistakes with aggressive play. Individuals cited by Kelley were the three quarterbacks, Murray, Matuza and Kirk Hoover; and the defensive starters Hikes, Winslow, and Rich Cronin who intercepted a pass late in the fourth quarter to stop BU's only drive in the second half. Also cited were Daenz and John Welsh.

Probably the biggest surprise was Dunkanidz's kicking. Dunkanidz punted five times for an amazing average of 61 yards per attempt.

However, Kelley emphasized he was quite displeased with the inconsistent play of the offensive line, and the poor execution and technique of play by both the offensive and defensive units.

He felt his team still has a long way to go before achieving cohesion and a level of desirable play. Kelley's objective is to prepare the individuals for varsity competition by developing their ability and determining whether or not the individual has the character and desire to be a good football player.

Collins All YanCon

UMass linebacker Dennis Collins has been chosen as the best defensive player of the week in the Yankee Conference off of his superlative effort against Boston University. Maine end Geue Benner and Vermont defensive back John Pelcher were selected as the top offensive and sophomore players for their weekend performances on Saturday.

Collins, a 6'0 -185 lb. sophomore, made 11 tackles and intercepted a fourth-period pass as UMass edged previously-undefeated Boston U. 14-9 to make its record 2-2. Collins' defensive work helped the Redmen hold the Terriers to 51 yards rushing.

Benner, a senior split end, caught five passes for 131 yards and a touchdown, set up another touchdown with a reception and caught a two-point conversion pass as Maine upset New Hampshire 20-18. It was the Black Bears' third straight win and made their Conference record 2-1.

COLLINS

Pelcher, a sophomore back, intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble and broke up several passes as Vermont beat Rhode Island 41-14. Pelcher received the Catamount of the week award in helping Vermont win its second straight for a 2-2 record.

Other nominations were: Offensive - quarterback Bob Hopkins (New Hampshire), halfback Bob Rodger (Vermont), quarterback Bob Ehrhardt (Rhode Island) and halfback Jerry Grasso (UMass); Defense - safety Joe Hochadel Maine), tackle Nelson Cassavaugh (New Hampshire) and linebacker Bill McMullen (Rhode Island); Sophomore - fullback Bob Marchildon (Maine), halfback Hampton Ballard (New Hampshire) and center Dave Levine (UMass).

Destiny's Children: Mets 2, O's 1

NEW YORK (AP) - Relief pitcher Pete Richert's wild throw to first that hit pinch-hitter J.C. Martin gave the New York Mets a 2-1 triumph in the 10th inning over the befuddled Baltimore Orioles yesterday and moved the Mets to within one victory of their first world championship.

Cuellar had long since departed when the Mets finally pulled it out in the 10th on a combination of Jerry Grote's sun-struck double, an intentional walk to Al Weis and Richert's error on Martin's bunt.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead into the ninth on Donn Clendenon's second-inning home run but the Orioles struck back to tie in the ninth on singles by Frank Robinson and Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson's sacrifice fly on which Ron Swoboda made a diving catch.

Dick Hall took over for Eddie Watt, the second Oriole's pitcher, at the start of the Mets' 10th and went to a 3-2 count on Grote before the catcher hit a fly ball to short left. Don Buford apparently lost the ball in the sun and it fell just beyond the grasp of shortstop Mark Belanger for a two-base hit.

The strategy of Baltimore's fill - in manager, Billy Hunter, who replaced Earl Weaver when the latter was chased by umpire Shag Crawford in the third inning called for an intentional walk to Weis.

George Bamberger, the Orioles' pitching coach, came out to talk to Hall and then motioned for Richert to take over when he saw Martin, a left-handed batter, come out on deck to hit for Seaver.

Martin squared away on Richert's first pitch and bunted the ball in front of the plate. Richert fielded the ball and threw toward first, but the ball hit the runner and rolled away into the hole toward second base.

Pinch-runner Rod Gaspar running for Grote, scored all the way from second base while the joyful Martin hopped up and down on the base paths between.

With a 3-1 edge in games, the Mets now have a chance to close out the Series right here at Shea Stadium in the fifth game Thursday. It will be Jerry Koozman, Sunday's winner against Baltimore's Dave McNally.

In the modern history of baseball, since World Series have been decided on a best-of-seven basis, only three teams ever have bounced back from a 3-1 deficit. They were the 1925 Pittsburgh Pirates, 1958 New York Yankees and the 1968 Detroit Tigers.

Swoboda had three of the Mets' 10 hits and contributed the big catch that saved the game on Brooks Robinson's drive in the ninth. The tying run scored on the sacrifice fly but the go-ahead run probably would have come around if the ball had gone through the diving right fielder.

The Orioles had to operate without their regular manager from the third on after plate umpire Shag Crawford had thumbed out Weaver for protesting from the bench on a called strike to Belanger.

The largest crowd ever to see a game at Shea Stadium 57,367 watched Seaver steady down after his third-inning trouble and retire 10 men in a row from the third to the sixth.

There were no protests on the field from any Vietnam moratorium supporters and the flag flew at full mast on orders of commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The slumping Orioles now have scored only two runs in losing the last three games and have only seven runs and 18 hits to show for four games. The American League champs, called by some the best team in recent baseball history, have only one double and one homer, both by Buford in the opener.

Hornless Rams UMass' Homecoming Fare

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Winners generally headline the activities of a homecoming weekend. However, UMass' football foe for Saturday's Homecoming Game is the University of Rhode Island, whose 0-4 record excludes it from the winners' category. But because it is Homecoming the unlikely Rams should help the Redmen pull their biggest crowd of the season into Alumni Stadium for the 1:30 tilt.

Last weekend URI was whipped by Vermont 41-14 and the week before it lost to a Maine team that UMass humbled 49-7. The Rams also lost their first two contests to Temple and Brown.

Believe it or not but the Rams offense has scored only 24 points, which means that before last Saturday it had registered a meager 10 points in three games. The defense hasn't helped the cause much; it has surrendered 144 points thus far, more than twice the amount the Redmen have allowed.

Quarterback is the brightest position on the Ram offense. Handling the chores is Bob Ehrhardt, a 6'1-180 sophomore with a very promising future. Presently he ranks third among Yankee Conference hurlers having completed 37 out of 68 passes for 452 yards and one touchdown.

Backup strength at quarterback is ample, provided by 6'2-185 junior Kurt Wicks and 6'1-200 senior Tom "The Bomb" Fay. "The Bomb" has seen considerable action behind Ehrhardt this season.

Starting in the two running back slots for URI are 6'-205 Dick Narcessian, a junior, and 6'-170 Warren Houston, a sophomore. Narcessian has gained 189 yards thus far in '69 to rank ninth in the conference. Houston, on the other hand, leads the team in receiving with 14 grabs for 95 yards. Pat Spitaletta, a 5'6-170 senior, is an experienced reserve.

Other pass catchers for the Rams are 6'3-220 soph Tom Uhlig at tight end and 6'-170 junior Steve Stramm at split end. Depth at tight end comes from former halfback Mark McGroary, 6'1-193.

The offensive line features only one senior; he is Jay Monaghan, a 6'0-200 guard. The remainder of the line comprises experienced junior Gerry Sullivan, 6'2-212 at the other guard, inexperienced junior Tom Cataldo, 6'3-225, and sophomore John Gregg, 6'3-220, at the tackle spots and 6'4-200 junior John Devaney, a past defensive tackle, at center.

Offset by an attack force that rarely scores, the Ram defense has seen too much playing time for its own good. It is showing signs of weariness from overwork.

The ends on the defensive front four are seniors Greg Bogdanich, 6'3 - 235, and Warren Negri, 6'2-230. Both have been solid performers for two years for URI; Negri is one of the team's co-captains.

Handling the linebacking chores will be soph Bill McMullen, 6'2-212 in the middle, and juniors Doug Randall 6'2-200 and Paul Carney, 5'-11-170 on the outsides.

There is considerable depth here, provided by Dave McGrail, a 5'2-230 junior, and Mike Healy, a 5'2-195 senior and the other co-captain with Negri.

Before the present season got underway, URI adopted the slogan of "Nine for nine in '69," referring of course to a goal of nine victories in as many attempts. Unfortunately for the Rams, they are headed in the opposite direction. It appears highly unlikely that their present course will be altered by the Redmen.

UMass Harriers Trample URI, UVM

At the start in front of WOPE the Vermont and Rhody runners ripped off to a fast first uphill half mile; the maroon shirted Redmen started conservatively until junior Ron Wayne took over the lead at the three-quarter mile. There, slow starting co-captain Leo Duart began to move and Tom Derderian took third position behind Vermont's Bill Learned. The mile mark found Wayne leading by about ten seconds with Derderian in second, the Vermonter a few steps behind and Duart picking up speed. The race swung down President's Hill in front of the infirmary and up Baker Hill, where, the Vermonter having dropped back, UMass senior Dave Evans moved into second place for a few strides until Derderian took back his number two spot. Passing the starting area at the half way mark they ran, Wayne, Derderian, Evans, UMass Junior Larry Paulson and Duart, now wound up to full speed. They attacked the grassy uphill third mile looking like a practice with the golden Vermont shirts far behind and the powder blue Rhody shirts completely out of sight. Duart now flew uphill on the grass and passed teammate after teammate until he had the second slot, but for the last two miles of the five mile course he may as well have tried to catch the wind as Ron Wayne had too large a lead and won by 19 seconds.

The Little Redmen Tom Jasmin and Tom Swain lead a powerful assault on the Vermont and Rhode Island frosh. Jasmin and Swain lead from the start and supported by Phil Riley, Rick Barry and Mike Daly produced another lopsided score, UMass 18, URI 49, Vt. 71. The freshman due to these impressive results must be considered tops in the conference and possibly in New England.

Both teams will meet Boston College Friday at Franklin Park seeking to improve their records, 5-1 for the freshman and 3-3 for the varsity.

BY DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

The UMass frosh gridsters successfully opened their season last Monday afternoon at Boston University by trouncing the BU Pups, 24-13. The game was typical of previous BU-UMass encounters in that it was extremely physical and hard-hitting from the opening whistle to the final play.

The Little Redmen won the toss and elected to receive. On the ensuing kickoff Joe Grasso fumbled and BU recovered on its own 45 yard line. Joe Leone blasted off right tackle for 53 yards. Two plays later Leone bulled his way over from the two, the conversion was good and BU led, 7-0.

UMass then drove for two first downs, but they were forced to punt. Barefooted punter Andy Dunkanidz sent BU deep into their own territory. The Little Redmen held and BU punted the ball to split end Steve Shubert.

Shubert gathered the ball on the UMass 40 yard line and quickly showed BU his heels as he went 60 yards for the touchdown. Dunkanidz made the point after and the score was tied, 7-7.

On the next series of downs BU fumbled and the Little Redmen recovered on the Pups' 32 yard line. Quarterback Brian Murray unloaded a touchdown bomb to halfback Kevin Filley and UMass led for the first time, 14-7, as Dunkanidz again made the point after.

During the second quarter neither team could mount much of an offense. But, late in the period BU recovered a UMass fumble on their own 45 yard line. Leone again proved to be trouble as he broke over left tackle for a 55-yard touchdown run. The extra point attempt failed giving the Little Redmen a narrow 14-13 lead.

Suddenly the Little Redmen defense turned tiger and kept pushing BU back. Just before the first half ended the Pups were forced to punt from deep in their own territory.

The center over-shot the punter and UMass' freshmen tackled the punter in the end zone for a safety. The first half ended and UMass led, 16-13.

The third quarter started as the second half had ended, with the Little Redmen playing inspired defense. Led by defensive tackles Uruano and Niland, UMass consistently forced BU to punt. Unfor-

DRAFT LOTTERY MOVES TOWARD O.K.

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's lottery plan to limit the draft to 19-year-olds was approved Thursday by the House Armed Services Committee and sent toward the House floor for action late next week.

The speedy action on a surprising 31-0 vote indicated the chances for House approval are good and that the Senate might take up the bill before the end of the year.

Senate Armed Services Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., has said his committee may take up the President's proposal this year if it passes the House.

Such a proposal by Rep. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mr., was ruled out of order on a 21-10 roll call. Ichord said "continuing the policy of college deferments in time of a shooting war is one of our biggest mistakes.

The draft lottery approval was unanimously recommended by a special subcommittee that was highly critical of the plan during four days of hearings this month.

The subcommittee headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., said in its report it is not persuaded that Nixon's plan "would provide any greater equity in the selection process than is provided by the present oldest-first system.

"However, in view of the strong recommendation of the President in this regard, urging the Congress to permit him to modify the existing system of selection, the subcommittee believes that this request of the commander in chief of our armed forces should be honored."

Hebert indicated strong opposition to permitting amendments on the House floor which he said could open up a "Pandora's Box" for revising the entire draft system rather than approving the lottery only.

But committee critics said they will carry a fight to open the bill up to floor revision on the Rules Committee and the floor itself if necessary.

"This bill deals with how people get pulled out of the hat for the draft," said Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., "But it doesn't deal in any manner with who gets put in the hat in the first place."

Nixon's lottery plan is aimed at giving 18-year-olds advance notice of their prospects for being drafted in their 19th year. The late September or early October lottery would set up the draft order for the 365 birthdates for the following year.

Men whose birthdates were drawn first would likely be drafted the following January. Those whose birthdates were drawn last would likely escape the draft.

Students and other men with deferments would go back into the draft pool and be treated as 19-year-olds when their deferments ended.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Selective Service Chief Lewis B. Hershey said the lottery would be the fairest and easiest way to limit the draft to 19-year-olds.

Donn Clendenon Series M.V.P.

Mets Do It

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The absolutely amazing New York Mets completed their journey to the moon at 3:17 p.m., EDT, Thursday by adding their first world championship to their first pennant with a 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the fifth game of the World Series.

The story book Mets, who never finished higher than ninth place in seven previous frustrating years, thus made it all the way to the top by closing out the Orioles in four straight after losing the first game in Baltimore.

There were heroes galore for the Mets, once the ragamuffin clowns of the National League. Koosman went all the way to win his second series game with a five-hitter. Don Clendenon, proclaimed the Series hero and winner of a sports car, hit a two-run homer. Al Weis, a .215 hitter, slammed his first home run ever at Shea.

And in the eighth inning it was Ron Swoboda's double following a double by Cleon Jones that did the Orioles in. A second run in the eighth on a combination of errors by first baseman Boog Powell and relief pitcher Eddie Watt really didn't matter.

The victory meant a guaranteed $15,000 to each Met and the defeated Orioles were sure to get an least $10,000 each. However, the player pool was so large, $1,142,200.93, that it may go as high as $17,000 to $20,000 for the winners. Exact figures will be announced later by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Thirty minutes after the game was over, despite the work of police and special security officers, fans still milled around the outfield and stood in front of the Mets dugout. The infield looked like a moon landscape, pockmarked with huge divots where the eager fans had scooped out the turf.

The celebration carried into mid-town Manhattan where streamers, ticker - tape and papers filled the air like snow seconds after the last out.

One exuberant fan at Shea ran onto the field to chat with Clendenon at first base when the Mets took the field at the top of the ninth. Three burly special cops escorted him out of the arena.

The late hangers on finally were induced to move out the open gate in center, leaving an outfield that looked as though a giant steam shovel had tried to scoop up gobs of the grass.

In the dizzy Mets clubhouse the champagne flowed freely but still not quite up to the tempo of the wild celebration the night they clinched the National East.

Cong Shift Puzzles U.S.

By ROBERT D. OHMAN
Associated Press Writer

CAN THO, Vietnam (AP) - The enemy command is continuing its shift of North Vietnamese Army regulars into the densely populated Mekong Delta in a move that has puzzled allied headquarters.

There is no mystery about the rice-rich Delta and its six million people being a major prize; it's the way the NVA units have acted.

Allied analysts say two NVA regiments now have moved into the southern portion of the Delta. A third appears to be on its way, which would give the North Vietnamese the equivalent of a division there.

Such a major intrusion of new enemy forces into a vital area would normally justify alarm. But the South Vietnamese command appears confident, although curious, and has not beefed up its forces in Chau Doc and Kien Giang provinces where the invasion is occurring.

Spokesmen say that since July, 513 enemy soldiers have been killed in three operations along infiltration corridors leading from the Cambodian border to the U Minh forest, some 170 miles southwest of Saigon.

And the U Minh forest - long a Viet Cong sanctuary but also a nonstrategic, swampy wasteland appears to be the NVA regiments' goal.

They have been caught and mauled by units of the government's 21st Division as they crossed into South Vietnam in the Seven Mountains area about 125 miles southwest of Saigon. Trying to slip south into the U Minh, they have also brushed against two battalions of South Vietnamese marines operating with river assault groups in the waterways of the forest.

Although there had been some infiltration of North Vietnamese cadre into the Delta earlier, the entrance last spring of the 273rd Regiment marked the first intrusion by what is basically a North Vietnamese line unit.

The 273rd is a regiment of the 9th Viet Cong Division, but U.S. sources say it is, in effect, a North Vietnamese Army division with its leadership and 80 percent of its soldiers coming from North Vietnam.

In Saigon, the allied command reported that American battlefield deaths in Vietnam last week remained near the lowest level of the past three years. Enemy losses fell to the lowest mark in a year, and South Vietnam casualties climbed sharply.

Weekly casualty figures showed 82 American killed in action, along with 384 government troops and 1,687 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. Figures for wounded were 573 Americans and 1,000 South Vietnamese.

More Trouble In Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - A new disturbance by welfare recipients Thursday forced another closing of a public welfare office.

Two persons were arrested. One was charged with disturbing the peace, the other with malicious mischief.

Only 24 hours earlier, a sit-in at the office escalated into a takeover of the premises and a night of violence that resulted in 39 arrests, injury to 10 persons and extensive damage along several city blocks.

City officials say a curfew will continue at least until today except for those who must get to and from jobs.

Colleges in the city cancelled night classes and a speech by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y. scheduled for Friday night at the Springfield College was postponed because of the curfew.

The city welfare office was closed shortly afternoon yesterday after about 50 angry recipients marched to the building and sent four leaders in to complain they had not received their regular weekly checks.

Investigators said this was the sequence of events:

Welfare officials told them the checks were delayed because of Wednesday's disorders which forced closing of the office, and because of the Monday state holiday. The checks were to arrive Friday.

The recipients said they understood the delay but needed emergency food vouchers. Welfare officials said they could not issue any vouchers.

Welfare officials feared trouble and locked the doors after the four leaders left the office.

About 30 of the recipients marched two miles to the state regional welfare office to renew the grievances.

Police forced the women to leave the small, cramped second floor regional office, but they continued to picket outside the building until mid-afternoon.

Earlier, 30 of those arrested Thursday night pleaded innocent in district court to charges of trespassing, disturbing the peace or violating curfew.

The curfew was ordered by Mayor Frank Friedman after several hours of window smashing, looting, showers of bricks and bottles and other violence.

State troopers moved in to reinforce city police until early yesterday when Springfield police resumed full control.

Those arrested included Thomas Bell, 26, of Springfield, a leader in the Students for a Democratic Society; James Russell, 20, president of the Afro-American Society at Springfield College; Derek Paar, 18, Longmeadow, son of a Springfield College psychology professor, and Wade Rathke, 21, Western Massachusetts organizer for the Welfare Rights Organization.

Nov. Key to Peace

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

Wednesday's Vietnam Moratorium was an impressive display of anti-war protest in the Nation, and it will clearly force some changes in the war policy. However, if major changes in the Nixon Administration's policy are to be forced, the proposed November Moratorium will have to be at least as successful as Wednesday's.

Congressman Michael Harrington was right yesterday when he said that the President, through his moves of removing Lewis B. Hershey as Draft Director and of playing around with the fall's draft call, was already responding to anti-war pressure, and that the Moratorium would force him to take more direct action toward ending the war.

Nixon clearly is sensitive to the anti-war feeling which is growing in the Nation, and he has made minor concessions. What makes the protest a real expression of national desire for the President, is that a large number of protestors are the middle people on whom he counts for votes.

With these people protesting, the President has to make at least token responses to Vietnam protests.

But it is doubtfull that Wednesday's protest will result in anything more than token gestures unless it is followed up by at least an equally large protest in November.

Without another massive demonstration next month, the President will be able to write off October 15th as merely a singular event - a great day for getting out into the streets and rallying around a fashionable issue. But if the Moratorium continues each month, it will force the President to consider it as a movement - a widespread and dedicated campaign, among an impressive cross section of Americans, to end the war.

Such are the realities of politics. One day of protest isn't enough to convice the President that the demonstration and the demonstrators mean business. November thus must be an equally large demonstration; if it isn't, October 15 will go for naught.

Draft Bill Analysis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What it would do: Set up a lottery held in late September or early October each year to determine the draft order for the following year's 365 birthdates. Men whose 19th birthday falls on the first dates drawn would know they faced the draft in January or February. Men whose birthdates were drawn last would likely escape the draft entirely.

The present system: All able-bodied men 19-26 years of age are subject to the draft on an oldest-first basis. Since most older men already have been drafted, the men now being called are usually in the 20 to 21 age group.

Background: President Nixon asked Congress Sept. 18th. to repeal the 1967 ban against a draft lottery, saying his plan would be the fairest and easiest way to limit the draft to 19-year olds.

Prognosis: Speedy scheduling of House late next week indicates Nixon's proposal faces little hard opposition there. But its fate in the Senate remains a question. Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss. has indicated reluctance to take up the measure for fear Senate critics might try to revise the entire draft system with amendments.

Harvard Faculty Creates Council

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - A Harvard University faculty committee recommended Thursday that the 750-member Faculty of Arts and Sciences elect a 20-member Faculty Council.

A school spokesman said that the committee rejected a proposal to have a faculty senate, as do some other schools. The rejected proposal would have given a 120-member senate many of the powers the faculty has.

The proposed council would function as "a combined dean's cabinet and steering committee for the faculty."

The Committee on the Organization of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, which recommended formation of a council, was headed by Prof. Merle Fainsod.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

VIETNAM (AP) - Ambassador Lodge reports a proposal by "the other side" at the peace conference that the United States engage in direct private talks with the Viet Cong.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott sayd Moratorium Day "was in the tradition of American dissent." An M Day official says that if President Nixon responds to the demonstration "we will assist him in any steps he takes."

WASHINGTON - A House committee unanimously approves President Nixon's plan to draft 19-year-olds first under a lottery system. A move to eliminate college deferements is rejected.

Housing starts show their first upturn since February. Nixon administration officials predict a downturn in interest rates and a lessening of price pressures.

NATIONAL - The stock market swings upward. Analysts attribute the lift to rumors and hints of peace moves.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration asked Congress Thursday for sweeping new federal regulation of railroad safety.

The Department of Transportation wants the power to set safety requirements for track, signal systems, roadbed, equipment and employe failures - the cause of 75 per cent of all rail accidents.

VATICAN CITY (AP) - America's first men to the moon received a heroes' welcome at the Vatican Thursday. They told Pope Paul VI and his synod of bishops how it felt to explore what the pontiff called "another world of God's creation."

MONTREAL (AP) - In a scenario straight out of the Wild West, gunmen intercepted a bus taking 32 prisoners to court Thursday, overpowered police guards and freed nine of the men.

Within hours, four were recaptured and police fanned across northern Montreal, using dogs and helicopters, to track down the five still at large.

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union started winding up its Soyuz troika space mission Thursday, sending one spaceship back to earth without any attempt to put together an orbiting space station.

Soyuz 6, the first of three Soyuzes sent aloft landed safely 340 miles northeast of its Baikonur launch site in Soviet central Asia. Cmdr. Georgy Shonin and engineer Valery Kubasov, the two crewmen, were described as feeling fine after nearly five days in orbit.

BOSTON (AP) - Northeast Airlines said Thursday that two men whose light plane was shot at while it landed at Port Au Prince in Haiti Sunday are employees of the airline.

The State Department said the men, who were returned safely after being questioned by Haitian President Francois Duvalier, were identified as Ron White, 22, and Steve Chesser, 27. Northeast said White, a Pawtucket, R.I., native, is employed by the line at Miami.

Newman Club Sponsors Relief Collection

On Saturday, October 18, the Newman Club and the Lutheran students will be collecting money for Nigerian-Biafran relief.

According to recent articles, the situation there is more critical now than last year. Thousands of innocent civilians continue to die daily of malnutrition. Donations and help collecting will be very gratefully accepted.

The collection will be held just before the football game (1:15 - 1:30) at the stadium.

Mohawk Airlines to Suspend Services at Poughkeepsie

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mohawk Airlines asked the Civil Aeronautics Board Thursday for permission to suspend services temporarily at Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Mohawk said it would discontinue the service only for so long as satisfactory replacement service was available.

Mohawk said it had an agreement with Command Airways of Wappingers Falls, N.Y., by which Command would provide three round trip flights a day between Poughkeepsie and Binghamton, N.Y.

Command has committed itself to provide the service at the same fares currently charged by Mohawk.

Mohawk estimated that continuation of its poorly patronized service at Poughkeepsie would result in an annual loss for the route of about $47,000.

Creative Vandal Returns Home

Kenneth M. Fine, a UMass student from Winthrop, was found guilty of possession of marijuana Wednesday, in Northampton District Court, and was sentenced to two years on probation.

Rosenfeld reported that he was recruited as an informer by the UMass police in July, 1968, and had befriended Fine in the hope of obtaining illegal drugs.

He said he asked Fine to get him $15 worth of marijuana and, after a few days, received the drug. At this point Fine was arrested by the UMass police.

Fine's case revolved around the idea that Fine was not dealing in drugs, that he obtained the marijuana for Rosenfeld as a favor, and that the money used to purchase the drug was police money.

Judge Spring found Fine guilty on the marijuana charge and dismissed the possession of a hypodermic needle charge for lack of evidence.

Fine was placed on two years' probation.

UMass Student Guilty On Narcotics Charge

LEVERETT - Suzanne Williams will be back home after her release from the Federal Reformatory for Women in Alderson, W. Va. on nov. 23.

Miss Williams, who lives on Teawaddle Hill Road, has served one year on an indeterminate sentence for a conviction of damage to government property.

She and a companion, Francis T. Femia of West Virginia, poured black paint over Boston draft records in the Customs House in June of 1968.

In court, Miss Williams, who had previously been convicted six times for activities in pacifist demonstrations, said that her action was one of 'creative vandalism on instruments of violence used against mankind.'

At the reformatory Miss Williams has reportedly worked as an assistant to the prison's Protestant chaplain and assistant to the warden's secretary.

Last February she escaped from the reformatory, was recaptured, and spent two months in maximum security.

Coalition Makes Demands, Plans Debates

The "Student Coalition Against University Complicity in the War" has scheduled its first meeting for the entire University community for Thursday at 9:30 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union.

The group Wednesday released a statement explaining its position, and a copy of a letter which it has sent to President Lederle. The statement follows.

In order to oppose University complicity in the war, a coalition has been formed. Presently the Coalition consists of Greeks for the Coalition, the Martin Luther King Foundation, UMass, SDS, and the SMILE caucus. In following days, faculty groups and more student groups will be joining. The organizing for further support is going on now. The Coalition makes the following negotiable demands:

1. ROTC be abolished;
2. All ROTC scholarships be replaced with University scholarships;
3. All campus recruitment by the military and military related industries be terminated;
4. All research at the University be reviewed in order to terminate all war research and research for war-related industries.

At the present time, there is no date by which we ask our demands be met.

In order to further discussion on the issue of University complicity in the war, however, the Coalition is sending the following letter to President Lederle:

Dear Dr. Lederle:

We have formed a coalition opposing the university's complicity in the war. In order to further discussion, we request you use the good auspices of your office to set up a series of debates on the topic, "University Complicity in the War". These debates would include:

1. The Role of the University in War - Proper or Improper? Because of the importance of this topic to the entire community, we feel you, Dr. Lederle, should take part in this debate.
2. Campus War Research and Research for War Industries, Proper or Improper? Dr. Charles Carver, director of UMass Project Themis should take part in this debate.
3. Campus Recruitment for War and War Industries, Proper or Improper? Military and Industrial recruitors should take part in this debate.
4. Should ROTC be abolished? Both Commandants, Army and Air Force, should take part in this debate.

These debates should take place Friday, Nov. 14., the next moratorium day, starting at 1:00 and running continuously until all are concluded. The Coalition will aid in setting up the debates and provide opposing positions on all topics.

We request that this letter be answered by Oct. 22 so planning for the debates can begin. We can be reached by writing THE COALITION, c/o MLK, Hampshire House.

Thank you, in peace and freedom,
THE COALITION

The Coalition invites student and faculty groups to join us. Evan Johnson, president of Alumni Association, has said of an issue which is part of University Complicity, ROTC, that at UMass., the controversy is a "tempest in a thimble." We hope the University can find a big enough thimble to contain this tempest.

Winners Named For Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Three scientists drawn together in the United States by the desire to solve the mysteries of viruses and virus diseases were named Thursday as winners of the $75,000 Nobel Prize for physiology and medicine. They are Max Delbruck, 63, of the California Institute of Technology; Salvador E. Luria, 57, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Alfred D. Hershey, 60, of the Carnegie Institution.

Peace Corps Forms Obtainable Now

It is strongly advisable that those students interested in being considered for a Peace Corps spring or summer program, complete an application as soon as possible, very preferably prior to the Christmas holiday season.

A brief language aptitude test is required, and a prerequisite to taking this exam is a completed application. It is recommended that applications be completed now. This will enable the applicant to take the language test during the Peace Corps recruiting visit on October 27, 28 & 29. This short time usually isn't sufficient time to obtain and complete one of these lengthy applications.

Cong. Propose Secret Talks

PARIS (AP) - North Vietnam proposed Thursday that the United States bypass the Saigon government and begin secret talks immediately with the Viet Cong on ending the Vietnam war.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, calling the Hanoi move a surprise, countered with a proposal for private talks among all parties at the Paris conference.

The U. S. chief delegate also warned Hanoi and the Viet Cong about their "abusive attacks" on President Nixon, saying "you may mislead yourselves. This could affect the course of our relationships here and thus the prospects for negotiations."

Asked if Lodge's statement implied any threat that could break up the Paris conference, the U.S. delegation spokesman said: "His words stand for themselves."

Both the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government delegates again accused Nixon Thursday of prolonging the war.

Are you using too many tampons?

Put it this way: Do you have to change more than you'd like to?

Make no ... Powder Room than you'd care to? Excuse your self more than you need to?

Try MEDS tampons.

MEDS are so absorbent you'll probably need fewer of them.

First, there's a gentle rayon cover. Then a layer of rayon fibers that absorb quickly. Then another layer of fine rayon storage fibers that absorb steadily. And, in the center, a cushioned layer that holds, and holds some more.

Can you imagine? Some tampons are just chunks of cotton. No wonder you probably need more of them.

This month try MEDS. They come in regular or super, with a soft polyethylene applicator.

In Fayette, the Whites Blinked in Disbelief

FAYETTE, Miss. - Charles Evers, this town's first Negro Mayor, is accustomed to threats. Three years ago, he heard that Byron de la Beckwith, the segregationist firebrand who had been tried and acquitted in the murder of Mr. Evers's brother, Medgar, in 1963, was "looking" for him.

He sent word back through the mysterious biracial grapevine of Mississippi that he hoped Mr. Beckwith found him. "If I ever lay eyes on him, I'll kill him," Mr. Evers said. Mr. Beckwith never found him.

Telephone threats have become so routine that Mr. Evers dismisses most of them as crank calls. A white woman called last Tuesday and told him he was going to be killed. He hung up on her. A white man phoned a few hours later and repeated the warning and Mr. Evers told him to "go to hell." But when a third person called the same day and gave detailed description of three would-be murderers, their weapons, their plans and their automobile, Mr. Evers decided the threat was real.

He armed himself and alerted Fayette's black police chief. A few minutes later, a car fitting the caller's description was stopped. It carried only one man, but was loaded with guns. Two other men were arrested elsewhere that night and the next day and charged with violating the Federal Gun Control Act of 1968, by possessing and illegally transferring a submachinegun.

The driver of the car, Dale Walton, a former Ku Klux Klan Grand Dragon from across the state at Tupelo, was hauled before Mayor Evers's city court Thursday and bound over to the Jefferson County Grand Jury on a felony charge of attempted murder. One of the other arrested men was Pat Massengale, campaign manager for Jimmy Swan in Mr. Swan's unsuccessful race for Governor in 1967.

In the light of Mississippi's dual standard of justice, it seemed unlikely that a county grand jury controlled by white men would indict Mr. Walton for attempted murder. Even some Negroes in Fayette thought the case was too thin because no witness was produced who had seen or heard any threat.

It seemed apparent, however, that some kind of plot against Mayor Evers had been in the air, and the Mayor was disturbed. He said it seemed that some whites simply could not bear the idea of black men holding political power and were ready to re-enact the whole bloody Reconstruction Era, with night-riding and terrorism, to restore white rule.

However accurately it might describe a certain segment of Mississippi society, that probably is not a fair estimate of the sentiment of Fayette's white minority.

Conversations with several white persons in the town last week indicated that most whites harbor a mixture of hostility and curiosity toward the Negro officials, with curiosity holding the upper hand at the moment.

One white man said that some whites were beginning to move away from Fayette because of the Negro political takeover. "See that house right there?" he asked, pointing to a brick house nearby. "A nigger bought it just the other day."

The man was asked where he lived and he pointed to another house a block from the brick house. Asked what his own intentions were, he said, "Well, I guess I'll stay, unless things get too bad. I get along with 'em all right. Grew up with 'em. Known 'em all my life. I got a lot of nigger customers."

Negroes have no doubts about Fayette's black power. They laugh and walk confidently on the street now, with none of the furtive, guarded air that can be seen in many Negroes elsewhere.

The change in Fayette was clear in the court room at City Hall Thursday when Dale Walton was brought in for a hearing. Mayor Evers, who sits as city judge, began the proceeding, then turned it over to Mayor Pro Tem Fred Allen, saying he wanted no suspicion of prejudiced justice. Mr. Walton had told Mr. Evers shortly after his arrest "You must realize that I am a Mississippi white man."

For an hour Thursday, the citizens of Fayette jammed the little court room and watched the amazing spectacle of a Mississippi white man caught in the clutches of black judicial power. The judge was black. All three witnesses testifying against Mr. Walton were black. The court clerk was black. The two police officers with loaded pistols flanking the judge were black.

Mr. Walton's white lawyer objected repeatedly and strenuously, and with intricate legal skill, to every stage of the proceeding. To every objection, Judge Allen responded blandly, "Your objection is overruled, sir."

And each time the white defendant and his lawyer blinked in disbelief. These white men had never seen anything like it in their lives.

LIBERAL ARTS MAJORS:

POT can open a whole new world of opportunity...

Each year, NSA offers challenging career opportunities to Liberal Arts majors through participation in the Professional Qualification Test. This year, NSA has scheduled the PQT for Saturday, December 6, 1969. Completion of this Test by the Liberal Arts major is a prerequisite to consideration for NSA employment.

The Career Scene at NSA: The National Security Agency is the U.S. Government agency responsible for developing invulnerable communications systems to transmit and receive vital information. As an NSA professional, you will be trained to work on programs of national importance in such areas as:

- Cryptography—developing & logical proving of new cryptologic concepts
- Research—the gathering, analysis, and reporting of substantive data
- Language—used as a basic tool of research into a number of analytical fields
- Programming—includes data systems program writing, and development of mechanical and administrative procedures
- Documentation—technical writing in its broadest sense, including research, writing, editing, illustrating, layout and reproduction

Your specific academic major is of secondary importance. Of far greater importance are your ingenuity, intellectual curiosity and perseverance—plus a desire to apply them in assignments where "imagination is the essential qualification."

SALARIES start at $7,639.00 and are supplemented by the benefits of career federal employment.

ADVANCEMENT AND CAREER DEVELOPMENT—NSA promotes from within, and awards salary increases as you assume greater responsibility. NSA also is anxious to stimulate your professional and intellectual growth in many ways, including intensive formal as well as on-the-job training. Advanced study at any of seven area universities can be partially or wholly reimbursed through NSA Fellowships and other assistance programs.

The deadline for POT applications is November 21 (for the December 6 test). Pick up a POT Bulletin at your Placement Office. It contains full details and the necessary test registration form. FROM OUR SIDE

A Peace Letter

It was a beautiful day, truly beautiful. For the first time in many years most of the country was unified. Rich and poor, black and white, old and young, all were tied by the common bond of desiring peace, and peace immediately.

From Wall Street in New York, from a ghetto in Holyoke, and from campuses and commons across the nation, the minority became the majority Wednesday in realizing the war in Vietnam was a mistake from the beginning and that the troops must be withdrawn.

"Today I become a hippie," said an elderly Italian woman in a low income housing project in Holyoke as she signed an anti-war postcard to President Nixon. "I always thought they were wrong, but now I think the rest of us may have been wrong."

In this particular Holyoke housing project canvassed by three UMass students, approximately seventy-five percent of the residents contacted signed the postcards and petitions which urged an immediate cease fire and withdrawal of troops from Vietnam.

The local turnout of University students was admirable. Thousands of UMass students either participated in rallies or canvassed area homes. All were working for peace.

However the struggle is not yet over. If Oct. 15 doesn't succeed we must re-dedicate ourselves to work for peace again in November, again in December, and again and again until President Nixon hears our message.

Last week the President said he would not be influenced by events of Oct. 15. However, politicians must take into account the wishes of the populace. This is the foundation of our democratic system of government.

Oct. 15th, and not Richard Nixon's election to the presidency, marks the beginning of the end in Vietnam, for Oct. 15th has shown to the world that this is the day the majority of Americans lost their patience with the war in Vietnam.

ART BUCHWALD

Shut Up

WASHINGTON - When President Nixon took his oath of office, he asked everybody in the United States to lower their voices. Now he wants everyone to shut up.

Secretary Rogers on Meet the Press said that President Nixon cannot negotiate a peace in Paris because of the critics in the United States.

There is probably a lot to be said for this argument. It is generally known, but the man most responsible for holding up peace in Vietnam is Selwyn McIntosh. A shoe salesman from Brooklyn, he has been a critic of the Vietnam war since 1963. His outspoken statements concerning our involvement in that part of the world have given aid and comfort to Hanoi, and it is now an undisputed fact that if McIntosh had kept his big mouth shut, we would have won the war six years ago.

Back in 1963, the North Vietnamese were on the ropes. Captured enemy documents showed they were ready to sue for peace, and the United States was discussing methods of making Hanoi pay for its aggression.

But at that moment McIntosh showed up with a picket sign at the White House which said, "Get out of Vietnam." Unfortunately, he was photographed and the picture was transmitted to Hanoi.

Hanoi said, "Why should we make peace on unfavorable terms when McIntosh is urging the Americans to get out!"

In 1964 President Johnson decided to bomb North Vietnam to bring Hanoi to its senses. The bombing, as everyone knows, was extremely successful, and once again North Vietnam was ready to throw in the towel.

But McIntosh wrote a letter to his local newspaper urging the United States to stop the bombing. When the letter was printed, a neutral diplomat sent it to Ho Chi Minh, and Ho decided that despite the bombing he would stick to his guns, as Mr. Johnson did not have the support he claimed.

President Johnson was angered by McIntosh throwing the wrench into his peace plans, and he told intimates that McIntosh's criticism was treasonable and a disgrace. To show that he wasn't going to be intimidated by McIntosh, the President ordered more troops into Vietnam.

A year later, elections were held in South Vietnam. The winners were Thieu and Ky, and the losers were jailed. This put Hanoi into a depression until McIntosh told a friend on the phone that the elections were rigged in favor of the Thieu government. McIntosh's phone happened to be tapped by the FBI, and somehow Hanoi got a transcript of the tape. When they read what McIntosh had said, Hanoi held a meeting and voted to continue the war.

This discouraged President Johnson so much that he decided not to run again. Walt Rostow bitterly accused McIntosh of being the one person chiefly responsible for our disastrous policy in Vietnam.

Now President Nixon is faced with dealing with McIntosh. He sent Secretary of State Rogers personally to see McIntosh and beg him to hold his tongue until some agreement could be reached in Paris. But McIntosh, true to form, was out Wednesday shouting for us to pull out of Vietnam. The Hanoi negotiators in Paris, who were ready to agree to any terms, were just informed of McIntosh's latest protest and have decided on the basis of it to remain firm.

Between Reason and Freedom

Here I stand
Crippled.
Torn by inner doubt
And despair,
Depressed, confused,
And frustrated,
Thus incapable of action.
No power to act, hence no
Freedom

Where do I turn to find
Inner peace?
Where do I turn for hope,
For the end of the inner Turmoil
Which divides me,
Which makes me indecisive and unsure,
Confused and lost,
And lacking in strength?

Will I ever create for myself a life-style
That will free me from the self-doubt
Which cripples my action?
Free me
From the anxiety of alienation from those Whose life-styles differ from my own?
Free me
From the confusion I feel as my beliefs meet constant challenge
And forever change, rendering me unsure,
And weak in my uncertainty.

I cannot seem to find my inner peace through reason alone.
The forever searchings of my mind for
A way to live
Seem never to provide me with inner harmony, or to
Free me from self-doubt.

If not in reason, than in what Lies the means of releasing myself
From all these inner struggles
Which divide and cripple me,
Which enfeeble my power to act
And hence prevent me from being free.

If not in reason, in what?

Students and Equality

At long last this summer state employees won their long hard battle for a pay raise. Students working at the University were left out, being neither full time non union, except for a token hike of minimum student wage to $1.45 per hour and minimum dining commons wage of $1.55 per hour. This is nice pocket money if you have the time to work, but the point is some people have to live off of what they make. All of these jobs are distributed to people with financial need with left-over jobs given to those who want them. To pay so poorly those who really need the money is hypocritical to what the University stands for.

University rationale #1 behind the low pay is that by keeping wages down they can hire more people and spread out their limited funds to the best advantage. This just happens to coinside with the fact that all permanent University openings are frozen right now creating a bit of a shortage in unskilled positions which the virtually limitless cheap labor supply will fill nicely. It's an enterprising capitalists dream. Keeps things running smoothly while the money flows freely to build the buildings and to keep the athletic teams well stocked. The dining commons pay help out of their own profits, not out of state funds. The pay has been so low for so long because no one ever asked for any more until last spring when an attempt at organizing student help fell through, but not before scaring someone in authority enough to raise the pay $.25 per hour this semester.

The second University rationale is that students work only part time requiring more supervision and thus are worth less per hour. Learning to push brooms, swab floors and clean off tables does involve highly rigorous discipline but even a week of training should put students at a par with the more experienced full time craftsmen in the trade earning over $2. per hour. They also seem to make a big deal about working part time and at odd hours. The university does run two and sometimes three shifts anyway. They also split full time positions to allow two people to work part time with the full pay rate excluding students of course. During the summer under the auspices of the physical plant, an interesting event occurred; students were working full time for the summer for $1.60/hr. doing the same work as part timers receiving $2.00/hr.

It's just another one of those things students have been silent about for so long; student priorities are now last on the list in the pay area. It's about time to get organized and get down to business. A real student union could start changes right away, especially in the dining commons which operate off private funds, and which need student help so badly. Dealings with the state have to take longer, but as soon as you start talking money, they have to listen; student labaor reaching virtually into every department.

A student can be something very real, a true base of power to reform, something concrete to get involved in instead of talking about student power and dreaming about student-worker alliances and reforms and the revolution. It's time to get together and help your brother.

Arlo Makes Smith

The concert will be at 8 p.m. Friday (October 17) in John M. Greene Hall. It is sponsored by Smith's Recreational Council and is open to the public.

The son of the late dust-bowl balladeer of the 1930's, Woody Guthrie, Arlo was catapulted to fame in 1967 as the composer of "Alice's Restaurant." This talking blues monologue recounts the story of his arrest for littering in Stockbridge, Mass., his conviction, and his subsequent disqualification for the draft.

The song has been made into a highly acclaimed movie of the same name, and by playing himself, Arlo Guthrie has become a star. "Alice's Restaurant" is currently on view at local theaters.

In spite of, or perhaps because of his experiences in Stockbridge, Arlo has returned to the Berkshires to settle in the tiny town of Washington, Mass. He was married there last Thursday (October 9).

Tickets for the Smith concert are on sale from 5 to 6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday (October 14 and 16) at the John M. Greene box office. On Friday (October 17) the box office will be open from 5 p.m. until the time of the performance. No seats will be reserved.

The price of the tickets is $3.

It's a game of charades! It's a multi-media Happening! It's an improvizational showcase! It's a controlled dramatic event! It's THE GOOD WOMAN OF SETZUAN by Bertolt Brecht, directed by Jim Young, Chairman of the Theatre and Oral Interpretation Area, UMass.

Afro-Am. Performs Tonite

The Afro-American Dance Ensemble will perform tonight at the newly opened Millis Coffee House. The performance is scheduled for 9:00 p.m. There will be an admission charge of $1.00.

The Dance Ensemble is from New York City and has done a great deal of travelling, though this will be their first appearance on the campus. The group will bring a troupe of fifteen dancers and drummers with them.

Spirit Buttons

Spirit buttons will go on sale Saturday at the UMass-URI game. The buttons are imprinted in red and white and will be available at the east and west main gates from 12:15 p.m. until the start of the game. The sale is being run by the sisters of the Delta Delta chapter of Tau Beta Sigma, National Honorary Band Service Sorority.

Football fans will recognize the slogan imprinted on the buttons as that used by the 1968-1969 Marching Band. "Our Team is Redhot-Redmen on the Warpath" is by now a much used phrase on Fall Saturday afternoons in Alumni Stadium. The Marching Band, the largest single cheering group at home and away (when they are able to attend), has been responsible for several new cheers in the last two years. The Band's Percussion section add the necessary beat and volume to the cheers of our very capable cheerleading squad and Cheerleaders and Band members together let the team know that at least some people in the stands are rooting for them. It is hoped that these buttons will give the same idea to the team even if the wearers are not quite as vocal as the Band and the Cheerleaders.

Frosh Booters Start Fast, Play Saturday

For the third year in a row the UMass freshman soccer team is off to a fast start, on the strength of back-to-back shutout victories over Tufts University and Worcester Polytechnic Institute. In the opening game of the season Bill Davison's two goals were the margin of victory, as he headed in a corner-kick by Eric Anderson for his first goal, and turned a Tufts misplay in the penalty area into a penalty kick goal. Both were scored early in the first period.

Starting goalie Bill Leary and his back-up man John Kiah were once again flawless when the freshmen travelled to Worcester on Wednesday. This due, coupled with the fullback line of Dave Ouillette, Todd Buck, Dave Zandon, and Steve Weiner, have not been scored upon to date. Against WPI the 3-0 win was highlighted by a two goal performance by center-forward Tom Texeira, and left-winger Jeff Hague's first score of the season. The winning goal was scored at the 30 second mark of the opening period when Texeira netted his first. Eight minutes later Hague added another, and early in the fourth quarter Texeira closed out the scoring with his second goal.

The freshman team's unblemished record will face a stiff test Saturday morning when they take on Amherst College. UMass eked out a 2-1 victory in a pre-season scrimmage between the clubs, and coach David Jekanoski feels revenge will be foremost in the minds of the Lord Jeffs. Game time is 10:30 in front of the Boyden Gym.

Jekanoski will be relying on his link-men Paul Gibavic, Vin Grandonico, and Ed Doherty to move the ball through mid-field from the fullback line to the front line as the freshmen try for their third victory. Following the game Saturday the frosh have four remaining games, with trips to Springfield College and the University of Connecticut and home encounters against Trinity and Stockbridge.

Soccer Team at Home Meet Tough Rhode Island

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass varsity soccer team faces a tough URI team in an important Yankee Conference game at home on Saturday morning. The Redmen take a 2-2 record into the game and they are 1-1 in the conference. Rhody is 1-3 on the season and also have a 1-1 conference mark.

UMass lost a 2-0 decision to a tough Trinity team on Tuesday. Trinity scored goals in the first and last periods and held off the efforts of the Redmen in the second half. Alan Gilby put the winners in front with a goal early in the game and it held up until teammate Peter Wiles headed in for a shot for an insurance goal.

The Redmen missed several fine scoring opportunities in the closely played contest. They outshot the home team 17-15 but couldn't seem to put the ball in the net. Coach Peter Broaca was pleased with the performance of his team. "We played hard and had some breaks, but we didn't cash in on them," he said.

The game on Saturday is a must-win game for both teams. Although the Rams have a losing record, they have lost to Vermont, Bridgeport and Brown, all ranked in the top ten in New England. The only Rams' win came in a 7-0 romp over a Maine team that beat the Redmen 2-1.

Rhody is the defending conference champion and has most of its' squad back. Last year they beat the Redmen 3-0 in what Broaca called, "our worst game of the season." The Rams boast four All-Conference players, Steve Collis, Lou Kreitzman, Dick Coller and Joe Periera. Collis will have a busy day as he also kicks extra points for the football team. Broaca expects a tough game. "We'll have to play our best to beat them because it is a must win for both of us," he said.

The freshmen booters displayed a tough defense in winning their first two games. Last Saturday they beat Tufts, 2-0 and shut out WPI, 3-0 on Wednesday. The frosh also play at home on Saturday, hosting cross-town rival, Amherst, behind Boyden.

BEND THOSE OARS! - Varsity crew team trains hard for Head of the Charles Regatta on Oct. 26. A note should be made that freshman crew candidates are still wanted. No experience is necessary, just see Mike in 211 Boyden. New frosh coach Larry Dean is embarking on his first coaching assignment and is being looked to as a "great help" to the UMass crew program. Redmen Return to Conference Wars

Rhody Could Ruin Homecoming

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

After three weeks of rugged non-league play, the UMass football team returns to the more friendly confines of Yankee Conference play, when the Redmen meet winless Rhode Island tomorrow at Alumni Stadium, in the 1969 Homecoming clash. Game time for the game, which should draw the biggest home crowd of the season, will be at 1:30.

It seems like three years instead of three weeks, since UMass has played a conference foe. After their rout of Maine, the Redmen lost close encounters to Buffalo and Delaware, before defeating previously unbeaten Boston University last week, in possibly UMass' biggest win of the last two or three years.

UMass coach Vic Fusia, who has a history of winning homecoming games, does not foresee any letdown following the last minute victory over the Terriers. "I think we turned the corner with our win over B.U.", said the coach. "If there is any kind of a letdown Saturday, then they aren't the team I thought they were.

"We have set our sights on the Conference title all season, and this is a conference game we must win. There shouldn't be any letdown if this team has any pride."

Rhode Island in its four losses, has shown an ability to move the ball by gaining around 400 yards in three of the games. But mistakes of their own doing have hurt the Rams. Fusia expects Rhody to throw the ball a lot, as they have done all season.

There will be a couple of changes in the Redman lineup. Sophomore defensive Bill deFlavio will start in place of Mark Toner, who along with defensive back Frank Schwartz, was suspended from the squad for disciplinary reasons resulting from an incident last Saturday night.

Also end John Hulecki will probably be back in the starting lineup, after missing the B.U. game due to a leg injury and is ready for action. Quarterback Mike Marchev, who has been sidelined since the Maine game with a shoulder injury is back with the team. However, Fusia will continue to alternate Tim Adams and Ken Hughes, at quarterback.

Halfback Jerry Grasso is a doubtful starter with a leg injury but he is expected to see a lot of action.

This and every game from here on out is a big one for the Redmen. UMass, though the only undefeated team in the Conference, does not look upon itself as the favorite in the league. As Fusia puts it, "We still don't know how consistent we are yet. All the Conference opponents are tough and no one can be picked over another. After all we were just looked upon as poor third before the season."

REDMAN RANTINGS - Greg Landry may have the chance he has waited for as the ex-UMass great assumes quarterbacking chores for the Detroit Lions due to a wrist injury suffered by Lion starter Bill Munson . . . Pat Scavone is tied for scoring lead in the Yankee Conference and is fifth in rushing . . . Dennis Gagnon leads placekickers with 12 points, Steve Parnell leads in kickoff and punt returns . . . Peter Gayeska, 1968-69 hoop captain signed with Akron Goodyear Rubber Co. AAU basketball team which will compete in the World Tourney in Moscow in December.

Hard-Nosed UMass Defenders

by BOB JAYES

Today at 12:30, the University of Massachusetts cross-country teams leaves for a dual meet with Boston College at Franklin Park. A band will serenade the expected turnout of several thousand, expected to wave and cheer as the team waves a fond farewell to beautiful Amherst. The long bus ride down should be eased almost entirely by sleeping, but a few runners may volunteer to save all from boredom by playing their guitars and harmonicas, an attempt which failed last time. After a quick (very quick) change at the Monkey House, the team will charge onto the field of combat (actually, it's a golf course of combat). Leading this charge will be the top three men for UMass, co-captains Ron Wayne and Leo Duart, and Tom Derderian. All three have been improving rapidly, and are quite possibly the best 1-2-3 combination around. Their mixing of courage and experience makes them a threat to any team. Close behind are senior Dave Evans and junior Larry Paulson. Evans, one of the Yankee Conference's finest half milers, has developed into a top cross-country runner, easily adapting to the longer race. Paulson, expected to do well anyway, has not let the team down. He has not turned in a bad race yet. Bruce Blackburn and Don Dunsky, two of the more promising sophomores, constantly break into the top five, and are one of the most pleasing aspects of the season.

Boston College once again fields a strong team. Led by John Iles and Jim Zabel, the Eagles recently defeated a highly praised Holy Cross team. On this ground, they are a tough team and should provide a good race for the Redmen.

The Little Redmen, having one of their best seasons, are led by Tom Jasmin and Tom Swain. Jasmin has been the top man all year, and is one of the finest freshmen in New England (if you're reading this Tom, don't pay any attention to me). Tom Swain is always close behind, threatening Jasmin every race. Swain is easily one of the best freshmen around. Phil Riley, the third man for the frosh, is expected to turn in another fine race, consistently being at the top. Rich Barry and Mike Daly round out the top five, remaining tough competitors through the season.

After the race, the team will return via a Peter Pan scenic vista-cruiser. A short stop for dinner will return them to campus around 9:30. Another band and a cheering crowd is expected to greet them.

Metawampe's Picks

It was tough the past week. Death threats from malcontents, a moratorium, a Mets victory (he picked the Phillies), and getting stood up for a Northampton socialite orgy that drew the big names in the university relations staff.

But bitterness is not the Great One's cup of tea (or smoke of tea for that matter). He had a so-so 72% week, that was made sweet by his favorite's big victory. (Appalachian State won.)

And Homecoming joy reigns supreme in his quaint tepee, music from those show biz giants that are brought to this fabulous campus. And if things get too bad, he can always drown his sorrows with a tall snort.

Trustees Rule on Presidential Setup

By JOHN STAVROS
Friday Issue editor

In a Homecoming session last Saturday in Whitmore, the University Trustees voted on issues concerning the reorganization of the administration of the presidential level, room refunds for triples, and a new University Housing Policy. Other action at the meeting concerned the requests last fall of Black students for a Black Studies Program.

In a report of the Executive Committee, Chairman of the Trustees Joseph P. Healy of Arlington presented the committee's recommended policy for reorganization of the university hierarchy.

Healy prefaced his report by stating that after long study the committee had decided this plan would be most effective for the future University system. He continued, saying the plan, "should be accepted in principal because we are looking for a new president and it becomes necessary to define his post so the man we select will know exactly what his job will entail."

Healy began to describe the system which was compared to those presently functioning in California and Michigan. The system will consist of a President, located in Boston, and three chancellors on the respective UMass campuses. The main concept in this organization is the separation of the college president from the one particular campus and locating him in Boston, but not at UMass Boston. The plan locates the office in Boston in order that the legislature and the mass media may be effectively used to the University's advantage.

Healy also stated that under the President there would be several vice presidents located on separate campuses, having a staff relationship to the president. At the same time Chancellors would act as the head of their respective schools.

After some discussion of the principle, brought about by a communications gap between the executive committee, the Medical School and a representative from the faculty senate, in which doubts about the proposal were expressed, President Lederle spoke about the plan.

Lederle strongly endorsed the plan stating, "It is necessary to maximize the autonomy of the President and this is the system that will do just that." He continued by saying the present university system was the most centrally understaffed system in the U.S. and in order to carry this plan through, a lot of money would have to be spent. "UMass as a system is big news," Lederle stated, "and that is why we must create a neutral office in the most effective location."

When Lederle finished, Healy again reminded the Trustees that the motion was merely for support of the plans principle. He requested it be passed so that it may be further studied and also presented to the faculty and student senates.

Next, speaking for the Building and Grounds Committee was John W. Haigis Jr. of Greenfield. Haigis presented a plan to the Trustees permitting a 70% refund retroactive to September and the motion for the proposal was passed. The motion read in part: "That when students are assigned at the convenience of the University to a resident hall room in a number in excess of the normal occupancy level of that room for a period in excess of six weeks in any semester, the room rental rate for each such student shall be adjusted to 70% of the then current rate for that room and if such room is equipped with a telephone, the rate for the telephone shall also be adjusted to 70% of the normal rate per student; provided, that in the administration of this policy "the convenience of the University" shall not be construed to in any way negate the pledge previously undertaken by the Trustees to the University of Massachusetts Building Authority with reference to maintaining full occupancy in Authority owned buildings; this policy to be effective with the Fall semester 1969.

In an announcement not expected to come until later in the year, the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees also voted to reverse its long-standing policy of leaving all construction of married student housing to the private sector of the local economy.

While expressing hope that private developers could come up with a reasonable housing plan for young married students, the trustees said that if a new proposal developed by the University involving private capital does not generate acceptable bids in the next 45 days, the trustees will ask the UMass Building Authority to develop 31 acres north of the University campus.

The private capital plan will be offered to private developers immediately. Under the proposal, a private firm would develop low-cost housing for married students in reasonable proximity to the University -- although not necessarily in Amherst. The University would lease the housing from the developer for five years.

If no developers submit acceptable bids in the next 45 days that would result in suitable, low-rent apartments close to the University, the trustees have authorized the Building Authority to request bids on its 31 acres north of the campus. This would be for single unit or multiple unit prefabaricated apartments. The decision on whether to build the single or multiple units would depend on the cost, quality, size and appearance of the units, but bids would be asked on both plans.

Since the University is growing at the rate of 1500 additional students each year, it is estimated that a need for 200 new married student apartments is generated each year. This is in addition to the requirements for new faculty and staff each year.

In the course of studying various proposals to insure some new low-cost married student housing by next fall, University personnel have met informally with representative officials from the Town of Amherst during the past few months.

The decision by the trustees on Saturday was the result of an exhaustive administrative study of all possible ways the University could provide suitable, low-rent housing for married students.

Other action at the meeting concerned a progress report of the Core Requirements Meeting Called By College of Arts and Sciences

By RICHARD W. STORY
Special to the MDC

Concrete and specific proposals for the revision of the College of Arts and Sciences' core requirements will be the topics for discussion at a meeting of College faculty and students to be held tomorrow evening, Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in Mshar Auditorium.

In making the announcement of the faculty and student meeting, the acting dean, Prof. Seymour Shapiro, said that the one item on the evening's agenda would be a final discussion of options for curricular revision, in order to determine which should be presented to the entire College faculty in a mail ballot.

The meeting to be held Tuesday grows from more than two years of planning and discussion by the deans, faculty and students of the College. All students with a concern for the direction of their education in the College are strongly invited to attend.

Two principal documents will be the center of attention at the open meeting - both documents are relatively new; and neither has yet received widespread distribution. The first proposal to be considered, now called the "June proposal", is in the form of a long memorandum to the faculty, entitled "A proposal relating to qualifications for the Bachelor of Arts degree in the College of Arts and Sciences." This document was largely written in the dean's office, but reflects a measure of student suggestion. The "June proposal" was considered in its outline form by the Academic Affairs Committee late last school year; and was circulated shortly after then to the College faculty. There was an additional distribution earlier this fall.

The second proposal to be considered is a recent report from the College Curriculum Committee (dated October 14); and recently circulated to all College faculty.

In his announcement of the meeting, acting dean Shapiro said that, while the two proposals do not compete with each other, they would require different periods of time before they could be fully implemented. The proposals of the Curriculum Committee's report, since they do not propose any great differences from the existing University core requirements, could be operating before Counceling Day, December 3. The "June proposal," since it would require some Trustee action, could probably not be operating until second semester. The two proposals represent not dissimilar approaches to a common goal: a less restrictive road to a degree in the College, the dean said.

Those faculty present at the Tuesday meeting will not be able to make the final decision on the matter of these two proposals the dean stressed. But they can perform the very important act of deciding what will be submitted to a general faculty vote for approval, according to Shapiro.

In a letter to the College faculty the acting dean suggested the following possibilities for discussion:

"1) A decision to submit the Curriculum Committee proposal to the faculty as the final action in the long process of curricular revision, or

2) A decision to submit the "June Proposal" to the faculty for appoval as the final action in the long process of curricular revision, or

3) A decision to submit the Curriculum Committee report to the faculty for approval as a temporary measure, pending the rapid development of a more comprehensive scheme for final action.

These three possibilities may suggest others."

The dean's office, recognizing the fact that none of these documents has received very wide student circulation, has arranged a number of locations for students to go to study copies of the materials. First, all heads of residence on campus will receive six complete sets of reports - "June Proposal," Curriculum Committee proposal, and a covering memo. Second, ten sets of proposals will be placed at the Reserve desk in Goodell Library. Three sets of proposals will be available in every department office (of College departments). Sets of documents have also been distributed to every Student Senator and every member of the Academic Affairs Committee. All sets should be available during the day Monday and from then on. The DAILY COLLEGIAN will reprint the entire text of the Curriculum Committee proposal, as well as a tabular comparison of the principal points of the present College requirements, Curriculum Committee proposal, and the "June Proposal" in Tuesday's paper.

The dean's office expects the mail voting to take place during early November; and for the results to be effective (if possible) by Counseling Day.

Czech and Soviet Union to Meet In "Normalization" Procedures

PRAGUE (AP) - Czechoslovaks were told yesterday night their leaders are ready to sign with the Soviet Union an important document connected with "normalization," the precondition for withdrawal of Russian troops from this country.

Prague radio and television reported a "new document of basic political importance" will be signed during Czechoslovak-Soviet summit talks starting today in Russia.

This hope is considered unrealistic, however, despite the Czechoslovak parliament's action last week in stating that the 1968 invasion was justified and thanking the Warsaw Pact powers for their intervention.

Communist party chief Gustav Husak, President Ludvik Svoboda and Premier Oldich Cernik head the Czechoslovak delegation leaving today on a nine-day visit to Moscow and other Soviet cities.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SAIGON (AP) - Enemy troops attacked a platoon of U. S. and South Vietnamese soldiers before dawn Sunday, killing four Americans before withdrawing under cover of darkness.

BERLIN (AP) - Two armed East German defectors forced a Polish airliner to land in West Berlin Sunday and were granted permission to remain. Witnesses said two Communist MIG jets tried to prevent the landing.

LONDON (AP) - An Israeli ship headed for Britain may be carrying a hidden Arab time bomb, London's port authority reported Sunday.

WASHINGTON - Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Fred R. Harris, commenting separately on the pace of America's withdrawal from Vietnam, stressed yesterday a need for a systematic approach toward shifting more of the war burden to the South Vietnamese.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new survey of federal aid to schools shows many urban systems get less than the national average of $53. per pupil while some affluent suburbs receive more than the national average.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The level of Soviet arms aidto Hanoi has dropped considerably in recent months, apparently because of the end of the air war against North Vietnam.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) - Dist. Atty Edmund Dinis,probing the death of Mary Jo Kopechne in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's car, may take the witness stand during the hearing on a petition to exhume her body for an autopsy.

BOSTON (AP) - Some 75 chanting demonstrators picketed Mayor Kevin White's house yesterday to protest the eviction of several families in an urban renewal project in the Brighton section last week.

They chanted such slogans as "No evictions, stay and fight," and "No evictions, fight mayor White."

Administration Changes Praised

By MARK SILVERMAN News Editor

Just about everyone who is familiar with the way in which the U-Mass administration functions is applauding the Trustee decision to move the President's office to Boston, a move which the Daily Collegian predicted a month ago.

As Board Chairman Joseph P. Healy put it at Saturday's meeting, "The job (of President) has just become too complex and too large to be handled by the kind of office we now have."

The structure of the UMass administration has not changed during the university's period of growth from a cow college to a state-wide system in the past 15 years and the office of President functions with personnel assignments which, while adequate for running one small campus, fall far short of being capable of directing the school's three branches.

President Lederle said Saturday,"It is very hard to be objective about the entire University system while being located on one campus, and too often I have been accused of empire building at Amherst."

With the President's office located in Boston, but not on the Boston campus, Dr. Lederle's successor will be able to have a clear view of the overall operation of the school's three branches, and will be able to remain both physically and emotionally apart from them. This is essential in a time of rapid expansion in Amherst, construction of a permanent campus in Boston, and the establishment of a medical school in Worcester.

Under the new administration, the Chancellor's office at each campus would serve as the complete head of the branch, responsible only to the President. With this arrangement, each campus would benefit from the "top man's presence on campus" which has helped UMass-Amherst grow in the past 10 years. And the President's office would have a realistic workload, which would not include the day to day supervision of each campus, a job which Lederle has had to perform at Amherst, and a job which is surely one reason why he feels, "Ten years is the outside" limit for being a University President.

Another major headache which the new structure should help to relieve is the constant hassle between the President and the State Government over finances.

It is obvious that a major problem of the Lederle Administration has encountered has been the task of getting its budget passed each spring.

It is hoped by members of the Board of Trustees that the President's physical presence in Boston, with a staff of financial and budgetary specialists, will allow him greater contact with legislative leaders, and will aid in getting the University the money it needs each year.

This is sound reasoning. It removes the stigma of "ivory tower intellectual" which several members of the State's General Court have recently hung on the school's Amherst - based administration. If the move to Boston is successful only in lessening the strained relations between U-Mass and the State legislature, the reorganization will have been successful.

The new administration, then, will be provided with the superstructure necessary to coordinate a state-wide system, something which the school has always lacked. The Trustees have shown excellent judgment in outlining the shape of the Administration's future. All that now remains is for them to select the New President, the man who will run the show.

Federal Panel Recommends Homosexuality Laws Ended

NEW YORK (AP) - Time magazine said yesterday that a 14-member panel sponsored by the federal government has recommended to the Nixon administration a relaxation of laws dealing with homosexuality.

According to Time, the panel's report calls on the states to abolish laws making homosexual relations between consenting adults in private a crime. This has been done in Great Britain.

It also recommends that the government and private employers "reassess their current standards and implies that they should hire homosexuals who can pass normal screening procedures," the magazine said.

The panel's report was said also to call for establishment of a "major U.S. center for the study of sexuality-from sex patterns in animals to all kinds of normal and abnormal human sexual behavior. In addition, teachers and youth groups counselors should be better informed about homosexuality so that they can help rather than hector the young and law officers should be given facts to set against their irrational feelings."

Black Studies Program at the University. It was reported that presently visiting lecturers are teaching courses in Black History, Literature, and Politics, but there is no Black Studies Department. It appears however that this concept is under consideration as one Trustee stated, "Students are not necessarily interested in an all black faculty, but merely the quality of the courses, and a report on this matter will be presented later in October.

Alcoholic beverages and their use on campus will be considered at the next meeting of the Trustees, November 14th. Presently the motion is under legal study. It is believed however, that a motion allowing students over 21 to drink on campus will be passed.

Group Wants Rent Issue Put on Ballot

A group which calls itself the People's Interim Committee on Housing is circulating a petition in Amherst to place a rent control law on the warrant for the Nov. 3 special town meeting.

The proposal is based on a temporary rent control ordinance drawn up and submitted to the City Council of Cambridge. Spokesmen for the Amherst group said they believe that it has not yet been put into effect there.

The proposal, as set forth in Cambridge, would be in effect for four years after passage.

All housing would be subject to rent control except hotels, motels, tourist or rooming houses, or other accommodations "primarily for transient guests" or trailers used primarily for transients; " accommodations created by a change from non-housing to housing use"; single family dwellings and two and three-family dwellings in which the owner lives; institutions operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes on a non-profit basis (such as a hospital, monastery, asylum, nursing home, public institutions or college or school dormitory); or housing units owned, operated or partially financed by a government agency if a rent control law would cause financing to be withdrawn.

A three-member rent control board would be appointed to two-year terms by the town manager. They would be reimbursed for necessary expenses, but would receive no other compensation.

Also appointed by the town manager would be "a commissioner and administrators of the various departments hereinafter indicated. . .with two-year terms of office" and any assistants and clerical help necessary.

Decisions by the rent board would be made by majority vote.

INVESTIGATION

The commissioner would be able to investigate apparent violations of the rent control law and take necessary actions to enforce the law. All his actions would be subject to the review of the rent board.

Administrators created by the proposal are the administrator for the rent adjustment who would recommend adjustments in maximum rents; the administrator for tenant protection; and the administrator for investigation; and the administrator for enforcement and counsel.

Maximum rents would be set by freezing the rents at those paid on a predetermined date, subject to adjustment according to the rules of the proposal.

New housing units would have the maximum rent set at "the rent charged for similar accommodations in the immediate area.

V.P. Agnew Scores Viet Moratorium

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Vice President Spiro T. Agnew Sunday voiced the administration's harshest criticism yet of last Wednesday's Vietnam Moratorium, saying such protests are being pressed by hard-core dissidents and professional anarchists.

In a speech prepared for a testimonial dinner here, Agnew said American views on the war are being greatly distorted. He added:

"The recent Vietnam Moratorium is a reflection of the confusion that exists in America today. Thousands of well-motivated young people, coaditioned since childhood to respond to great emotional appeals, saw fit to demonstrate for peace.

"Most did not stop to consider that the leaders of the moratorium had billed it as a massive public outpouring of sentiment against the foreign policy of the President of the United States.

Agnew said the only purpose the moratorium served was "as an emotional purgative for those who feel the need to cleanse themselves of their lack of ability to offer a constructive solution to the problem.

Agnew said the Nixon administration is working to end the war and said the criticism of anti-war factions is not justified. He repeated a list of signs which the administration says indicate progress in the war.

Drug Laws Under Change

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration will seek Congressional approval Monday for changes in its drug-control bill that would substantially reduce the penalties for first-time offenders possessing any drug for personal use.

This was confirmed by John E. Ingersoll, director of the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. He will appear Monday before the Senate committee on juvenile delinquency.

The penalties for drug traffickers would be made higher than the penalties for users.

As a misdemeanor, for instance, the crime of marijuana possession would bring a first offender a maximum penalty of one year in jail, or a $5,000 fine, or both.

UConn Ombudsman Hailed

STORRS, Conn., - The appointment of an ombudsman "in the area of race relations" was announced here today by the president of the University of Connecticut.

The action by Dr. Homer D. Babbidge Jr., head of the university, came after the third racial disturbance at the university in less than a week.

The man appointed to the ombudsman post is Dr. Frederick G. Adams, a Negro, who is special assistant to the university president for health-related education and chairman of the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities.

Earlier today, Dr. Babbidge issued a statement to all members of the Storrs community saying that "any student charged with incitement of a racial incident wherein the division of student personnel makes a finding of probable cause will be liable to immediate suspension."

The most recent racial incident occurred yesterday when a black coed said she was bombarded with water and tomatoes from the fourth-floor windows of a men's dormitory.

The incident was followed by a statement from the Black Student Union, a newly formed campus group, declaring that "it is the responsibility of the administration to stop the continuous harassment of blacks by whites on this campus."

The B.S.U. warned that the university would henceforth "be responsible for all racist acts" and said that if sufficient measures to prevent such acts were not forthcoming the administration itself would "feel the brunt of the actions taken by blacks in self defense."

MY OWN TRIP

I Am Lederle(Yellow)

Seventy-nine college presidents from around the country signed their names to a letter, reprinted in the N.Y. Times last October 11 and 12, asking President Nixon to withdraw American troops from Vietnam. Not one president from any of our nation's state universities was given the chance to put his name to that letter. It doesn't even matter. We've come to expect their other cheek. The subsequent inaction implies that they were reasonably satisfied not to have been asked to sign the letter. They would rather not have to answer to their governors.

Our most conspicuous leaders, those whom society would expect to be the most effective role models, are forced to exhibit a perverted, spineless, amoral posture as they quake, their pants accordioned around their ankles, before the garbage minds of state legislators whose position on the liberal-conservative scale is determined, not by the degree to which they support or oppose protest, but by the strategies they would use to squelch it.

Yes you, President Lederle, you bastion of mediocrity. You, who made yourself a lame duck last spring, who now risks no occupational security by your statements, who are ignored by our parsimonious lugubrious legislature anyway. You, in your last year as our president, repelled your last chance to take a personal stand on a moral issue. Your position is insane. Your guilt is as great as the generals and presidents who have directed this war.

You say you'll teach government at UMass next year, Dr. Lederle. I don't believe it. I don't believe you could survive in a classroom of students pleading for justice while you prefer silence. It seems more likely that your eyes are focused elsewhere. You've proven yourself perfectly qualified to serve in the Nixon administration. Your mediocre, amoral, and uninspiration.l leadership puts you right in line for a post in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in a government saturated with other similarly qualified people.

Perhaps the most important function of a University, Mr. Lederle, is that, willingly or not, it provides the environment in which most of its students form the value systems that guide the rest of their lives. The administration, and especially the leader of that administration, has two choices. Either he can claim no responsibility for this process going on under him, or he can set an example he feels worthy of emulation. To choose the former is to repeat the Original Sin of Cain and Abel (where essentially half of mankind denied a responsibility for the other half). To accept the latter is to take a moral stand on the important issues we face and to allow that stand to be challenged, examined, and judged.

The universities need not take a moral stand, though in the case of Vietnam we feel they must, but those most responsible for leadership within the universities must take personal stands the weight of which have no more effect in a state legislature than that person's dignity has in the state. Our state university presidents unanimously posed in silent prostitution to their suppressive governments last week. Which side one takes on an issue is really much less important than the fact that one takes a side at all. You, Mr. Lederle, perhaps more than any of the others, should have stood up to be counted. I would remind you that those who will not be judged by those whom they affect will surely be judged by history.

TraditionandProtest

Revolution can be fun, especially if it is the socially "in" thing to do. I've been meditating on the Moratorium and have come away greatly disillusioned. To be sure, it has had and will continue to have effect's on Nixon's Vietnam non-policy. It contributed to the general psychological mood of dissatisfaction in the nation. The door-to-door canvassing was probably useful to the anti-war cause too. But something has been happening to the "movement", to all the "movements", that I don't like.

I feel that a public university in America, in order to encourage and safeguard those often-quoted principles of freedom, should not be a tool of the government. But it is a PUBLIC institution, paid for and representative of all the people, and EVERY opinion should be treated with respect and equality. I commend President Lederle and the Faculty-Senate for refusing to compromise the rights of any students on campus by their Moratorium stand. I disagree, however, emphatically with President Lederle's personal opinion about the war.

You cannot fight for Peace. It is illogical and irrational, and realistically, it has not succeeded in the last four thousand years. If the Moratorium had been based upon the conviction that the most utilitarian method of obtaining Peace was being Peaceful, it would have been more palatable to me. But it was based on the belief that the Vietnam war in PARTICULAR, was unjust. Many people spoke to implied and stated that they would bear arms for their country, if their country was in the "right". What this means is that the people of America are changing only their OPINION; they are not changing their selves and their character. Should the Vietnamese war end this minute, Americans would still be the people fighting and killing and exploiting and assasinating, and the liberals and the radicals would be in front of the battle line, right next to their conservative and reactionary brethren. I see no difference between a McCarthyite dropping bags of urine on a cop, a 10-star Pentagon general, a radical verbally taunting a cop, and a cop clouting the radical.

I'll admit it. I'm disgusted, disillusioned and nihilistic toward just about everything and everyone in this country. My inertia will probably carry me to Washington next month, but I know it will be useless. The question is not how to to change WHAT men think, but how to change the WAY men think. The Moratorium is as traditionally American as apple pie, you know.

The Artist As A Nonparticipant

To be completely fair in judging a concert, an audience must put as much effort into listening to a performer, as the performer does in trying to communicate to his audience. There are some performers, however, who demand that the listeners come to them, that the listeners do all the work, rather than meeting them halfway. Tim Hardin and Laura Nyro at the homecoming concert Friday night refused absolutely to detour from their ego trips and visit their audience.

Hardin was a sensitive, human poet who spoke of love, happiness, and pain. His musical accompaniments on piano and guitar were basic, but complimentary to his monotonous, slurred voice. The few times he spoke to the audience, albeit slightly incoherent, were the only times he managed to break the somnulent mood of his songs. Even his encore, "Simple Song of Freedom", interrupted by an anonymous shout of "November 15th" from an individual in the audience, became a down when he failed to encourage his listeners to join in, and when he cut the song short by neglecting a last repetition of the chorus. If one wished to close his eyes and melt into his date, Hardin was probably not that dull. If one wished to be entertained, it was more fun to watch the security guards retrieving the dropped pocketbooks that were underneath the bleachers.

Laura Nyro is an excellent pianist and vocalist. Her compositions, however, are divided into two periods - her earlier loud and rhythmic same-old-song period, and her current soft and emotive same-old-song period. Taken individually, each song was solid and deeply felt by Miss Nyro. But I dislike performers who smile only when they're "supposed to", and who do not know how to use microphones so that they blast the audience with a harsh shrillness, or make the audience strain to hear what is being said. I also feel that a performer should not inundate his audience with relatively unknown and similar songs, especially, if like Laura Nyro, he has established hits like "Sweet Blindness" and "Eli", which Miss Nyro ignored, despite the audience's protestations. Perhaps I'm being too harsh on her, but Laura Nyro without a studio backup, even when she did one of her hits, was not able to let the audience fully involve itself.

ART BUCHWALD

Jackie's Judo Instructor

WASHINGTON - Hard on the heels of Mary Gallagher's best seller, "My Life with Jacqueline Kennedy", comes a new book of startling revelations titled, "I Was Jackie Kennedy Onassis' Judo Instructor," written by Chikara Hadaka of the Grappling Falls Athletic Club.

Hadaka invited me to sit on his mat as he told me how he came to write the book.

"One day, pretty lady come to me and say, 'Hadaka, I wish to learn honorable sport of judo.'

"I say to lady, 'Why you want to learn such honorable sport?'

"And she reply, 'Because I want to go to the movies.'

"I say, 'Pretty Lady, why must you learn honorable judo to go to movies?'

"And she say, 'Because I want to see honorable "I Am Curious (Yellow)."'

" 'Ah, so,' I reply. 'Then I will teach you so you will be able to see not only honorable "I Am Yellow" but also honorable "Oh Calcutta." '

"Pretty lady is very happy and say, 'How much do lessons cost?' I say, '$7. an hour.'

"She say, 'That is lot of money..'

"I say, 'When I teach you, you will be able to even see "Andy Warhol." ' She say OK, providing I no tell her husband how much lessons cost."

"So," I said, "you taught her the fundamentals of judo."

He said, "Pretty lady say she want to learn certain techniques to use against photographers. She no interested in grappling or double-knuckle rolls. She want to concentrate on hand-and-hip throws and the rear-double-lapel tourniquet.

"I say, 'I will teach you that, but if you go to the movies you must also learn "two-hand-slap from a sitting position" and "step-over arm drag."'

"She say, 'All right. Teach me everything so I will be safe to go to honorable "I Am Curious (Yellow)" '

"Was she a good pupil?"

"She learn fast. In one day she know 'single-arm hug,' 'feet-in-neck-and-hip' and 'shin-on-calf.' For exercises I hold press camera, and she try to throw me over shoulder. One day she had me in near half-nelson, and she say to me, 'Hadaka, I do not know what I would do without you.'

"I say, 'Jackie, I will remain in this half-nelson as long as you want me to.'

"We were very close to each other. But that is not to say we did not have trouble. For one thing, she keep buying new judo pajamas, but she no want me to tell her husband. She spend $4,000 a week on new judo clothes. Then she have me take to secondhand judo clothes dealer and sell them for her and bring back money.

"Once I admired a pair of judo pajamas she was wearing and she gave them to me for $65.

"All the same time she very kind. One time she have me in four-hammer lock for two hours. And when I tell her it my wedding anniversary, she let me go."

"It sounds as if she really was an excellent pupil."

"Oh, yes. In short while she become sixth-degree black belt. When I inform her this, she bring in beautiful jewel-encrusted sword. Present from Shah of Iran. She ask me to put the jewels from sword on black belt. I say it not possible and she very angry and ask me, 'How can I go see honorable "I Am Curious (Yellow)" without jewels on my black belt?"

Mr. Hadaka, why did you decide to write this book and violate Mrs. Onassis' confidence?"

"Because when she go to movie and flip news photographer over shoulder, she deny she know honorable sport of judo and say stupid photographer slip. Hadaka lose face. So Hadaka call literary agent and say, 'KIAI! I am ready to talk.'"

Campus Comment

The Fuzz

Those who were part of the teach-in at Hampden dining commons on the eve of the Moratorium may have noticed the presence of a blue uniform watching from its seat in a corner. A cop. Neither needed nor wanted there; at best ignored.

As the teach-in broke up and everyone departed for a few hours of needed sleep, one person noticed the uniform and spoke to it. A few more drifters gathered around.

Here's the hassle:

All of us were accustomed to automatically looking at a uniform with distrust. In the next three hours we learned the injustice of that attitude as we discovered a man sitting there. As the uniforms (blue shirt, badge, and short hair, bell-bottoms, beads, and long hair) slowly receeded to their proper place in the obscure, misty background, the people sitting around a table came out where they could see each other clearly.

We ALL rapped.
It was REAL.
What more can we SAY?

We want to thank that man for letting us in, as he thanked us for letting him in.

Peace, all of us.

Five College Cooperation Book Published

Four private colleges and a public university in western Massachusetts - Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges and UMass - have published the final report of a Five College Long Range Planning Committee.

The report, FIVE COLLEGE COOPERATION: DIRECTIONS FOR THE FUTURE, is a working document for the consideration of the faculties, students, and administrations of the five institutions. It is the result of over a year's deliberations of a sixteen member committee appointed by the five Presidents in the spring of 1968 "to make an extensive review of present cooperative arrangements among the five institutions, assess their strengths and weaknesses, propose long range goals for cooperation, and establish priorities among actions required to reach those goals."

The Committee considered the problems faced by all institutions of higher education as they attempt to keep pace with new knowledge in the face of escalating costs and inadequate resources. The Committee emphasizes its belief that one of the great strengths of American higher education lies in diversity. It believes that cooperation in certain areas can help each institution to educate its students better than if it were alone and thus maintain and enhance diversity among them.

Recommendations in the report include proposals for increasing the exchange of faculty members and students among the colleges and for increased cooperation in geopgraphic area studies and overseas programs, the arts, and the new fields of black studies and urban studies. It calls for the support of a cooperative Field Office for Urban and Regional Studies, and for increased cooperation in the use of libraries, computers, museums, and other facilities.

The report proposes the establishment of a special five-college committee to coordinate programs for disadvantaged students, and of other committees to further study cooperative efforts in such areas as summer programs and continuing education. It urges cooperation between the institutions and the towns in which they are located in attempts to preserve and rationally develop the environment of the upper Connecticut River Valley. It also considers ways in which cooperation might further assist the three single-sex colleges (Mount Holyoke and Smith for women and Amherst for men) cope with the trend toward coeducation.

A major recommendation by the committee is that all five institutions adopt the four-one-four calendar which would divide the academic year into two four-month semesters separated by one month for special study. During the January term special or experimental educational projects might be undertaken and exchange of students and faculty among the institutions could be facilitated. A number of proposals are made concerning fund raising for the cooperative enterprise and concerning the governing structure for cooperation.

Although the report deals specifically only with the five colleges, the committee considered reports from other academic consortia as well. It is their hope that the principles developed in the report, and perhaps some of the specific proposals, will be useful to other institutions of higher education which are engaged in cooperative undertakings. Over fifty consortia with professional staffs now exist among institutions of higher education in the United States, and the number is growing each year as colleges and universities discover the potential academic and financial advantages of cooperation.

The Five College Long Range Planning Committee included from each institution a senior faculty member, an academic officer of high rank, and a principal business officer. The Five College Coordinator served as chairman. The report has been transmitted for study to members of the five colleges with a joint memorandum signed by all five Presidents. Each institution plans to hold preliminary discussions of the report in faculty meetings within a few weeks.

Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges and the University of Massachusetts have cooperated informally from the time of their founding. Formal cooperative arrangments developed in the last twenty years include regulations for the exchange and joint appointments of faculty members and interchange of students, a cooperative Ph. D. program, cooperation in the use of library resources, publication of a cooperative calendar of events and joint support of a radio station (WVCR-FM) and a journal of literature and public affairs (THE MASSACHUSETTS REVIEW). The first Coordinator was appointed in 1957. In 1958 a four-college committee recommended the establishment of a fifth college in the Valley. Hampshire College was founded in 1965 and will receive its first students in 1970. The Five College Coordinator, appointed in 1967, is employed by the institutions through a corporation, Five Colleges, Inc.

A United States Steel Foundation grant of $5,000 in the summer of 1968 helped underwrite the committee. The Richard K. Mellon Trusts made a grant of $100,000 in 1969 which will assist in carrying out further cooperation in academic areas.

FIVE COLLEGE COOPERATION: DIRECTIONS FOR THE FUTURE, a 228-page, paperback book, can be obtained through the University of Massachusetts Press, Amherst, Massachusetts, 01002, at $5.00 per copy.

Political Thinker Speaks on Left In Union Today

Dr. Herbert Aptheker, prominent American historian, a leading theoretician of the American Communist Party, and presently Director of Black Studies at Bryn Mawr College, will deliver a lecture on "The Reappearance of a Left in America" today, October 20, at 8:15 p.m. in SBA 120. A reception for Dr. Aptheker in the Colonial Lounge, Student Union, will follow the lecture. The public is invited; no admission is charged.

While a graduate student at Columbia University, Aptheker published several pioneering studies of the roles of the Negro in the American Revolution, the Abolitionist Movement, and the Civil War. His doctoral dissertation was subsequently published as AMERICAN NEGRO SLAVE REVOLTS, the first fully documented study of Black resistance to slavery in the United States.

Among his other works on the history of the American Negro are ESSAYS IN THE HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO, A DOCUMENTARY HISTORY OF THE NEGRO PEOPLE IN THE UNITED STATES, ONE CONTINUAL CRY: WALKER'S APPEAL and NAT TURNER'S SLAVE REBELLION.

During the 1950's Dr. Aptheker was one of the most vocal and courageous opponents of McCarthyism and wrote on both the more visible repression represented by McCarthy, and the subtler, continuing threat of the "New Conservatism." The best known of his works to come out of this period are THE ERA OF McCARTHYISM, written at the height of McCarthyism, LAUREATES OF IMPERIALISM: AMERICAN BUSINESS REWRITES AMERICAN HISTORY, HISTORY AND REALITY, a collection of polemical essays, and THE WORLD OF C. WRIGHT MILLS. Got a bright idea?

Come on, man, shine a new light on the subject. Views are changing and Marg Benning of Auburn University has created a new ad for our good friend...Coca-Cola. But it's not just a bright idea, it's Marg's impression of our product and that's important to us. What about you?

How do you see Coke as part of your today? Why not take a few moments to design an ad for us? Show us your unique way of looking at Coca-Cola. Go ahead...grab a Coke and lay the words on us! If your ad is chosen to be published, we'll lay $25.00 on you.

Who knows? You may be $25.00 richer. And, if nothing else, you're bound to enjoy the Coca-Cola. When your bright idea for Coke is on paper, mail it to:

Dance Groups to Visit UMass In Dance Residency Program

Two world renowned dance companies will participate in one-week residency programs as part of a joint project involving the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Boston University Celebrity Series, and UMass.

The Alwin Nikolais Dance Company and the Merce Cunningham Dance Company will appear for three days each here and in Boston in a coordinated program of performances, lecture demonstrations and master classes. The Nikolais Company is scheduled for the third week in November (Amherst, Nov. 18-20 and Boston Nov. 21-23,) and the Cunningham troupe for the third week in February (Amherst, Feb. 17-19 and Boston, Feb. 20-22).

The primary aim of the Coordinated Dance Residency Program is to increase audience awareness of dance in the United States through greater exposure than is usually provided by one-night-stand tours, and by making available reduced-rate ticket prices to secondary school students - not only for regular performances but also for related activities such as lecture demonstrations and master classes.

Applications for tickets are being sent to schools and teachers in the pilot areas. Special consideration will be given to public schools whose students have limited opportunity for exposure to dance as a contemporary art form. In addition, dance teachers in secondary schools and colleges will be encouraged to take advantage of this unusual opportunity. Tickets will be made available on a first-come, first-served basis.

This special touring program was designed by the National Endowment for the Arts to develop regional circuits of new sponsorship for the best of American modern dance companies, and to provide engagements of a type that serve both the audience and the dance companies to a greater degree than would otherwise be possible.

New England forms one of these regional circuits. Each state arts council has found local sponsors in areas conducive to supporting a company for a residency of at least one-half week.

John R. Watts, chairman of the Council on the Arts and Humanities, said that Amherst and Boston were chosen as centrally-located communities drawing on large numbers of people interested in seeing dance. It is hoped that more communities might be served in future years, pending increased funding at the state level.

"Dance is the most exciting and least understood of the performing arts today," said Mr. Watts. "America leads the world in its contribution to contemporary dance, but only a relative handful of Americans ever have a chance to see what's happening with our major companies. Massachusetts sees only one or two of these companies a year, and tickets are sold out to devotees months in advance. I hope this project which brings to Massachusetts two national companies of outstanding excellence will be just the beginning of additional fine programs in dance."

CONCERT REVIEW
Sly and The Family Stone

By BOB LYNCH
Fine Arts Staff

Despite countless annoyances and the inconsideration of some of the performers and most of the audience, the overall effect of Saturday night's concert was good. Sly and the Family Stone were delayed, as seems to be their custom, causing the entire show to begin almost an hour after scheduled. As a result, the performance given by Sly himself at the first show was extremely brief, approximately a half hour long without an encore.

The first act presented at the ten o'clock show was a very talented and powerful singer, Vivian Reed. Although handicapped by a small back-up group and an imprecise drummer she came across as a diversified and moving entertainer and would have been a perfect lead into Sly and the Family Stone. However, another act followed, Tony Joe White, which although good, was out of context with the rest of the concert. His precise guitarmanship and bluesy harmonica playing were marred by his absurd lyrics. For example, his opening number consisted of a series of lines such as "higher on my shoulder" and out of tune groans in an attempt to simulate his reactions to someone scratching his back. In contrast to the dramatic and appealing rendition of "Summertime" given as Miss Read's finale, Tony Joe's style of country music set to a soul beat left much to be desired and caused him to be subjected to the heckling of a largely hostile audience. Finally, following his one recognizable tune, "Polk Salad Annie" and after a great deal of technical difficulty, Sly and the Family Stone appeared on stage.

The performance began strangely, with each musician positioned and playing softly, apparently as the y felt, until Sly, eyes closed throughout, set the tempo with his foot and brought the whole group crashing into the beginning of their number. At this point, the entire Cage seemed to erupt as everyone jumped up and began clapping and dancing. Although individually, none of the musicians or singers are outstanding, their music as a whole is exciting and even captivating. One outstanding musical contribution, however, is the powerful and artistic bass playing which generates the excitement and provides a foundation for the fast, heavy, and loud music that Sly and the Family are noted for. This second performance was almost twice as long as their seven o'clock show and included an encore. The finale of the act itself was the traditional "Higher" which achieved the same result evidenced at Newport and Woodstock, working up the entire audience to a clapping, screaming frenzy that would not subside until the group came back on to do an encore. This last song, the slower "Fun in the Summertime", was quieter and provided an opportunity to hear the harmony and witness the craftsmanship of a group working perfectly together. From this, the ended abruptly leaving the audience "high", happy and satisfied.

CONCERT REVIEW
In Spite of The Cage

By STEPHEN WALT
Fine Arts Editor

Last Friday night, Tim Hardin and Laura Nyro opened Homecoming, performing to a near-capacity crowd in Curry Hicks Cage. The entertainment was fantastic, though there was something lacking to the concert-a decent hall. Aside from the discomfort of the Cage, intimacy, a condition requisite to a concert of this sort, is entirely lacking there.

Tim Hardin opened the concert with "Hard to Believe." His voice is as smooth and expressive in person as on records, if less intelligible in the Cage; it seemed to float out into the audience. His set was comprised almost entirely of his already popular songs, like "If I Were a Carpenter." He moved from guitar to piano to play a new song for us, "How Can We Hang on to a Dream." He came back on stage after an enthusiastic ovation and sang two encores, including the famous "Simple Song of Freedom." Remember October 15.

Laura Nyro's style was better adapted to the hall, as it is driving and powerful. She played her own jazz accompaniment on piano. Her voice is an incredibly expressive instrument - sometimes crystal-clear, sometimes raucous, sometimes wistful and imploring- in many ways a jazz combination of Dionne Warwick and Judy Collins. I don't know what the audience had expected of her, but many people left during her performance. Maybe they expected a sound like the 5th Dimension, who popularized her "Stone Soul Pinic," which she played as an encore. Or maybe they were uncomfortable.

Miss Nyro did a lot of talking between songs which was, predictably, indistinguishable. She, like Harding, kept to her better known songs for much of her set; songs such as "Wedding Bell Blues" and "Carry On."

Both performers were stimulating and are among those who are at least as good in concert as on records, much to their credit. The concert was successful in spite of the Cage.

BOOK REVIEW
The Selling of Joseph: A Memorial

By ROBERT SCIRETTA
Fine Arts Staff

In 1700 ex-witch hunter Samuel Sewall printed a squeamish whisper for the abolition of slavery in New England in a tract titled, "The Selling of Joseph." Now, poor 'Joseph' has fallen under the searching light of academic scrutiny.

If it were only for the first section, which is the reprint of Sewall's 'Joseph', the book could possibly have some humorous value to those interested in high camp (if they can read Latin). However, all laughing stops as the reader wades his way through the rest of the book, in which the editor dazzles us with associated minutiae that supposably puts this puritanical piece of dreck into "historical perspective." Despite the editors valiant attempt to attach some importance to "The Selling of Joseph," the reader is left quite bored and unconvinced.

Smith College Announces Playwrights Workshop

The Smith College Department of Theatre and Speech is pleased to announce an intensive three-week playwrights Workshop from November 17 to December 5 under the direction of William Gibson, President of the Berkshire Theatre Festival and author of such plays as TWO FOR THE SEESAW and THE MIRACLE WORKER.

The core of the Workshop activities will be laboratory productions of new scripts, mounted by a visiting professional director and a small company of visiting professional actors. All writers in the Five-College or Valley area are invited to submit their work either by mail or in person to:

Scripts of ANY length will be considered. The deadline for submissions is November 3, 1969.

The Workshop events will be open to all who are interested. Plays will be discussed while in the process of their rehearsals. If the selected plays are brief, they may be given two contrasting productions back-to-back, so that the playwright and his audiences can experience the various viable approaches to a written script once it reaches the stage.

Prior to the three-week Workshop production period, Mr. Gibson will be present at the Center for the Performing Arts on the Smith Campus to confer with student playwrights on October 20 and November 10. During the three-week Workshop period, other playwrights currently active in professional theatre will come to Smith to join in the discussion of the plays being staged.

The Playwrights Workshop is part of an on-going program linking professional theatre artists and the students and staff of the Smith College Department of Theatre and Speech under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. All those interested in this and other workshops to be announced are cordially invited to join in what we hope will become a Valley-wide exploration of the creative process in theatre.

Piano virtuoso Grant Johannesen and Zara Nelsova, often called the "queen of cellists", will give joint recitals on November 4 and 5 in Bowker Auditorium at UMass.

Miss Nelsova will return to Massachusetts in December for a group of concerts with the Boston Symphony conducted by William Steinberg.

One of the highlights of Mr. Johannesen's fall schedule will be an appearance at New York's Philharmonic Hall with the Little Orchestra Society. Mr. Johannesen, who has an international reputation as an interpreter both of Beethoven and of modern French music, will perform Milhaud's First Piano Concerto.

Redmen Send Smoke Signals

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

A workmanlike performance by the UMass football team Saturday, reminiscent of opponents' performances the past year, signaled the fact that (1) the Redmen have to be considered a favorite for the Yankee Conference title because they remain the only undefeated team in the conference and (2) UMass may have turned the corner as far as winning teams are concerned since they did not play particularly well, but still won.

Actually the corner was turned a week ago in Boston beneath the scenic setting of railroad tracks at B.U. field. But, before a Homecoming crowd at more pleasant surroundings of Alumni Stadium, that even on a so-so day, the Redmen possess an overpowering running attack, and a ball control offense that should improve as weeks go on.

Coach Vic Fusia anticipated the Redmen running a lot before the game started and run they did to the tune of 397 yards.

The 70 rushing attempts by U-Mass set a new school record. Fusia commented, "We haven't been that successful with the pass, and knew we could run on Rhode Island."

Tim Adams went virtually the whole way for the Redmen at quarterback, something which was not expected since Fusia intended to alternate Adams with Ken Hughes. But the coach said, "Timmy moved us right away and I guess it was a case of let's get another one quick. But I'll interchange them usually for the rest of the way."

Fusia did not want to give the impression that he was pleased with the performance, on the contrary he moaned, "I really wasn't impressed with everything we did. I don't think the offense or defense played exceptionally well."

There were some dark spots to the win. Defensive tackle Bill Sroka, an excellent performer throughout, injured his knee in the first half, and pending medical reports could be lost for an extended time. Center Dave Levine and fullback Ed Sarno both were shaken up, but neither are expected to miss any action.

Fusia does not want to call his team a favorite for the Conference crown. He looks for more evidence following this Saturday's game with Connecticut. As the coach said, "That should answer a lot of questions."

REDMAN RANTINGS - Dick Cummings and Ed Sarno, along with Pat Scavone gained 319 yards between them . . . Cummings' 24 carries were two short of a U-Mass record . . . Craig Lovell, who looked excellent in his limited performances, scored again, making his probably the highest scorer per minute in the area . . . Bob Pena recovered a fumble and was immense on a number of blocks . . . Following Sroka's injury, Andy Guarino blocked a couple of passes and was in on a number of tackles . . . The halftime was probably the best in recent memory . . . The UMass performance was musically, visually, and comedy speaking excellent. . . The URI band, a huge contingent, had a powerful sound. . . And the extra man on the field added the perfect touch . . . Vermont defeated New Hampshire soundly, serving notice that the Catamounts are for real . . . . Connecticut routed Maine . . .

Three rushes by Cummings, single gainers by Scavone, Grasso and Lovell and a nine-yard sideline toss to Long, all combined to advance the ball to the Ram one, where Lovell took it over for the touchdown. Gagnon's boot put the Redmen out ahead, 21-3, three minutes and nine seconds into the third period.

Rhody came right back at their hosts and marched 66 yards in ten plays with soph quarterback Bob Ehrhardt sneaking in from one yard out. Ehrhardt, who had an excellent afternoon hitting on 14 of 26 passes for 163 yards, got the break he needed when UMass got tagged with a pass-interference penalty on its own one yard line. On the next play, he scored his TD.

A fake kick-after-touchdown attempt went for naught and with 6:41 elapsed in the third quarter, the scoring for the day had ended.

The rest of the contest saw five UMass drives end in frustration on the Ram 48, 17, 10, 28 and 34 yard lines. In the meantime, URI made their way into UMass territory only once.

A tip of the hat here goes to the defense. It gave up only one touchdown and a Steve Collis field goal of 27 yards early in the first quarter. Although it surrendered 163 yards to the strong throwing arm of Ehrhardt, it limited the URI ground game to 92 yards in 42 attempts, a meager 2.2 yards a crack.

The story of the game can be summed up as a strong Redmen defense and massive running offense (four-fifths of UMass' total yardage came on the ground) being just too much for the poor Rams to handle.

Landry Leads Lions Past Bears, 13-7

DETROIT (AP) - Quarterback Greg Landry, former UMass star, starting his first game of the year and only the third in two seasons, fired a 12-yard touchdown pass to Johnny Wright and Errol Mann kicked a pair of field goals to give the Detroit Lions a 13-7 victory over the Chicago Bears Sunday.

The Detroit touchdown came only three plays after rookie Bear quarterback Bobby Douglas, playing in his first game, threw a 32-yard touchdown pass to Bob Wallace.

The Lions suffered a severe blow late in the first quarter when halfback Mel Farr, the NFL's fourth leading rusher, was racked up.

Redmen Beat RI, 21-9, In Homecoming Clash

MONDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1969

In unspectacular fashion, UMass' powerful running attack scored three touchdowns and the defense turned in another solid performance as the Redmen clipped the University of Rhode Island, 21-9, in Saturday's Homecoming Football Affair before an Alumni Stadium turnout of 16,200.

It was UMass' second straight win and boosted their season's mark to 3-2 while pushing the now 0-5 Rams further into oblivion.

The Redmen amassed 397 yards on the ground in 70 (s-e-v-e-n-t-y) rushing attempts. The biggest contributors were Pat Scavone with 118 yards in 14 carries, Dick Cummings with 124 yards on 24 carries and co-captain Ed Sarno with 77 yards in 11 tries.

Quick arithmetic finds that the fullbacking team of Sarno and Cummings were responsible for 201 yards or more than half of the rushing offense. Both players earned their first TD's of the '69 season in the 14-point UMass second quarter.

On the fifth play of the second period UMass' Steve Rogers punted the ball on a fourth down from his team's own 37. Jim Engott of URI signalled for a fair catch on the Ram 30-yard stripe but dropped the ball which was immediately pounced on by Redman Bob Pena.

Jerry Grasso took the ball for three yards on the first play which was followed by a right sideline pass to the 20-yard line from quarterback Tim Adams to split end Jim Long, leaving the Redmen a foot shy of a first down.

Two straight three-yard pickups by Cummings got the first down and put the ball on the 14. Successive runs by Scavone and Craig Lovell gave UMass a first down four yards from paydirt. The call went to Cummaings and the bruising sophomore crashed through the middle of the visitors' line for the score. Dennis Gagnon's conversion attempt was good and with 4:11 gone in the second period, the Redmen had a 7-3 advantage.

After the pigskin changed hands four times the home team embarked on its second scoring drive which comprised seven running plays and covered 75 yards, the last seven of which belonged to Sarno who ripped up the middle for the score.

The biggest gainer of the march was a 29-yard ramble by Scavone, who was sprung on a key block in the offensive line by Pena. Gagnon added the 14th point to complete UMass' scoring for the first half.

The second half was won in points by the Redmen, 7-6. Neither team, however, particularly turned on the crowd which started to file out with about seven minutes to go in the game.

UMass received the second half kickoff and ended their scoring for the day nine plays and 67 yards later.

Scavone took the ball on the first play from scrimmage on the 33 and picked up 27 yards on a sweep left. Sarno, blocking for Scavoae, was injured on the play and would only carry the ball two more times for the remainder of the game, thus paving the way for Cummings' workout.

UMass Booters Sting URI, 2-1, for Third Win

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass soccer team scored a well-earned upset victory over Rhode Island Saturday, 2-1. The win was the third of the season for the Redmen in five games and gave them a 2-1 conference record. Only undefeated Vermont is ahead of the Redmen and the two teams clash later in the season.

UMass came back from an early 1-0 deficit to beat the Rams, the defending conference champs. The game was evenly played in the early stages, but URI broke the scoring ice midway through the first period on a goal by John Crocker. UMass goalie Tom Malone had made a diving stop on a URI shot but the ball bounced off his hands right out in front of the net where Crocker was waiting.

The goal fired up the Redmen as they proceeded to dominate play for the remainder of the period. Lindo Alves was thwarted on a scoring attempt when the Ram goalie made a diving save. Moments later the URI goalie was caught way out of the net but the Redmen forwards couldn't get a good shot off.

The Redmen tied the score late in the first period on a fine effort by fullback Paul Slack. Slack, noted mainly for his defensive abilities, took the ball deep in his own territory and proceeded to move the length of the field for the unassisted goal. He must have surprised even his own coach with a series of beautiful fakes which allowed him to get the shot off.

The Redmen continued to dominate the game in the second period. Duane Brown made a strong bid for a goal but the Rhody netminder reached high over his head to deflect the ball. Redmen cocaptain Dick Meyer, recovering from a knee injury, saw a great deal of action and also narrowly missed scoring a goal.

The third period was evenly played and the Redmen missed an excellent chance to go ahead when Lindo Alves' penalty kick was a bit too high and hit the crossbar. However, the Redmen, who played much more inspired soccer than the Rams, were not about to settle for a tie.

Larry Defelice and Dick Matusczak, who both had outstanding games, combined for the game winner early in the last period. Matusczak fed the ball in front of the net to Defelice who knocked it in to put the Redmen in front. The remainder of the game saw the Rams desperately trying to tie the score but the Redmen defenders held off all of their attempts.

A happy Peter Broaca attributed the win to "an outstanding team effort." And indeed it was. Broaca substituted freely and received fine efforts from Marc Cantor, Slack, Augie Calheno and just about everyone else he put in. The win puts the Redmen in a contenders spot for the conference crown after a disasterous loss to Maine early in the season. They have a week off before entertaining Tufts on Saturday morning.

Meeting a much improved Boston College team, the Redmen harriers overcame the Eagles on the BC home course, 25-32, last Friday.

Boston College's top two men, John Mahoney and Ron Zabel battled UMass' co-captains Ron Wayne and Leo Duart for two and a half miles of the five mile Franklin Park course before the Redmen leaders pulled away with Wayne finishing first in 24:48 and Duart nailing down second in 25:10. Mahoney and Zabel came in third and fourth.

Breaking between BC's first two and second two men, Charlie Diel and John Iles, was UMass' Larry Paulson. Paulson was clocked in 25:37 taking fifth, running another strong, consistent race for UMass.

Following Diel and Iles was Tom Derderian, who placed eighth in 26:12 and Bruce Blackburn, the strongest sophomore on this year's squad, taking ninth in 26:18. UMass also tallied 10th and 11th with Steve Whicher running 26:25 and Dun Dunsky, 26:43.

Turning in their best races of the year were Bob Jayes, eighth man for UMass, clocked in 27:10 and ninth man Don Brigham in 27:20.

BC was "up" for the meet and their top runners ripped a lot of time from their best previous efforts but UMass' team depth proved too much for the Eagles. The maroon shirted harriers shot out from the starting line and at the mile had ten runners accompanying BC's top men. The Eagles strong efforts couldn't overcome the group of Redmen runners as UMass improved their record to 4-3.

With six consecutive victories, this close, cohesive team seems to be a top threat for the frosh New England Title. Following Jasmin and Swain the positions have been interchanging and the closeness of the top eight men make them a threat to possibly post the best freshman cross-country record at UMass.

The next opponent for both varsity and freshmen is Springfield college, on Tuesday in Springfield. The Springfield team is much improved over the one UMass handled easily last year and may pose a threat to the winning streak of three straight by the varsity.

Beatlemania Hits - Is McCartney Dead?

By CHESTER ADAMCZYK
Staff Reporter

A rumor is spreading around campus and the nation that Paul McCartney has been dead for over two years. Evidence supporting this claim exists in lyrics and illustrations of Beatle albums.

A man named Billy Shers was transformed by plastic surgery allegedly and selected to take Mc Cartney's place. In response to the claim, Ted Nahil of WMUA personally called Apple Records and the Beatles press secretary flatly denied these rumors.

However speculation persists. "I buried Paul" a voice chants at the end of Strawberry Fields. If the song Revolution Number Nine is played backwards, "turn me on deadman....turn me on dead man..." can be heard. At the end of I Am a Walrus, if one listens closely, he will hear under the garbling, lines 249 to 258 of act IV, Scene VI of King Lear, which is a passage about untimely death.

From Glass Onion comes "I told you about the walrus and me--man, you know that we're as close as can be--man. Well here's another clue for all, the walrus was Paul" The walrus is a mythological term for corpse.

Also, at the end of the introduction to Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, is "introducing the one and only Billy Shears.. Billy Shears."

The Magical Mystery Tour album jacket refers to the Beatles as "four or five magicians" then states, "Maybe you've been on a magical mystery tour, without even realizing it."

The album cover of Abbey Road is believed to be symbolic of Paul McCartney's exhumation. John dressed in white and symbolic of God, leads the procession; Ringo in black, the priest, follows; next Paul, walking barefoot and out of step, and ended by the grave digger George, dressed in work clothes. In Indian funeral processions, the corpse is always third. Abbey Road is adjacent to a large cemetery.

Can all these innuendoes really mean that Paul is dead and the public has been duped for over two years. Larry Cox, program director of WMUA claims that voice graphs show no difference between old and recent recordings of Mc Cartney's voice. But there are too many references to death to be just coincidence. Perhaps it is all just a big hoax, or maybe the Beatles have a hang up on death, or maybe somewhere in England there is one hellava a good plastic surgeon.

Moratorium Meeting Set; 7579 Post Cards Signed

By ROSE MILLER Staff Reporter

Plans for November's Peace Moratorium will be discussed tomorrow night at 8:00 in Engineering East auditorium, it was announced today at a Moratorium meeting in the Student Union. It was also disclosed at today's meeting that over 7,000 postcards were signed during this month's Moratorium.

Work committees by King Council and the Moratorium committee include: (1) High School Organizing headed by Bob Solomon and Tony Teso; (2) Leafleting Workers headed oy Mike Munsky; (3) Union Organizing Committee headed by Sid Finehurst; (4) Dormitory, Fraternity, and Sorority Coffee Hours headed by Maria Carrozza and Paul Spigel; (5) Living Theatre Committee under Cathy Ryan; (6) Trick or Treat for Peace under Mart Hurley; (7) Information Tables and the Canvassing outside Amherst Committee under both Tony Teso and Bob Solomon; (8) Arm Bands Committee under Maria Guanaris; (9) Provisional Medical Committee under Mark Hinkle and Bruce Kenedy; (10) Marshalls Committee Under Paul Spigel.

Recently released figures show that 7579 postcards were signed and returned during last week's moratorium. The cards, distributed oy canvassers throughout the Amherst area, were addressed to President Nixon and demanded immediate withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam.

Gil Saik, Executive Secretary of the King Council, requested that any students still possessing cards or funds from the moratorium canvassing return them immediately to the King Council office in 307 Hampshire House.

All cards are being sent bulk mail to the White House but an individual response is not expected.

Lottery Style Draft System Seen Moving Toward Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republicans said Monday that the next American youths drafted probably will be selected through a lottery system which didn't stand a chance until President Nixon "put the heat" on Congress.

"As a result of that kind of leadership we'll probably get a draft bill this year," said Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., the minority leader. "It was dead until the President put the heat on."

Nixon's draft plan, to induct 19-year-olds on the basis of a lottery based on their birth dates, has the unanimous approval of the House Armed Services Committee.

It is likely to pass the House before the week is over.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has indicated his panel will hold hearings on the measure if it clears the House.

That could open the way for the Senate action which would send it to the White House, where Nixon repeatedly has urged its swift enactment.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the majority leader, said he thinks the prospects are good for Senate action before the end of the current congressional session.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said that likelihood plus the cancellation of November and December draft calls, could mean the end of the present selection system.

"This could mean that draft-age citizens will no longer be vulnerable under the old system," Mundt said, "for if Congress follows through on the President's request in the next few weeks, the administration's reform plan can be operating when it becomes necessary to utilize the draft again."

At Inquest Hearing

No Blood Found on Mary Jo

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) - A medical examiner backed up Monday a contention that blood was present in the nose of Mary Jo Kopechne when her body was recovered from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's car.

Dr. Donald R. Mills, associate medical examiner of Dukes County, Mass., who originally ruled death was due to drowning, said he saw "at least one little cobweb of blood which clearly came from the edge of the nostril." However, he said that was common of drowning victims.

"It was obviously a clear case of drowning," Mills testified as a hearing opened on a petition by Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis of New Bedford, Mass., to have Miss Kopechne's body exhumed.

Dinis maintains he needs an autopsy for an inquest he has scheduled into the death.

Dinis had based his petition largely on a claim that he had evidence showing that blood was present in Miss Kopechne's nose and mouth and on her clothing when the body was recovered.

Dominick J. Arena, police chief of Edgartown, Mass., testified earlier in the hearing that he saw no blood or signs of injuries on the body.

In support of his veridct of death by drowning, Mills said:

"Inside the chest one could hear a swishing as water came out when she was turned on her side, which is characteristic of drowning. There was foam and more water slopped out of the side of her mouth."

Mills said his examination took 10 minutes.

"She had no evidence of injuries on her body, such as bruises, cuts, broken bones," he said.

"Do you say your external examination excluded the possibilities of other causes of death?" asked Dinis' assistant, Armand Fernandes Jr.

"Yes," Mills replied.

Mills said he arrived at the scene of the accident on Chappaquiddick Island off the Massachusetts coast about half an hour after Miss Kopechne's body was recovered by a skin diver on July 19.

Mills said he fixed the time of her death at about six hours or more before his examination.

"Her body was in total rigor mortis," Mills said.

Asked about the lack of an autopsy, Mills said that when he turned the body over to the undertaker, he directed that it not be embalmed until he gave further instructions.

"I wanted to talk to the district attorney to determine whether an autopsy should be done," Mills said.

The medical examiner said he contacted Dinis' office and was told to obtain a blood sample for alcohol content. He said the test showed there was .009 per cent alcohol, less than 5 per cent carbon dioxide and a negative showing for barbiturates.

Asked under cross-examination what significance he placed on the test, Mills replied:

"That this girl had had a small amount to drink. The carbon monoxide showed that she may have smoked a cigarette or inhaled some car fumes."

Joseph F. Flannagan, attorney for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Kopechne of Berkeley Heights, N.J., who object to an autopsy, questioned Mills on what inquiries he had made about an autopsy.

"You did that by placing a phone call to whom?" Flanagan asked.

"Through the state police to the district attorney's office," Mills said.

"Did you make any direct contact with Dinis?"

"I don't recall, there were so many calls," Mills said. Flanagan produced what he said was a memorandum Mills had prepared for himself about a week after the accident.

Haynsworth Conformation Sought by Nixon, Hruska

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon said Monday his Supreme Court nominee, Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., has been subjected to "vicious character assassination."

At a surprise news briefing that intensified the battle over the nomination, which is strongly opposed by labor and civil rights leaders, Nixon said he would not withdraw the appointment even if the judge asked him to.

"I find Judge Haynsworth an honest man, a lawyer's lawyer and a judge's judge," Nixon said after stating he had gone over all the criticism of opponents. "I think he will be a great credit to the Supreme Court and I intend to stand behind him until he is confirmed."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., who has spearheaded the opposition in the Senate, said "The President appears to be leveling his guns at me personally" and called this an unfortunate attempt to distort the issue and turn Haynsworth's nomination into a partisan matter.

Bayh, in a statement dictated to to an aide said he never has contended that Haynsworth, chief judge of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court, is a dishonest man. But he maintained that Haynsworth "has not conducted himself to avoid even the appearance of impropriety."

Sens. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., and Marlow W. Cook R-Ky., expressed agreement with Nixon's statement and said they are glad he spoke out strongly.

Hruska, ranking GOP member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said that "now that the rash of careless and irresponsible charges has been shown to be completely baseless and now that attention has now at last been turned to the positive judicial record of Judge Haynsworth, I am more confident than ever that the Senate will vote its confidence in him and confirm his nomination."

Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, the assistant Republican leader in the Senate, declined comment on the President's statement. He earlier had urged Nixon to withdraw Haynsworth's nomination, calling it an unfortunate mistake.

While Haynsworth has been accused of antilabor and anticivil rights bias, opponents have concentrated their fight on a conflict-of-interest charge they have raised against him on his extensive stock holdings.

They contend he should have disqualified himself in some court cases in which he has participated, but he and his supporters have said that on the contrary he had no valid grounds on which to excuse himself and had a duty to sit.

Nixon also took this position, saying that in his review of all facts, Haynsworth came through as a man of integrity, "and deserves even more the support of the President and the Senate." Haynsworth has furnished the Judiciary Committee with a complete listing of his stock holdings and has offered to put his holdings in trust if confirmed by the Senate.

Nixon said he is confident that if senators will study all the documents and charges, a majority will reach the same conclusion he has and will vote to confirm Haynsworth.

Arts and Sciences Curriculum Reform Proposals

The DAILY COLLEGIAN is pleased to reprint below the operating sections of the proposal for curriculum revision recently released by the College of Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee. The recommendations of the proposal are presented below, together with a running commentary relating them to the present situation. Notes by former MDC Education Editor, Richard W. Story.

The College has programs of study leading to four bachelor degrees, B.A., B.S., B.F.A., and B. Mus. All of these programs involve a blend of study in depth in one area with additional study in each of the main divisions: (a) humanities and fine arts, (b) social and behavioral sciences, (c) natural science and mathematics. Courses appropriate for the distributional requirements in these areas are noted in the University Bulletin with the respective codes (C), (D), and (E).

A program of study which conforms with the following provisions qualifies the student who completes it to receive the appropriate degree:

1. One hundred and twenty (120) credits in addition to work applicable to the University Physical Education requirement. No more than four (4) of these credits may be in applied music except for a student whose major is music.

2. A basic proficiency or experience with written or spoken English representing at least six (6) credits in either the courses English 111-112 along with one of the Speech courses 101, 103, 107, or 150, or a rhetoric program subsequently approved.

3. For the B.A. and B.S. degrees, a basic proficiency or experience with foreign language as demonstrated by, (a) completion of a foreign language course at the college fourth semester level, (b) a satisfactory performance on an achievement or placement test, (c) four entrance units in one foreign language or three units in one language and two units in another foreign language, (d) a year in a school in which English is not the basic language, or, (e) an approved substitution of language related study if there is clearly demonstrated difficulty in language study.

4. One of the pairs* of literature courses approved for core requirement "(C)" and, in addition: (a) two courses from the (C) group for the B.A. (b) one course from the (C) group for the other degrees.

5. Three courses in the "(D)" group chosen from at least two departments; one additional course from the behavioral and social sciences for the B.A. degree.

6. Four courses from the "(E)" group and from at least two of these three groups of disciplines: (a) logic, mathematics and statistics (b) botany, entomology, microbiology and zoology (c) astronomy, chemistry, geology and physics.
To qualify for a B.S. degree, the student must have a major in mathematics, science, or behavioral science, and earn at least 48 credits in these areas in addition to the four courses from the (E) group.

7. An approved major program of the College.#

8. Advanced placement and transfer credits may be applied toward any or all of the above; at least half of the major program must be taken in residence.

* These pairs of courses are:
English 125-126, 127-128, 135-136, 151-152, 153-154, or Comparative literature 201-203, 201-204, 202-203, 202-204, or French 151-162, or Italian 161-162, or
German 277-278, or
Russian 251-252, or Spanish 161-162.

# The meaning of this qualification is expected to change with time. For any particular year, it would mean one of the major programs then approved.

1) There is some ambiguity here - it will have to be clearly resolved as to whether the 2 credits now awarded for the required PE program are included in, or are in addition to, the 120 required for graduation. Only the Trustees can change the over-all University graduation requirement.

2) Aside from the rhetoric courses mentioned in the last clause, this is unchanged from the present. Rhetoric courses, if developed, would probably integrate written and spoken English in unified courses of 3-credits each. Such courses were recommended by a special committee last spring.

3) These specifications of foreign language alternatives reflect the vote of the College faculty late last spring. It is, at present, a debatable point whether this is a language "requirement," as formerly, or a language "qualification," in the term adopted by the College. In either event, its substance is to continue the requirement that a student know a language besides English.

4) These options to the familiar English 125-126 are in line with changes first voted by the College faculty about a year ago. Every school and college now permits substitution of these additional options to 125-126. Some of these pairs were developed especially to serve as options to 125-126. The literature component of this requirement is unchanged from the present University and College core; but the general humanities and fine arts component is reduced by 6 credits (from present College level) for B.A. students, and by 9 credits for B.S. students.

5) A reduction of one 3-credit social science course for B.S. candidates - unchanged for B.A. candidates.

6) A reduction by two 3-credit "(E)" courses for both B.A. and B.S. students' requirements. B.S. students must continue to have 60 credits of science, mathematics and behavioral science (i.e., psychology).

7) By far the most significant change proposed by these Curriculum Committee suggestions is this: if the varieties of new major programs recommended by the Academic Affairs Committee are developed (as also recommended by the "June Proposal"), students in the College will be able to follow more diversified programs than at present. Divisional and program majors will be available, and there has been a suggestion that students be allowed to custom-build their own major program, under guidance and authority of a special board of educational development. This is the particular part of this proposal most in need of further development.

8) Advanced placement credits may presently be applied in many areas of the College or University.

CAS Meeting Tonight

Concrete and specific proposals for the revision of the College of Arts and Sciences' core requirements will be the topics for discussion at a meeting of College faculty and students to be held tomorrow evening, Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

In making the announcement of the faculty and student meeting, the acting dean, Prof. Seymour Shapiro, said that the one item on the evening's agenda would be a final discussion of options for curricular revision, in order to determine which should be presented to the entire College faculty in a mail ballot.

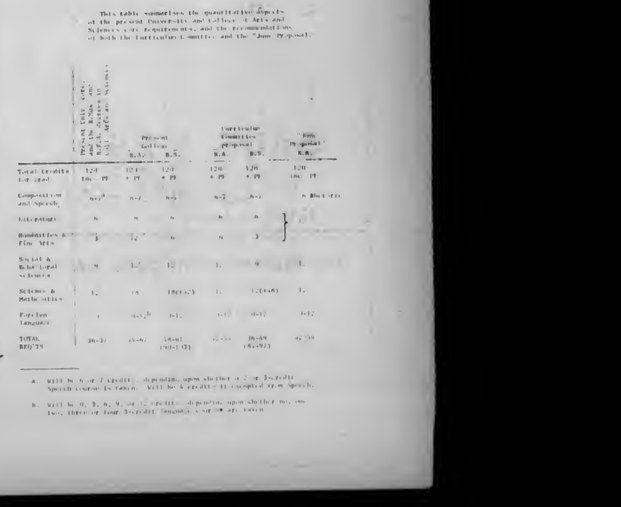
The meeting to be held Tuesday grows from more than two years of planning and discussion by the deans, faculty and students of the College. All students with a concern for the direction of their education in the College are strongly invited to attend.

Two principal documents will be the center of attention at the open meeting - both documents are relatively new; and neither has yet received widespread distribution. The first proposal to be considered, now called the "June proposal", is in the form of a long memorandum to the faculty, entitled "A proposal relating to qualifications for the Bachelor of Arts degree in the College of Arts and Sciences." This document was largely written in the dean's office, but reflects a measure of student suggestion. The "June proposal" was considered in its outline form by the Academic Affairs Committee late last school year; and was circulated shortly after then to the College faculty. There was an additional distribution earlier this fall.

The second proposal to be considered is a recent report from the College Curriculum Committee (dated October 14); and recently circulated to all College faculty.

In his announcement of the meeting, acting dean Shapiro said that, while the two proposals do not compete with each other, they would require different periods of time before they could be fully implemented. The proposals of the Curriculum Committee's report, since they do not propose any great differences from the existing University core requirements, could be operating before Counseling Day, December 3. The "June proposal," since it would require some Trustee action, could probably not be operating until second semester. The two proposals represent not dissimilar approaches to a common goal: a less restrictive road to a degree in the College, the dean said.

Those faculty present at the Tuesday meeting will not be able to make the final decision on the matter of these two proposals the dean stressed. But they can perform the very important act of deciding what will be submitted to a general faculty vote for approval, according to Shapiro.



FROM OUR SIDE

A Fantasy?

Once upon a time, there existed a great and wonderful place called UMass. The sole goal of every inhabitant of UMass was to search for truth, and many citizens found it. UMass's king was named John W., and he was loved and respected by friend and foe alike.

For many years UMass was a happy and contented land. One day, however, reports reached King John W. that an odious monster named the Budgetcut was threatening the borders of UMass. King John W. learned that the Budgetcut was an omnipotent and invisible creature, striking without mercy or wisdom. All of UMass prepared to do battle with the Budgetcut. Younger citizens of UMass used fine, truthful weapons -- letters to the editor and newspaper ads. Older citizens felt that the battle was already lost, and they pleaded to the Budgetcut that they must be spared.

King John W. and his faithful minister, Oswald, tried to fight the Budgetcut at its source, but they could not find the source. At first, they thought that the Budgetcut sprang from the mind of the old mariner, Sarge, but Sarge said no, it was not he. Then King John W. and Oswald were convinced that the Budgetcut was the result of negligence by those foolish man on the Council of Legislature, but they denied any errors and pointed to an ominous, but apathetic Constituency. The Constituency said that the Budgetcut was really part of a counter-conspiracy against that group of people called the Commieratlonghairatheisticanarchists, but members of that people explained that the Budgetcut grew up because of a war that did not exist. Finally, after this long search, UMass concluded that all resistance against the Budgetcut was in vain.

When the Budgetcut reached the heart of UMass, it caused terrible destruction. Entire sections of UMass were destroyed and many citizens were stranded. The food supply, especially eggs and meat, tasted watery and mysterious. The relief centers of UMass were overtaxed, and some people stood in lines hours on end waiting for help. So great was the badness of the Budgetcut that King John W. abdicated (in order to devote more time to the study of the causes of the Budgetcut), and even the faithful minister, Oswald, resigned. The Budgetcut made palm trees grow out of cement, made concrete obelisks suddenly appear, and caused bottomless pits to form. The Budgetcut was responsible for beards to appear on many men, for the inflation was so great that they could not afford razors. Even the bookstore, where once people could search for truth for a nominal fee, began to overcharge, and agents of the Budgetcut pocketed the profits. It was because of the Budgetcut that people stubbed their toes, and got hay fever, and lost their yearning for the truth. The Budgetcut was the reason for a population explosion, and the good citizens found themselves, living, eating, sleeping, and searching for the truth three in a room! Perhaps the most disastrous event that the Budgetcut caused was the coming of the mud. Mud, mud, everywhere, and young people who had never needed a bath before were forced to wash. Yes, the Budgetcut was truly frightening!

One morning, the citizens of UMass awoke to the thundering and deafening voice of the Budgetcut: "You must obey my demands, or I will completely destroy UMass," it said, and the citizens listened with fear. The Budgetcut said that it wanted the citizens to be respectful to the Council of Legislature. It said that UMass must pay tribute to the old mariner, Sarge, and must not offend the ominous, but apathetic Constituency with mere truths. And the Budgetcut added that the Commieratlonghairatheisticanarchists offended the ominous, but apathetic Constituency. The Budgetcut reiterated that the war that did not exist, but existed for only the protection of UMass. Finally, the Budgetcut demanded that the people of UMass stop their search for truth.

UMass had no choice. The Council of the Legislature received its respect. The old mariner, Sarge, was not offended, the ominous but apathetic Constituency was lied to, the Commieratlonghairatheisticanarchists were exiled, UMass believed in a war that did not exist, King John W and his faithful minister, Oswald were never heard from again, and the people stopped their search for truth.

UMass existed happily ever after, but it did not live.

ART BUCHWALD

A Campus Monarchist?

WASHINGTON - When President Nixon told his White House staff to dig into his piles of mail and find a student he could write a letter to concerning the student moratorium, he didn't imagine in his wildest dreams that the staff would come up with a monarchist.

Last Monday Randy Dicks, a Georgetown University sophomore, received a two-page letter from President Nixon explaining the Administration's stand on the Vietnam protests. At the time, it seemed like a good idea for the White House to use a student's letter as a way of explaining the President' s policy toward the Vietnam protests. But when it was discovered that Dicks was a monarchist, the White House was thrown into a spin.

An immediate investigation was called for to find out how the President wound up writing a monarchist. First J. Edgar Hoover was contacted and asked what he had on the monarchist movement in the United States.

Hoover was embarrassed to admit he didn't have too much in his files on the Royalists. "They've been rather quiet since 1776," he told the White House aide. "Frankly our department doesn't even have any phone taps on them."

"But don't you realize," the White House aide said, "that we've got to know what the Royalists in the United States have been up to? Just by writing to Randy Dicks, the President of the United States has given the monarchist movement in the United States a jab in the arm."

Hoover promised to get back to the White House. He took all his agents off the SDS, the Black Panthers and the FBI television show on ABC and ordered them to find out everything they could about the monarchists in the United States.

Finally, reports arted pouring in from field offices all over the country. A lady in Kansas City, it turned out, had written a letter to her cousin in London saying, "Wouldn't it be nice if Prince Charles took over the 50 colonies, when he becomes Prince of Wales."

A man in Dorchester, Ky., was reported to have had a photograph of the king of Italy in his garage; and a Spanish family in Michigan was driving around with "Alfonso for King" bumper stickers on their car.

All the leads were followed up, but it was difficult to find a conspiracy between Dicks, the lady in Kansas City, the man in Dorchester and the Spanish family in Michigan.

Hoover reported his findings back to the White House which was still shaken up by the moratorium-letter incident.

It was decided that the best way to handle the matter was to turn over the problem to the Subversive Activities Control Board, which is supposed to clear all organizations in the United States.

The White House called the board but, unfortunately, it was a weekday and no one was in the office. The voice on the recording machine asked them to call back in February.

Administration officials studied the problem. The best thing, of course, would have been to try Randy Dicks for advocating the return of the royal family. But Dicks had cleverly told reporters that while he considers kingship the superior form of government, he does not favor it for the United States.

So it was decided to ignore Dicks' affiliation with the Monarchist Party, and new safeguards have been established before the President will be allowed to write to another university student.

As a further precaution , a memo has been passed around the White House asking the staff to refrain, even in jest, from referring to the Vice President as "Prince Spiro the First."

Real Issues

To the Editor:

Having read your editorial column on Monday, Oct. 20th, entitled, "My Own Trip, etc.", I turned to another editorial page, that of the NEW YORK TIMES. May I simply quote the concluding paragraph of one of the editorial comments appearing therein under the title, "Free Universities - Or Captive?"

"Pressures to politicize the universities - often in the name of high-minded goals - are pernicious because they imply that the institution will be held responsible for what is said and thought in its classrooms and lecture halls. It is a trend that must be resisted, whether the pressures come from the right or the left, from blacks or whites. What is at stake is not the structure, but the heart and mind of the campus."

Let us recognize and be alert to the real issues. And further, let us not confuse a man's "personal stand on a moral issue" with his public position on issues which may, in fact, transcend the current political ones.

Dorm Thiefts

To the Editor:

Each year, a considerable number of students become victims of theifts which take place in dormitories. Of particular concern is the large number of items stolen from truck rooms. Although the University does not assume responsibility for the safekeeping of students' property, the truck rooms are often less safe than leaving one's belongings in the street. The thief, who is probably another student, simply borrows a Master key from a Counsellor or Janitor and may then browse at leisure through other peoples' property. Unhampered by passers-by, the thief then removes the property of his choice unobserved.

Mr. Jeffrey Drucker, a Graduate student (and himself a victim of a trunk room robbery) is investigating this problem with the hope of finding a cure. As part of the investigation, Mr. Drucker wishes to contact other students who have experienced similar misfortunes. If you are one of these people, please call Mr. Drucker at 546-7662.

JEFFREY DRUCKER

A Let-Down

To the Editor:

Each day I walk around the UMass campus with the greatest of confidence and trust with my fellow students. That was until Saturday night during Homecoming.

I invited my fiance to come up and enjoy the festivities, and he came, sharing the great confidence I had in the UMass students, an opinion which he had obtained from my high praise.

Early Sunday morning he walked over to pick me up from where he was staying and we went to the parking lot to pick up the car. That is, when we found the car rolled back five feet, windows smashed, hubcaps stolen, that is where my confidence ended. I must be either the world's biggest hearted person or the most blind to not believe that the students at UMass would sink to such a disgusting all-time low at walch to get their thrills. Here I am, feeling badly about the car, but feeling worse about being let down by those whom I thought I could trust.

To those who were involved, I hope you had fun, I guess it doesn't take much to entertain children these days. You can be sure that I'll never forget the biggest letdown of my life, and my fiance will never forget the bill.

Social, Academic Events Sponsored by SW Assembly

By DENISE MAGNELL
Staff Reporter

All-night study halls, tutoring, Glass Onion - things that are just there, that students take for granted and don't wonder how they got there. These events are unique to Southwest, and made possible only through the efforts of its area government, the Southwest Assembly.

After formulating its constitution in spring, 1968, the Assembly began regular meetings that fall. According to President Larry Kravitz, its main objective is to "decentralize the student government". By doing this, Southwest is attempting to solve its problems independently.

The Southwest Assembly consists of five standing committees - social-cultural, legislative, academic, communications and services (dealing with grievances of the students). Its treasury was allotted between $8,500 and 11,000 from the Students Activities Tax Fund for the 1969 - 70 academic year; the actual amount has not been decided yet by the Student Senate.

Along with continued all-night study halls, tutorial services (made available through the Assembly for upper-level courses in addition to freshmen tutorage), and more performances like the "Glass Onion" co-sponsored with the UMass Patriots this fall, the Assembly will consider many proposals in the next several weeks. Included will be an attempt to set up trash cans throughout Southwest, ventilate and use wasted space in dorm basements for recreational facilities, develop an athletic area (primarily for basketball courts) in the fields behind Southwest, and support a co-ed Prince House when it is turned into an undergraduate dormitory.

Within two or three weeks, the Assembly has decided complaint centers will be located in the three Southwest dining commons. A student with a grievance of any kind can leave a card with his name, address and phone number in the complaint box at the center. Two phone calls will then be made to the student, according to the Assembly plans. One will be to find out his problem (if not already listed on the card), and a later one to give a possible solution.

The 32-member Assembly meetings are open to the public on Tuesdays (bi-weekly) at 7 p.m. Representative positions are still open in seven forms - Crampton, Melville, Washington Upper and Middle, JQ Adams Lower, and Adams Middle and Lower - for anyone from those dorms interested in applying. Non-members may also take part. Information may be obtained at the Southwest Office in Coolidge lobby.

Board to Meet at SWAP

The UMass Board of Trustees Saturday decided to hold their next meeting at the Student Workshop on Activities Program (SWAP) conference in South Lee, Mass. next month.

Representatives from the SWAP committee invited the Trustees to join the annual meeting of students, faculty and administrators, and the Trustees, citing "the lauditory reports" of past conferences agreed to attend.

Student and faculty applications are still available at the SWAP table in the student Union lobby this week.

Medical School Ground Breaking Set for Thursday

The beginning of construction of the University of Massachusetts Medical School will be marked with a ceremony at the site in Worcester, Thursday, 2 p.m.

UMass President John W. Lederle will preside. Medical School Dean Lamar Soutter and University officials will join legislators, state leaders and others at the informal ceremony off Plantation St. north of Belmont St. The public is invited.

The ceremony formally marks the construction start of a $124 million medical education complex. Design of all buildings, preparation of the site and construction of the library, power plant and medical sciences building will cost an estimated $64 million. Construction of the teaching hospital will cost approximately $60 million more.

Five construction contracts will be involved. Construction has already begun under the site work contract. Work is scheduled to begin on a renovation contract for the Shaw Building December 1. The building now houses the 22-member medical school staff and will serve the school until completion of the permanent buildings.

Under a third contract, construction of the power plant is scheduled to start in February of 1970. Scheduled start on the medical sciences building itself under the fourth contract is May of 1970. The last construction start will be that of the teaching hospital, scheduled for July of 1970.

The location is a 124-acre site north of Belmont St. (Route 9) at the east edge of Worcester. The medical science building will house basic and clinical science facilities, the library, offices and classrooms. The 430-bed teaching hospital will be used to train nurses, technicians and other medical personnel as well as medical students.

SPECIAL FILM SERIES

The following films will be screened in the Council Chambers of the Student Union at 10:00 a.m. and 11:15 p.m. on the days indicated. Any student or faculty who are interested in viewing short films are invited.

N.Y., N.Y.

By Francis Thompson. Using varied and surprising camera distortions, Thompson moves the viewer swiftly through a day in New York, turning the city's familiar scenes into a new world of fantasy. With the actual scene manipulated and transformed by the camera itself, each sequence is organized into visual structure of movement and mood.

Pen Point Percussion (with Loops).

Done by the film artist, Norman McLaren. In 1,000's, both sound and images are created entirely by the artist drawing directly upon the film with ordinary pen and ink. McLaren explains how he makes synthetic sound on film on PEN POINT PERCUSSION and demonstrates what familiar sounds look like on the screen, then how sound shapes up as a film's soundtrack and finally, what synthetic sounds sound like when drawn directly on film.

NOVEMBER 5

Toys.

By Grant Munro and the National Film Board of Canada. War toys come to life and destroy each other as a group of children, alternately fascinated and terrified, watch.

DECEMBER 3

Dream of the Wild Horses.

By Denys Columb de Daunant. Perhaps one of the two or three most beautiful short films ever made. It depicts (in slow motion, with a score of electronic music) the capture of a herd of the wild horses of Camargue.

Phi Beta Kappa Scholar Visits Campus Next Week

Professor Walter J. Ong, S.J., of the Department of English, Saint Louis University, will be on campus Monday and Tuesday, October 27-28, as Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar. This program was begun in 1956 to give undergraduates the opportunity to meet and talk with outstanding scholars who are also noted teachers. During his stay Fr. Ong will meet students in a variety of formal and informal encounters, including both small colloquia and one public lecture.

Fr. Ong is known as a scholar in both the Renaissance field and the field of contemporary culture. His latest book, THE PRESENCE OF THE WORD, is the most thorough historical study thus far of the development of verbal communication from oral cultures through writing and print to electronics, as seen in psychological, literary, religious, and anthropological terms.

Born in Kansas City, Fr. Ong was educated at Rockhurst College, Saint Louis University, and Harvard. He is a member of the Society of Jesus. A well-known lecturer in the United States, Canada, and abroad, he has lectured widely in French to university and other groups in Paris, Bordeaux, Toulouse, and other centers. He has served as McDonald Lecturer at McGill, Terry Lecturer at Yale, Visiting Professor Of English at the University of California, Willett Visiting Professor in the Humanities at the University of Chicago, and Berg Professor for 1966-67 at New York University. He is a Fellow of the School of Letters at Indiana University.

In addition to membership in various learned societies, he has been awarded a decoration by the French Government (Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques), and has served on the selection committee for graduate study in France under the Fulbright Program. He is a member of the National Endowment for the Humanities and the American Council on Education, and has been a resource person at such institutes as the Dartmouth Anglo-American Seminar on English, the Tufts Conference on Experiments in Undergraduate Education, and the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara. He has been a resident Fellow of the Center for Advanced Studies at Wesleyan University.

10:10 a.m. - Poetry of Gerard Manley Hopkins. Memorial Room. Memorial Hall.

4:00 p.m. - "The Audience Is a Fiction, Too." Memorial Hall Lounge.

8:15 p.m. - Public Lecture. "The End of the Age of Literacy." Mahar Auditorium.

Tuesday, October 28

3:00 p.m. - "Media and Message in Shakespeare's World." Memorial Hall Upstairs Lecture Room.

8:15 p.m. - "Intellectual Freedom and Religious Commitment." SBA 120.

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICAN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Nominations being accepted in the

R.S.O. Office (Mrs. Lois Frey)

Now — thru October 24

It is imperative that each member of the Class of 1970 submit a diploma card to the Records Office by October 24. At the present time there are NUMEROUS THAT HAVE NOT BEEN RECEIVED.

Secondly, there are still many seniors for whom the Records Office has problems regarding their major. Each student has been notified, but many have not reported to the Records Office. This must be corrected by October 24.

The listing of the prospective graduates for agencies all over campus is done from the diploma cards. Also, clearance is obtained from the Major department from these cards. A diploma card must be on record in the Records Office for a student to be processed for graduation.

Grass Law Loosening Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the hope that it will lead to better law enforcement "and better respect for the law," the Nixon administration proposed Monday that the penalty for possessing narcotics and dangerous drugs be reduced to misdemeanor size.

This would mean that first offenders convicted of possession of marijuana or other narcotics would no longer be branded felons subject to maximum penalties of 2 to 10 years imprisonment and $20,000 fine.

John E. Ingersoll, director of the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, said a more flexible penalty structure is needed to "make the punishment fit the person" and the crime.

Testifying before the Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency, Ingersoll said: "All too often, because of the present penalty structure, there is a real hesitancy on the part of prosecutors in courts to handle possession cases because of the potential high penalties involved."

Reversing a previous Justice Department stand, Ingersoll proposed that federal laws draw a distinction between narcotics users and traffickers.

"By allowing the court to prosecute the possessor who intends to sell as a felon and the possessor for one's own use as a misdemeanor," Ingersoll said, "I believe we will have better law enforcement and better respect for the law."

He suggested that possession with intent to sell remain a felony and that "possession for one's own use, regardless of the drug involved," be made a misdemeanor.

This would lower the maximum penalty for simple possession to a $5,000 fine and a possible sentence of up to one year in jail, for first offenders. Second offenders would face stiffer penalties.

Draft Movement Meets

On Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union there will be an organizational meeting of those persons interested in forming a local chapter of the National Council to Repeal the Draft.

Interest in draft repeal was stimulated by the recent visit of Thomas Reeves, national director of NCRD, which is headquartered in Washington, D.C. At the invitation of Ken Moskowsky, a member of the Martin Luther King Council's Board of Directors, Reeves lectured at the University on "American Militarism and the Draft," adeptly exposing what he termed the "fraud" of President Nixon's declared draft cuts for the remainder of 1969.

Reeves feels that the draft is undemocratic and dangerous in light of America's present foreign policy. He envisions as the primary goal of NCRD to exert pressure on the nation's legislators to call for repeal of military conscription when the present draft law expires in June, 1971.

"Good Woman" Hailed as Best Play of Year

by KEVIN WM. DONOVAN
Fine Arts Staff

From Thursday through Sunday of last week, the University of Massachusetts Theatre presented perhaps its most successful production in recent years - Bertolt Brecht's THE GOOD WOMAN OF SETZUAN. Brecht was intensely influenced by the Japanese Noh dramatic tradition, for in it he found a viable vehicle for his didacticism. Consequently, Brechtian theatre is inherently anti-illusory, actively forcing the audience to maintain its critical detachment. However, Brecht places a great deal of the responsibility for insuring this detachment upon the directors of his plays, and it is here that Production Director Jim Young has proved more than competent.

Young conditioned his audience to react critically even before the play began. On a screen to the right of the stage flashed bright and vivid images of the beauty and contentment of lives unfettered by poverty and despair. In harsh contrast, the screen to the left bleakly portrayed the victims of society's ingrained inhumanity: derelicts, destitute families, and emaciated Biafran children staring with eyes glassy with hunger. Members of the cast moved unobtrusively from seat to seat, talking to individuals in the audience, sometimes provoking serious thought, but more importantly maintaining by their very presence the sharp Brechtian distinction between the fantasy of drama in the reality of every day existance. Young also had the actors don their costumes on stage to further enhance the anti-illusory effect. Thus, from the outset, the audience was prepared to review the play on an intellectual plane, unhampered for the most part by identification with the actors and the resulting emotional involvement which characterizes traditional cathartic drama.

Basically, the play centers on the dilemma of Shen Te, a prostitute whose goodness is threatened on all sides by human parasites. Judith Keyes delivered a solid performance in the difficult leading role of Shen Te. At times in the first half of the play, her mannerisms seemed forced and she perhaps overemphasized Shen Te's somewhat Pollyanic stance in a world controlled by evil. However, since Brechtian characters are often puppet-like stereotypes, it is difficult to determine how much of her delivery was deliberately extreme.

Alan Eisenstock, as Wong, the hapless water seller, and David Zucker, Bill Over, and Ned Daly as the ludicrous gods also gave outstanding performances. In fact, the entire cast functioned as a polished, dynamic group, noticeably free from the hesitations, miscues and general atmosphere of unprofessionalism that has plagued the University Theatre in the past. Even the set itself was impressively imaginative, providing a functional framework for the play, while at the same time contributing to the emphasis on non-realism in Brechtian drama.

The first portion of the play prior to intermission was perhaps too long and repetitive in thematic development, yet the audience was well rewarded for its discomfort after returning from intermission. Miss Keyes now seemed in complete control of her characterization. It was impossible not to sense the devastating tension within Shen Te's soul that was tearing her in two as she cried out to the three gods: "Your former injunction do be good and to live tore me like lightening in halves . . . Alas, your world is too difficult!" The gods ignored her pleas, powerless now in the world of havoc that they supposedly created. The play ends abruptly here with this cry of helplessness. Brecht raises many questions concerning the nature of our existence, provides no answers, yet somehow points us to an optimistic resolution of the paradox that is our life.

Ted Williams Honored by AP

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Ted Williams, baseball's first million dollar manager who led the Washington Senators to their first winning season in 17 years, has been selected The Associated Press' American League Manager of the Year.

Williams, winning the honor in his first year as a manager, narrowly outpolled another first year man, Billy Martin, who was fired after directing Minnesota to the Western Division title.

Williams drew 113 votes to 102 for Martin in the balloting by 286 sports writers and broadcasters throughout the country. Earl Weaver, who took Baltimore to a runaway Eastern Division title, drew 70 votes and Lefty Phillips, a mid-season replacement who led California into third place, in the West, got one vote.

Williams, a Hall of Famer and the most recent of the .400 hitters, had never managed anywhere before Washington owner Bob Short lured him away from a nine-year-self-imposed retirement of fishing in Florida by offering him stock in the Senators and a salary that added up to more than $1 million.

Although admitting he was a bit uneasy about trying his hand at managing, the handsome 50-year old Williams' personal magnetism, knowledge of the game and understanding quickly won over the Senators.

The end result was a 86-76 record and a fourth place finish. Not since 1953 had the Senators finished at .500 and not since 1952 had they finished better than .500.

Williams did all this with almost the same group of players who finished last with a 65-96 record in 1968.

"I've never seen a group of players so engrossed in what a manager was saying," said Washington pitcher Frank Bertaina, speaking of the respect Williams automatically demanded from his players.

"He bubbles with enthusiasm and it's contagious," added Ed Brinkman, the shortstop.

Statistically, Williams, the master teacher, must have done a great job imparting to his team some of the batting knowledge that won him six American League batting titles with Boston and a .344 lifetime average with 521 home runs, along with a .406 average in 1941.

GUESS WHO? An unidentified Rhode Island player seems to be playing games with UMass fullback Ed Sarno(31) during the action in Saturday's 21-9 Homecoming win. Frosh Booters Win, 1-0

Saturday morning at Boyden Field, the UMass freshman soccer team removed all doubt about who the best freshman team in town is, by defeating Amherst College 1-0 in overtime play. The hero of the game for UMass was Bill Davidson, the team's leading scorer, who scored early in the first overtime period to keep the unbeaten-unscored on record of the freshmen alive.

But the Redmen never would have made it into overtime if it had not been for the outstanding net-minding of goalie Bill Leary, who made several spectacular saves in the six periods it took to decide the outcome. Coach David Jekanoski watched his team completely dominate play for extended periods of time, only to be thwarted by the Amherst goalie and offensive lapses on their own part. In fact, partway through the fourth quarter the front line actually scored, only to have the goal nullified by a close offside call.

In spite of less than ideal conditions, both teams played well, each having several opportunities to win it before Davidson's goal. The dry cold dead grass made slipping easy and cutting difficult, and in addition, a gusting cross-field wind hampered long kicking. Nevertheless, in a frantic second overtime period, the defense resisted continued efforts of the Lord Jeffs to score, and finally, after 98 minutes of competition, UMass emerged as the best frosh team in Amherst, for the second year in a row.

The hapless UMass Rugby team was defeated for the fourth time Saturday by an undefeated MIT team, 25-0. On paper the UMass team was probably equal to their rivals and physically stronger, yet, Tech's experience and polish proved too much for the Redmen.

During the first half, the Redmen were forced to play against the wind and had the sun in their faces yet they played creditably until they lost the services of their big inside center Steve Encanarsio late in the first half due to a broken nose which will sideline him for at least four weeks. This weakened the UMass backfield and enabled MIT to break through for a couple of scores in the second half. The scrum play was about equal as UMass got more than their share of hooks and line-outs. Bob Grossman and Jess Kane, playing in their first "A" game of the season, performed well as did Frank Deslots, Gino Caso and Brian Leach, the team's captain.

The "B" game was much closer with fine performances turned in by Laurence, the team's coach, and Mark Goldberg who was making bone-crushing tackles all over the field. The U-Mass back, Ladner, who played in both games, scored a touchdown and coach Laurence added the conversion but UMass bowed 6-5.

Although it was an away game on Homecoming, there were a substantial Redman following at the game Saturday. The next game is this Saturday at home against Colgate at 1:30 on the field west of Boyden.

Unitas Sets League Mark

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) - "I knew he was going to get hot again but I wished he'd waited another week before doing it," said Doug Atkins, the reigning patriarch of National Football League players.

Atkins was discussing Johnny Unitas, who blitzed the New Orleans Saints for a 30-10 victory by the Baltimore Colts Sunday. "And I thought we had a pretty good rush on him," added Atkins, the 39-year-old New Orleans defensive end who is playing a record-equalling 17th year. "But that guy is just the greatest. He was as hot as a firecracker and when he's that way he's unbeatable."

Three touchdown passes by Unitas, who threw for 319 yards, handed the Saints their fifth loss in as many Sundays of NFL play.

The aging Unitas completed 16 passes in succession for a league record and wound up clicking on 20 of 28 throws. "We've looked at all of his films and this has got to be Johnny's greatest performance in three years," said Jack Fulkner, chief defensive coach for the Saints.

The public reaction is now quite different to anti-Vietnam war demonstrations, he noted, and asked, "Can it be that our ire is aroused by a difference in causes, by the seriousness of the challenge, by the social character of the crowd, no longer a privileged elite but an unwashed generation?"

"Perhaps we should be asking not why the student unrest, but why is there no adult unrest except in response to students," he said.

He cited adult tolerance of "an immoral and futile war" and physicians' failure to respond to congressional reductions of funds for health services "while $100 million each day is poured down the rat hole in Vietnam," then asked:

Is it possible that the young are frantic because we have been complacent?"

Eisenberg said, "The young have no greater wisdom than we possess and a good deal less practicality." But he added that a "resort to harsh punishment will perpetuate angry rebellion and block meaningful change."

Unitas accepted the acclaim in his usually cool manner. "We had the time to throw and our running game was good," he said.

Discussing the Colts' losses to Los Angeles and Minnesota in the first two games this season, Unitas said he felt injuries to key personnel contributed to the defeats. The Colts then beat Atlanta and Philadelphia but appeared sluggish each time.

"We're just now getting healthy again," said Unitas. "And this was our best effort."

Inevitably the questioning turned to Unitas' aching arm-which kept him sidelined last year while Earl Morrall drove the Colts to the NFL title.

"The arm has a little bit of soreness but nothing to really stop me from throwing the ball," said Unitas.

OSU Tops, But Texas Closes

A tie is not only like kissing your sister, it doesn't satisfy the football voters either and thus Southern California and Notre Dame failed to woo the pollsters in this week's major college rankings.

After their 14-14 deadlock last Saturday, Southern Cal dropped from third to seventh in the Associated Press rankings released Monday while the Irish fell one place to 12th in their bid to return to the top 10.

Tennessee used Alabama to make the biggest inroad in the rankings by surging from seventh to third after whomping the Crimson Tide 41-14.

Ohio State lost a few points from the previous week, but easily returned to top ranking with 27 first place votes and 666 points after clobbering Minnesota 34-7.

Texas retained No. 2, after an idle Saturday, with five top ballots and 612 points. The difference between the two was 710-638 the week before.

Arkansas, also idle, remained fourth with 417 behind Tennessee's one top vote and 435 points.

Penn State, which dropped three spots to eighth after narrowly beating Syracuse 15-14, had the only other first place vote in the balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters throught the country.

Other changes in the first 10 moved Missouri up one place to fifth and UCLA from eighth to sixth. Louisiana State and Florida remained ninth and 10th, respectively as none of the top 10 has been beaten.

In the second 10 Purdue and Mississippi made the biggest jump, to 15th and 17th, respectively, while Michigan, 13th last week, and Alabama, No. 20, dropped out after losses. The new teams are Kansas State, No. 18, and Air Force, No. 20.

The Top Twenty, with first place votes in parentheses and total points for the first 15 picks on a 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-etc. basis:

1.	Ohio State 27	666
2.	Texas 5	612
3.	Tennessee 1	435
4.	Arkansas	417
5.	Missouri	355
6.	UCLA	341
7.	Southern Cal	297
8.	Penn State 1	294
9.	Louisiana State	226
10.	Florida	222

Intramural Playoffs Start

The campus championships of intramural touch football got underway under the lights last night setting the stage for tonight's division finals in the fraternity and independent divisions and the semifinals of the dormitory division.

In the action last night in the fraternity league, PMD defeated LCA in a high scoring contest, 32-24, and PSD romped over TC, 34-6. Quarterback Lauria of PSD had a tremendous game and completed 13 of 24 passes and had five touchdown throws.

In the independent league, the Jocks downed the Roadrunners, 38-26, and the Wheelers squeaked by the Stinters, 20-13. The Wheelers led 14-7 with ten seconds left but Dick Dyer scored with only five seconds remaining. The Stinters attempt for a two-point conversion was thwarted by a tough defense and the Wheelers preserved their victory.

In dormitory action, the Bulldozers beat the Panthers, 20-14, the Smashers bombed the Lemons, 26-0, and the Maroons nipped the Pied Pipers, 12-6. This was a close game all the way as the Pied Piers tied the score at 6-6 late in the second half but Lester Sherman caught a touchdown pass with a minute left to give Chadbourne the win.

Tonight's Intramurals

Field	Time	Team
1	8:00	PMD vs. PSD
2	8:00	Wheelers vs. Jocks

Curriculum Reforms To Be Submitted To Faculty

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Following two hours of tedious debate members of the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences last night voted to submit the Curriculum Committee Proposal of Oct. 14 to the University faculty for approval.

This proposal includes, among other points, the modification of credits in the science requirement for a Bachelor of Arts Degree from 18 to 12. This proposal, if approved by the University faculty, could go into effect on Feb. of next semester following a December vote of students.

Another ballot would then be presented to the student body during the semester asking students to: (1) Continue the Curriculum Committee Proposal modification for the spring. (2) And for Sept. 1970 (a) maintenance of the status quo of the spring semester, (b) adopt the Quint-Hank curriculum proposal, (c) adopt the June proposal.

Professor Seymour Shapiro, moderator for the meeting, stated that the evening's discussion has indicated "strong feeling that there should be some change by the Curriculum Committee Report for the spring semester. There is favor for continued revision, support for the Quint-Hank proposal on the ballot, and a statement of a five versus four course program of specifics for students."

Shapiro said that it would probably take three separate ballots to effect an ultimate curriculum change for next Sept. The first would be the December vote on the Curriculum Committee Proposal, the second one during the spring on the two options previously mentioned, and a third, probably a runoff, to determine which of the three had drawn the most support.

Professors Howard Quint and Lewis Hanke of the History Dept. made a proposal concerning the distribution of the 40 courses presently required for a degree at UMass.

Under this plan the courses would be distributed as follows: (1) Every student must take a minimum of 2 one-semester courses in each of the three divisions of Arts and Sciences (Humanities, Social and Behavioral and Physical and Biological Sciences); (2) Every student must take a minimum of 25 one-semester courses outside the department of his major, of which at least 10 one-semester courses must be outside the division in which his major falls; (3) Individual departments will establish their own requirements concerning course requirements for the major.

Prof. Quint stated that "the time has come for UMass to allow freedom of choice" among its students in selecting their own course of study. Quint also said that his plan allowed "a large field of choice" and "eliminates specific requirements."

Prof. Paul Sanders submitted a "temporary measure for time-saving, pending the rapid development of a more comprehensive scheme for final action," in calling for the adoption of the Curriculum Committee Report. But Sanders also stated that "more radical approaches would be necessary" and called for modification of the present 40 course requirement to one of 32 units.

Prof. Shapior emphasized to the faculty audience that "We can be ready for next September if we move quickly."

Student Unrest May Have Relation To Lack of Parental Social Action

CHICAGO (AP) - "If students are crazy, the world made them that way," a Harvard psychiatrist said Tuesday.

The amount of student unrest, he said, can be related "to the lack of adult unrest."

Prof. Leon Eisenberg of Harvard medical school discussed sources of student unrest with science writers at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics and later presented a paper on the subject.

He said the American student revolution began in the 1960s and "is regarded by the general public as unprecedented...partly because of the unhealthy quietude that prevailed in the previous decade of witch hunting congressional committees."

Eisenberg said there are 7 million student s enrolled in colleges and universities and that they represent 40 or 50 per cent of their age bracket - a far higher percentage than in previous generations.

Colleges and universities no longer are places for the elite but "for the unwashed multitude," he said, and added that this accounts for the public distress over the behavior of students.

In the past, elders "smiled indulgently" at rowdyism after football games and at panty raids and considered them "excesses of young gentlemen."

Lederle to Take Part In Coalition Debates

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

President John W. Lederle "welcomes" the Student Coalition's proposed series of debates on the University's role in the war industry, and pledges that he will participate in the debates.

In a letter sent yesterday to members of the Coalition, Lederle termed the group's comments on the role of the University in war related research as "constructive suggestions."

The President said, "We hope that free and open discussion of these issues will help us chart a course which combines conscience, high ideals, and freedom of expression and action for all concerned."

The President has asked Associate Provost Robert L. Gluckstern to plan and to coordinate the debates.

Last Wednesday, the Coalition which includes students from U-Mass, S.D.S., SMILE, the MLK Council, and Greeks for the Coalition, sent the President a letter which asked him to arrange a series of debates on four topics for the next Moratorium day. The topics include the follow-

Mass. Peace Group Plans To Complement Nov. March

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - The Massachusetts peace group which organized this state's Oct. 15 Vietnam Moratorium Day announced its plans Tuesday for a two-day moratorium in November.

The Vietnam Peace Action group, PAX, said Nov. 13 and 14 will be used by those of antiwar sentiment in Massachusetts "at the grass roots level." PAX said its plans are "completely complementary" to the Nov. 15 peace march on Washington planned by the student-oriented New Mobilization Committee.

The program advocated by PAX includes students and local groups handing out antiwar leaflets; a series of clean-up projects in Massachusetts showing the projects left under-financed by high military spending; an effort to bring congressmen home "to face their constituents in open forums;" a campaign "to convince all businesses to close on Friday the 14th;" church services, peace vigils, and ringing of school and church bells; and distributing black arm bands for all who oppose the war.

In a statement, the group said it was "united" with the New Mobilization Committee running the Washington march in its' determination to end the war.

"Plans for the December Vietnam moratorium are already in the making," said PAX, which intends to run moratoriums every month, each one a day longer than the one previous.

PAX said many persons may want to take part in the local activities, as well as the Wash-

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SAIGON (AP) - American ground forces fought a half-dozen short but sharp battles in the area north and west of Saigon, the U.S. Command said Tuesday. The flash firefights were typical of the actions that have been fought by small units during the current lull in large-scale offensive operations.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) - A revolt by two units of an army division posed the threat Tuesday of a military coup in Chile for the first time in 30 years. But late in the day, President Eduardo Frei told the nation he had the "overwhelming backing of all the armed forces throughout the country."

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. officials expect no immediate changes in West German foreign policy in the wake of Willy Brandt's election as chancellor.

(AP) - Leftist antiwar demonstrations against the Japanese and U.S. governments fall short of the backers' predictions, but Tokyo and major cities are gripped by a near-paralysis for six hours.

(AP) - Sen. George D. Aiken says he expects practically all U.S. ground forces to be out of Vietnam within a year.

(AP) - Researchers who worked on the fatal space flight of the monkey "Bony" are expected to report Wednesday that their findings indicate astronauts may be harmed by prolonged periods of weightlessness.

For the second day in a row presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the Agnew speech had not been seen nor reviewed in advance by the White House.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, in sharp contrast, deplored "some unpleasant sights" in the demonstration last Wednesday, but said that many of the demonstrators were simply trying to "register dramatic but dignified expression of their deep concern for peace in Vietnam. And we listened to these voices with respect . . ."

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's random selection draft lottery plan was sent to the House floor late Tuesday under tight reins to prevent opening up the entire draft law for revision.

Student Owned, Run Busses Will Start Shuttle Service

PROPOSED CAMPUS BUS STOPS - ORCHARD HILL: 1. Skinner Hall, 2. WOPE, 3. Fraternity Patk, 4. Orchard Hill, 5. Chadbourne House, 6. Hills South House; SOUTHWEST: 7. Hasbrouck Lab., 8. Newman Center, 9. Whitmore Hall, 10. Patterson House, 11. "F" Lot, 12. Boyden Gym, 13. Campus Center Way, 14. "N" Lot, 15. Graduate Research Center.

Student owned and operated busses will begin a permanent shuttle service for the undergraduate population soon.

The busses, purchased this summer by the Student Senate, will be driven by students on work-study programs. The University will be absorbing the operation and maintenance costs of this bus. The service will be under the general supervision of the Student Services Committee.

Q. When will this service begin?

A. Originally plans were to begin the service on October 15th, but delays in recruiting drivers and training them has forced us to revise that to shortly after the first of November.

Q. How are your drivers recruited?

A. Since the students who will drive the busses must qualify for work study, they must apply to that office before they may be considered for employment. All drivers must be over 21 and must either hold a 2nd class drivers license or be willing to attempt to qualify for one. At present we expect to have enough drivers, but as the semester goes on we expect to need more. If anyone now holds the required license or wishes to be considered later he may call Mr. Denlin in the Physical Plant (6-0600, Ext. 79) and I will contact him.

Q. What sort of service do you expect to be able to provide?

A. With the two busses, we will be able to run the Orchard Hill route in 15 minutes and the Southwest Route in 20 minutes. When the two University busses used for field trips become available later this semester, these busses will be used to augment the service.

Q. Will any student be allowed to use the bus?

A. I am not sure about that. The Senate has indicated that we may not be allowed to take Stockbridge or Graduate Students unless their Senates appropriate a portion of the costs of the busses. This will be clarified as soon as possible.

Q. What will be the routes?

A. I have prepared a map indicating the two separate routes and the proposed stops. I would ask that people review this and forward any complaints or suggestions to me, c/o Transportation Office, Physical Plant.

Marijuana, LSD Conviscated in Mt. Tom Raid

HOLYOKE (AP) - Police arrested six persons at Mt. Tom State Reservation Tuesday, and confiscated six pounds of freshly cut marijuana they said may have been grown on the reservation.

State police from the Northampton Barracks staged the raid, confiscating what they said was LSD, hypodermic needles and a rifle in addition to the marijuana.

Held in $5,000 bail on several charges of violating drug laws were Gerald G. Dawson, 17, of Bolton, Vt., Stephen D. LeSourd, 18, of South Burlington, Vt., Peter P. Lucchesi, 22, of Holyoke; Robert C. Byron, 18, of Shelburne, Vt., and Bruce R. Wright, 17, of Burlington, Vt.

They faced arraignment Wednesday in Holyoke District Court.

A 16-year-old juvenile also was arrested.

Bonny's Death May be Due to Weightlessness

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - Findings from the ill-fated space flight of the monkey Bonny have indicated to researchers that astronauts might be harmed by prolonged weightlessness, informed sources report.

Such findings could cause new controversy over plans for long-duration manned flights to the planets and for America's earth-orbiting space stations, and lead to more pressure to develop spaceships with artificial gravity.

Bonny was launched June 28 in Biosatellite 3 for an intended 30 days in orbit. The pigtail monkey was brought back to earth after eight days, however, when medical data showed his condition had deteriorated. He died 12 hours after his space capsule was recovered from the Pacific Ocean.

The experimenters have been reluctant to comment on their findings until a news conference scheduled Wednesday, but sources say they have concluded that weightlessness was a main contributor to the animal's deterioration.

The scientists are said to believe that lack of gravity caused blood and other fluids in the monkey's body to shift out of normal balance, resulting in a high rate of fluid loss and other side effects.

Peace Corps Selection Procedure May Discourage Minority Groups

"The Peace Corps is lily-white and we've got to change that," Peace Corps Director Joe Blatchford said in an interview on Boston's "soul station," WILD.

Blatchford said that upon being appointed Director of the Peace Corps he discovered that the Peace Corps selection process has been unintentionally discouraging applications from members of minority groups.

"To begin with, a 16 page application would frighten anyone, but particularly those who haven't made a career of filling out forms as have most middle-class Americans," he pointed out.

"Then there is the reference system. The Peace Corps requires a large number of written references and members of minority groups are often from backgrounds in which their friends and associates are unfamiliar with or reticent about filling out government forms. Consequently, many applications from members of minority groups never get processed. They lack the proper number of references," he said.

Blatchford noted that the result of this system has been that black Americans who applied for the Peace Corps were three times less likely to be selected. He also said that in the past training has not been geared to the needs of minority group members.

He stated that the application form will be simplified and reduced in size, and references obtained either in person or by phone where necessary.

"We are not looking toward a quota system of any kind. We don't even keep records according to racial background, although everyone who has traveled overseas knows that the face of a black, Mexican-American or Puerto Rican is very rare in the Peace Corps. We are seeking minorities because we want the Peace Corps overseas to be truly representative of this country, and because these people have a special contribution to make. I suggest the Peace Corps has an obligation to remove barriers which presently prevent all but a small and largely homogeneous group of Americans from serving overseas," Blatchford said.

Foreign Relations Committee Postpones Hearings on Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. George D. Aiken, dean of Senate Republicans, said Tuesday he expects practically all American ground troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam within one year.

The Vermont senator sounded a keynote for optimistic forecasts about the war - and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee postponed a planned series of Vietnam hearings until after President Nixon reports to the nation on his policy Nov. 3.

"As a matter of courtesy, it seemed proper for the committee to defer its hearings until after the President has spoken," said Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., the chairman.

The hearings were to have opened Oct. 27 for five, probably televised days, including appearances by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird.

Past performance indicated they would become a forum for critics of the administration.

The subject matter: a series of Senate resolutions urging US withdrawal from Vietnam, and one, with 36 sponsors, calling upon Communist North Vietnam to offer concessions for the same of peace.

Aiken, ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate "Unless the unexpected happens, I expect that practically all of our ground troops will be withdrawn by a year from now."

There are 408,000 U.S. Army and Marine troops in Vietnam, out of a total American military force of 501,000.

"I have been kept well-informed from many sources on the progress of the President's withdrawal policy," Aiken said.

But he said the withdrawal forecast was his own and did not come from the White House.

"There is a growth in optimism as to the hope for speedier deceleration of the war," said Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., the minority leader.

Scott said Nixon's Nov. 3 speech will " clarify all of the steps that are being taken" in that direction.

Kopechne Autopsy May Be Dropped If Pa. Case Lost

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) - A judge reserved decision Tuesday on a petition for an autopsy on the body of Mary Jo Kopechne who died in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's submerged automobile in waters off Chappaquiddick Island, Mass.

Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis, who made the request, indicated he may not press further for an autopsy if the Pennsylvania court ruling goes against him.

Judge Bernard C. Brominski of Common Pleas Court adjourned the hearing at 3:05 p.m. after two days of testimony.

Brominski gave no indication when he would reach a verdict. He did say he would give all parties at least 24 hours advance notice.

Dinis said throughout the proceedings that he needs the results of an autopsy for an inquest he has scheduled into the 28-year-old secretary's death. But after the hearing he said, "I don't think we'll go any further to appeal if we lose."

"I have no complaints and I'm satisfied that we did the best we could, that we were treated fairly here and that we will abide by the decision." He had said previously that he planned to go ahead with the inquest "whatever the outcome here."

Rival Peace Movements Stress Unity of Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) - The two national committees planning mid-November get-out-of-Vietnam demonstrations sought Tuesday to squelch reports that they are at odds over strategy by endorsing each other's plans.

And Sam Brown, leader of the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, took note of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's denunciation of the Sept. 15 Moratorium Day by saying: "It's sad when we have a man in high office so out of touch with the people of the country."

In response to Agnew's weekend speech that the demonstration served only as "an emotional purgative" in a prevailing "spirit of national masochism," Brown said "I don't consider myself a defective masochist."

At a news conference, Brown endorsed the demonstrations planned in Washington and San Francisco Nov. 13-15 by the New Mobilization Committee and then told of his own committee's plans for grass roots antiwar activity Nov. 13 and 14.

Shortly afterward, leaders of the New Mobilization Committee held a news conference in the same room endorsing the Vietnam Moratorium Committee plans. Then they detailed plans for their own demonstrations here - a 40-hour "March Against Death" to be followed by a mass march past the White House.

Stewart Meachan, one of half a dozen who spoke at the New Mobilization news conference and as co-chairman of the group, conceded there is a problem in having simultaneous demonstrations by two groups but he said "We have our offices together, we're working together to smooth things out."

The New Mobilization Committee's formal announcement noted that the mutual endorsement was worked out at a four-hour meeting Monday night.

Brown said his committee merely wants President Nixon to order an immediate withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam.

The National Mobilization Committee went further in a "position paper" which said the United States must "stop all military action against the Vietnamese, withdraw all troops and equipment and dismantle all bases and withdraw all support from the Thieu-Ky government."

These three points, the paper said, "are not capable of negotiation . . . they must be announced."

November Moratorium Plans Need Very Willing Workers

Plans for November's peace Moratorium will discuss tonight at 8:00 in Engineering East auditorium.

Gil Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, emphasizes he wants only those students who are willing to spend a lot of time working on the proposed committees.

These proposed committees include: High School Organizing; Leafleting Workers; Setting up coffee hours; getting kids to Trick or Treat for Peace; setting up information tables in dormitories; co-ordinating activities between the 4-college area; contacting people to get speakers for the rallies.

In a Collegian interview today, Salk said the count on the postcards has gone up to a little under 10,000. Cards are still being turned into the King Council Office at 207 Hampshire House.

Anti-War Demonstration In Tokyo, Japan Fails

TOKYO (AP) - A major left-wing antiwar demonstration, aimed at the government of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and the United States, failed to materialize Tuesday although Tokyo and major Japanese cities were gripped for six hours with fear and near paralysis.

Some 5,000 militant pro-Peking Zengakuren students staged sporadic guerrilla assaults in the streets of Tokyo, wrecking police call boxes and stopping train service.

But they never got near the main targets of their self-proclaimed International Antiwar Day: the prime minister's official residence, government offices, the U.S. Embassy and major railway stations.

The leftist ran into a phalanx of a 25,000 riot police who repeatedly turned them back.

By midnight, police said, they had arrested 1,393 students throughout the country, most of them in Tokyo.

Informed sources said about 60 persons were injured, including 28 policemen. Most of the 60 persons were injured, including 28 policemen because of burns caused by flaming gasoline bombs. Two police were in critical condition.

The left wing and its sympathizers were protesting the Vietnam war, demanding immediate return of Okinawa, scrapping of the U.S.-Japan security treaty which comes up for review in 1970, and opposing Sato's visit to Washington next month for talks with President Nixon on a timetable for Okinawa's reversion to Japan.

FROM OUR SIDE

Open Letter

In order to voice my feelings on Vietnam I decided to write to my Senator. Because I am from New York I addressed it to Senator Jacob Javits, the senior Senator from New York.
The following is the text of the letter:

Dear Senator Javits,
Although I am not of voting age, I feel I have an obligation to write to you. My name is Douglas Packer and I live on Long Island. I am currently enrolled in my junior year at the University of Massachusetts and am majoring in Government.
There are thousands of young men in our state and millions in the country who are perplexed and frightened over the same questions I am. Those questions obviously concern Vietnam.
I am asking whether my dying in Vietnam will accomplish anything. I am asking whether I have anything to live for. I am asking whether I should let an insane world trap me into playing their war games.
For me the question of fighting in Vietnam is not an intellectual, moral, or religious question. I am concerned with me; with MY life, whether I need to have a reason acceptable to the government in order to get out of fighting; whether leaving the country or going to jail is worth not going to Vietnam. Senator, these are questions your government has forced me to consider.
I have been no part of your government up to this point and dammit now I am forced to make a decision that could change my life, or end it.
There is an eminent government professor here at the University of Massachusetts who said in class that he rejects a quick pullout because it would weaken our prestige and present Russia with an opportunity to take over Western Europe. If that is the same feeling in Washington, then God help us.
Sir, if I have not been discussing this on an intellectual level, I am sorry. I am just expressing my feelings. I don't want to answer the questions I raised earlier.
Senator Javits, please, for my sake and for thousands of others, do all that is in your power to get us out of Vietnam quickly.
Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
Douglas Packer

I would advise all students and faculty at this college to write to their Congressmen or Senators and express their feelings on Vietnam.

ART BUCHWALD

Getting Out of 'Nam

WASHINGTON - The Vietnam solution, as most people look at it now, is for the Americans to get out "with honor." How this can be accomplished is President Nixon's major problem and one that he is devoting his days and nights to.

Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, dean of the political science department at the University of Dissent, has been studying various withdrawal plans that could be implemented as soon as the President decides to move.

"The secret of getting out of Vietnam can be found in how we got in," Prof. Applebaum told me. "We just cannot leave South Vietnam after all these years without some explanation. We had a cover story when we went in, and we must have a cover story when we go out."

"What kind of a cover story, Professor?"

"How's that?"

"If you recall, the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution passed by the Senate gave President Johnson carte blanche to escalate American participation in the war. It was after the Gulf of Tonkin that the President decided to bomb the North and send in hundreds of thousands of GI's. What happened at the Gulf of Tonkin was that two American destroyers reported that they were attacked by North Vietnamese PT boats at night. This got the President furious and he decided that if the North Vietnamese were going to attack him in the Gulf of Tonkin, he damn well was going to attack them anywhere he pleased.

"There is still some question," Applebaum said, "whether the two destroyers actually saw any PT boats, but that's not the point.

"The President got Senate approval to do anything he wanted to, and he did. Now President Nixon is faced with the job of undoing most of what President Johnson didn"

"What do you suggest, Professor?"

"We should rig it so that four or five PT boats attack two American destroyers in San Francisco Bay. Then President Nixon could go on the air and announce that our American ships were fired upon at night and he was asking the Senate for a 'Bay of San Francisco Resolution.'"

"What would be the resolution?"

"The resolution would state that since two American destroyers had been openly and defiantly attacked, the President was calling all the troops in Vietnam to California, where they would be stationed until the Californians could defend themselves. He would say that he was reluctant to bring back so many troops, but that the people who fired upon the two destroyers must be made to pay for their aggression."

"Do you think the Senate would pass a 'Bay of San Francisco Resolution'?"

"They would if we produced the proof that the destroyers had been attacked. After all, the United States has a commitment to California. It was first made by Eisenhower, then confirmed by John F. Kennedy and then Lyndon B. Johnson. President Nixon could not go down in history as the first President to loss a state."

"So after the resolution was passed by the Senate, President Nixon could start pulling our troops in Vietnam out?"

"Morally the President would have no choice. No matter what you think of Gov. Reagan's regime, you couldn't let California go down the drain."

"How many troops do you think President Nixon could withdraw from Vietnam and send to California under the 'Bay of San Francisco Resolution'?"

"There should be a limit. I don't think more than 500,000."

"But there are only 500,000 American troops in South Vietnam."

The professor looked at me and smiled. "Quite," he said.

Campus Comment

Try Peace

It has been a week since the October 15th Moratorium, time enough to make a partial assessment of the results. Perhaps most significant was the lack of criticism that the movement received. Of course, Spiro T. Agnew came out against "an effete corps of impudent snobs", but for the most part it was well received. Those who didn't agree with the goals of the movement, could say little beyond that. Could it be that the best way to carry on the fight for peace is through peaceful demonstrations. Can peace beget peace? Is this being proved to be the best approach in a country divided over such an issue?

"Talk About Crime In The Streets — How About The Corridors Of The Capitol!"

In Defense

To the Editor:
I have not always agreed with President Lederle, but I would gladly defend him from the kind of hysterical invective that appeared in your editorial columns on October 20. Intelligent men, after all, may disagree; but truly intelligent men will try to debate their differences in a calm and rational manner, with mutual respect and toleration. When honest disagreement is allowed to degenerate into gratuitous personal attack, there can be no possibility of significant dialogue.

ROBERTS W. FRENCH
Dept. of English

Dear Jon

To the Editor:
As members of the Daily Collegian Editorial Board, we are frankly disgusted by the editorial "I am Lederle (Yellow)", written by Jon Gerard, "radical thinker", in Monday's MDC.
If the editorial were just the irrational diatribe of a "frustrated rebel", which in part it is, then there would be no objection - except for the fact that the news paper on which we work is printing lousy copy.
But Gerard's outburst is vicious, slanderous, and factually incorrect, and this must not be overlooked. The Daily Collegian is supposed to be a "free and responsible press". Somehow Mr. Gerard does not fulfill this motto.

He terms Dr. Lederle and his State College President colleagues as "Perverted, amoral," etc. for lending their signatures to support the document for the October 15th moratorium, printed in the New York Times.
Perhaps he forgets that these men are in the unique position of being responsible for institutions which are, in large part, symbols of the states in which they are located.
Mr. Gerard charges that Dr. Lederle stands mute and spineless before his Governor and Legislature.
Was it a mute and spineless man who stood at University Commencement last May and said with the Governor sitting five feet away, and with a contingent from the national press looking on, "The question at stake for this nation is whether we can any longer afford to spend billions of dollars on a wasteful mini-war in the swamps of Asia, while federal dollars for higher education and funds for the uplifting of the disadvantaged melt away before our eyes. We must have a reversed committment, not in some steaming jungle, but for higher education, the shining light of hope for America."
You charge, Mr. Gerard, that the President refuses to take a moral stand on the issue of the war. Is the President's statement last fall at Convocation that the war, for America, is a "winter of despair" not a moral stand?
Mr. Gerard, we all have our hangups, whether they lie in not seeing editorials before they go into the paper, or in some sort of self-righteous moral indignation.
We don't write this letter to praise John Lederle as the savior of American Higher education; he has his faults as we all do. But we do write this letter to defend him. John Lederle does not have to apologize to a fledgling muckraker for his stand on "moral issues". If John Lederle wishes not to sign a grandstand statement at a fashionable time about the war, but prefers to speak out, in his own way, to the nation's media about something on which he feels strongly, it is his choice, and his right to do so.
For you to say that the President is "spineless" because he does not sign the statement, Mr. Gerard, is slander.
John Lederle has nothing to be ashamed about, but Jon - you sure do.

Advocates Rarely Churchgoers

UMass Research Team Studies Student Power

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) - Student - power rebels on campus have usually rebelled in their homes, a case study at the University of Massachusetts shows.
A typical student-power advocate is a girl in her sophomore year who doesn't practice religion and who doesn't get along with her parents.

Opponents of student power on campus usually come from the oppositive background. A typical one is an older male student who prefers the Republican party, is an active fraternity member, and whose family has been in America for four generations.

The study, "Student Power at the University of Massachusetts," was prepared by government Prof. John H. Fenton and graduate student Gail Gleason.
It's purpose was to examine the February 1968, student eruption here when 150 students demonstrated against Dow Chemical Co. recruiting on campus. The study, which took a year to complete, examined a cross-section of 232 students from the 18,000-student population.

The report said racial thought on campus became popular only when the protests changed from Vietnam to student issues.

Surveys in the study show that students attracted to the protest movement are rarely churchgoers. "Jews, Unitarians and those belonging to no organized religion are most student-power oriented, while Protestants and Catholics tend to be more conservative."

Most student power advocates are not likely to belong to fraternities or sororities, social clubs, or academic groups, but may join political and student government groups, the study said.

In the sampling, three girls our of 10 were shown to be student activists, compared to two boys out of 10.

The report said, "Since girls do not find outlets for their energies in varsity sports or conventional club groupings, they may be inclined to turn to student power as one of the few areas of student life in which they can take a leading and exciting part. The failure of family, church and other institutions to indoctrinate pro-student power people with traditional values is most clearly evident in their attitudes toward sex, drugs, Vietnam and civil rights."

Most student power advocates favored legalizing marijuana and making contraceptives available to students, while 70 per cent of the anti-student-power group opposed legalizing marijuana and 59 per cent opposed making contraceptives available.

The report said that at the University of Massachusetts, protesting students do not feel that the administration should be overthrown. It said that many of those identified as favoring student power here would have opposed student power at Berkeley, Wisconsin or Columbia.

It concluded that student power advocates are not "radical" in terms of being serious revolutionaries.

Brandt Chosen As Chancellor In W. Germany

BONN (AP) - Social Democrat leader Willy Brandt was elected West Germany's first Socialist chancellor yesterday by a narrow margin, bringing down the curtain on 20 years of Christian Democrat rule.
Three weeks after the Sept. 28 federal elections, the new Bundestag voted the 55-year-old Brandt into office by 251 votes - two more than the required absolute majority.
Asked by the speaker if he accepted the mantle of leadership, the former foreign minister and Berlin mayor shot to his feet and declared with a trembling voice: "Yes, Mr. President, I accept election."
Immediately, the Social and Free Democrats, who make up the new ruling coalition, burst into applause.
Outgoing Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger, wearing a pallid smile, walked wearily across the chamber to shake Brandt's hand.
While Brandt was celebrating his victory, financial observers in Bonn said they expect his government to decide in the next few days on evaluation of the mark. Bonn sources said they expect the decision at a Cabinet meeting Friday, with an announcement on the mark's new value by week's end.
The election capped a long and colorful political career. It was Brandt's third successive try at the chancellorship.

Board of Trustees Reviews Policy On Housing for Married Students

The UMass Board of Trustees voted Saturday to reverse its long-standing policy of leaving all construction of married student housing to the private sector of the local economy.

While expressing hope that private developers could come up with a reasonable housing plan for young married students, the trustees said that if a new proposal developed by the University involving private capital does not generate acceptable bids in the next 45 days, the trustees will ask the UMass Building Authority to develop 31 acres north of the University campus.

The private capital plan will be offered to private developers immediately. Under the proposal, a private firm would develop low-cost housing for married students in reasonable proximity to the University--although not necessarily in Amherst. The University would lease the housing from the developer for five years.

If no developers submit acceptable bids in the next 45 days that would result in suitable, low-rent apartments close to the University, the trustees have authorized the Building Authority to request bids on its 31 acres north of the campus. This would be for single unit or multiple unit prefabricated apartments. The decision on whether to build the single or multiple units would depend on the cost, quality, size and appearance of the units, but bids would be asked on both plans.

Since the University is growing at the rate of 1500 additional students each year, it is estimated that a need for 200 new married student apartments is generated each year. This is in addition to the requirements for new faculty and staff each year.

The decision by the trustees on Saturday was the result of an exhaustive administrative study of all possible ways the University could provide suitable, low-rent housing for married students.

In the course of studying various proposals to insure some new low-cost married student housing by next fall, University personnel have met informally with representative officials from the Town of Amherst during the past few months.

A Paulist Goes Forward ...not backward
Time never stands still — and neither does a Paulist.
Issues are raised, conflicts appear and the world changes, but the Paulist is always part of the new . . . blending the best of the old with the hope and promise of the future
Because one of the major characteristics of the Paulist is his ability to cope with, and welcome, change, he's better able to meet the needs of modern man: he uses his own talents to work for Christ and is given the freedom to do so.
If you've given thought to the priesthood, find out more about the order that never stands still. Write today for an illustrated brochure and a summary of our recent Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

Broken NES Bus Adversely Affects Both Tutees and Volunteer Tutors

A damper has been put on the spirit of the 600 UMass students who volunteered for the NES tutoring program because of the lack of bus service. Of approximately 250 students who have been assigned tutees in Springfield since the October 6 starting date, only a small fraction has made the trip to Springfield. The delays also prevent further assignments for the remaining unassigned volunteers.

Everyone in the program is adversely affected by these delays. The personal contact needed for the program to be successful has been made more difficult by the cancelation of the past three weeks of tutoring sessions. However, tutors are asked to stick with the program and to keep in mind that the assigned tutee might feel the same way.

The N.E.S. Tutoring program requires more than 100% effort by all those concerned here at UMass. Some tutors with cars have taken the initiative and made the trip to Springfield bringing other tutors with them. For tutors without cars the bus still not be running this week.

The large N.E.S. bus may be out of action for two more weeks. A smaller VW bus will be making the trip starting October 27. There will not be enough room to take all tutors so tutors with cars are asked to contribute in this aspect of the program. The more tutors who go down to Springfield the more successful is the program.

The N.E.S. Coordinating Committee wishes to apologize to any tutor who has been kept waiting for the bus. For information about bussing for the afternoon trip call the King Council at 545-0648 or 545-0649, or call 549-1215 when the King Council Office is closed for the day. Also information as to whether the bus is running or not will be announced over WMUA.

Leyden School Prayers Ruled Unconstitutional

BOSTON (AP) - State Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn Tuesday ruled the Leyden School Committee's new rules to restore prayer to the public elementary school were unconstitutional.

The attorney general issued the opinion based on an investigation ordered by Education Commissioner Neil V. Sullivan. A spokesman for Sullivan said the next move is up to officials in Leyden where a brief religious period has been used since the start of the school year.

"We will notify the Leyden School Committee of the attorney general's opinion and ask for their compliance," a spokesman said.

The Leyden school board last spring sought to reintroduce a religious period at the start of the school day, but halted it after a similar ruling.

Just before the beginning of September sessions, the school committee tried a new method which it said would not be in contention with objections - raised by the U. S. Supreme Court in its decision banning sectarian activity in public schools.

Under the program, one bell rings to denote start of prayers or other religious session, another bell rings to note the end of the session, and a third bell rings for the start of school classes.

Leyden school officials contended this allows any child who does not want to participate to stay away.

'Political Showdown' Will be Topic for Sierra Club Speaker

Conservationist and political science professor Robert Rienow will speak at UMass on October 23, 8 p.m., in Thompson 104, on the topic "Political Showdown on the Environment."

Dr. Rienow will also speak informally with faculty and students the same day at 3:30 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge, Student Union, on the role of the university community in a quality environment. His visit is co-sponsored by the UMass government department and the Sierra Club.

A professor of political science at the Graduate School of Public Affairs at the State University of New York at Albany, Dr. Rienow holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University Graduate School of Public Law. He is author or co-author of over 14 books, most of them on American government and the American environment. The best-known of these is "Moment in the Sun," which reported on the deteriorating quality of the American environment.

University Store Becoming More Like Department Store

By CHET ADAMCZYK
Staff Reporter

Manager Winthrop L. Cummings, says "The University store is being run more and more likea department store."

A growing variety of stocked items and especially the marketing of clothes give the appearance of a large retailer. In recognition of this expanding assortment, Mr. Cummings asserted, "The University Store has no intention of competing with businesses in Amherst but exists as a non-profit organization for the convenience of students."

Due to enlarged demand and volume, plans have been made for a new and larger location. In a COLLEGIAN interview, Mr. Cummings cited the near completed Campus Center as the University Store's future home. Cummings added, "This new location will give us twice the space we now have and allow us to function more efficiently." An early moving date is expected second semester.

Textbooks, souvenirs, stationery and jackets all have high turnover rates. According to Mr. Cummings, jackets are popular on campus because "the average UMass student is becoming more fashion conscious". At one time sweatshirts were a major selling item but today they have given way to "in style" clothes.

Cummings added, souvenir items with the University seal are in frequent demand. Beer mugs and old - fashioned glasses partly owe their success to the school emblem. Stationery supplies and assorted medicines generate little store income but are stocked as a service for the student.

Testbooks are still the store's largest selling item. Mr. Cummings blamed the high cost of books partly to inflation in general. Publishers need more money for increased salary and operation costs. Cummings said the University Store operates at a low profit, less than 10 %. This profit is then used for the support and maintainance of the Student Union building, thus making the store a non-profit operation.

No socket to it.

If you were always near a socket when you needed a shave, that would be one thing.

But you aren't.

You're all over the place.

So you need a shaver that goes where it's happening.

A shaver like the brand-new battery-operated Norelco Cordless 20B.

And self-sharpening blades inside those floating heads that shave close and smooth every day. The Norelco unique rotary action keeps the blades sharp while it strokes off whiskers. Every time you shave.

The Norelco Cordless gives you close shaves anywhere. Up to 30 days of shaves on only 4 penlight batteries.

Handsomely styled in jet black and chrome, there's even a mirror inside the cap. So you can see what you're shaving.

And it's small enough to fit your pocket. Very self-sufficient.

All ready to sock it to your beard.

Norelco®
Even on a beard like yours.

Scavone, Guarino Efforts Cited

Redman Back, Tackle are All ECAC, All Yan-Con

Junior Pat Scavone, Redman halfback, has been selected to the E.C.A.C. Division I. weekly all-star team and senior Andy Guarino, UMass defensive tackle, has been cited as Yankee Conference defensive player of the week as a result of their outstanding contributions to UMass' 21-9 victory over Rhode Island.

Guarino also earned honorable mention for the E.C.A.C. squad and fullback Dick Cummings was one of the nominees for E.C.A.C. Sophomore of the Week. Cummings also received honorable mention as the Yan-Con's top soph, while senior co-captain Ed Sarno was honorably mentioned as top offensive player in the conference.

Scavone, 5'11-182, had another excellent game in Saturday's affair against the Rams. He gained 118 yards in 14 carries for a very impressive average of 8.4 yards a try. His performance moved him into fourth place among Yan-Con rushers with a total of 351 yards in five games at a 6.2 yard per carry rate.

Joining Scavone on the All-East first team were running backs Ed Marinaro of Cornell, Bob Miakar of Dartmouth, Larry Robertson of Rutgers and Lynn Moore of Army, ends Ralph Tiner of UConn and Lew Roney of Yale, tackles Joe Ehrmann of Syracuse and Phil Corrinet of Colgate, guards Ralph Cindrich of Pittsburgh and Spencer Dreischarf of Harvard and center Rick Wells of Villanova. Defensive Back of the Week was George Landis of Penn. State.

PAT SCAVONE
All-E.C.A.C.

Marinaro was also selected as E.C.A.C. Sophomore of the Week for the second week in succession. He presently leads the nation in rushing with 834 yards on 145 carries. On Saturday, the 6'2-205 pounder contributed 231 yards on the ground and five touchdowns in Cornell's big 41-24 victory over Harvard. He carried the ball 40 times.

Guarino, 5'11-215, served most of his playing time in a reserve role for Bill Sroka, injured in the fray. In a remarkable display he knocked down three passes, caused a fumble and dumped Rhody quarterback Bob Ehrhardt for a big loss.

Guarino was also in on seven tackles and helped keep the opposition under 100 yards rushing for the second straight week as the Redmen upped their record to 3-2.

Chosen as the best offensive player in the Yankee conference for this week was UConn halfback Vinny Clements while the soph-of-the week honor went to Vermont halfback Bob Rodger.

Clements, a 6'3-205 junior, netted 146 yards on 33 carries, including two touchdowns, completed a 12-yard pass, caught a nine-yard pass and returned two kick-offs for 36 yards as the Huskies beat Maine 28-7. The Conference win put UConn into a tie for second place with Vermont at 2-1 and made its overall record 3-1..

ANDY GUARINO
Top Defender

Rodger, a 6'-190 power-runner, sparked Vermont to a 27-7 upset over New Hampshire by gaining 188 yards on 26 carries, including a 53-yard touchdown, and catching a 14-yard touchdown pass. Vermont is now 2-1 in the Conference and 3-2 overall with three straight wins.

Other nominations were: Offense - halfback Dan Sullivan of Maine, quarterback Fran Peterson of Vermont, quarterback Bob Hopkins of New Hampshire, fullback Steve Furness of URI and fullback Sarno of UMass.

IM Playoffs Continue

The intramural football campus championships moved into the semi-final round tonight as a result of last night's action which saw the Maroons beat the Hi-lo's, 29-12, the Jocks edge the Wheelers, 13-8, Phi Sigma Delta whip Phi Mu Delta, 28-15, and the Smashers clip the Bulldozers, 12-7.

Murphy starred for the Maroons in their conquest of the Hi-lo's as he caught three touchdown passes. The Jock-Wheeler contest was described as being "very, very rough." Jock quarterback Lasher Fell was the key figure as he completed 11 of 19 passes Blair ran for the other Jock score. The Jocks now reign as Independent Champs.

Quarterback Loria of PSD was injured in the first half against PMD and is believed to have suffered a slight concussion. Del Sesto took over for Loria in the second half and paved the way with two TD tosses. PSD is the Fraternity Champ.

The Smasher-Bulldog affair was another thriller. In this one Starsiak hurled a long bomb with 15 second left to win the game.

In consolation play, Theta Chi tipped Lambda Chi Alpha, 7-6, and the disheartened Stinters and Road Runners registered a double forfeit.

Ball, Former UM Hoop Coach Dies

Ball was the recipient of the 16th annual Harold M. Kid Gore award in 1935 for outstanding contributions to schoolboy basketball.

In 1957, he won the National Basketball Officials Association special award for devoted work to the promotion of basketball and sound officiating.

Crew to Open on Charles

The UMass Crew Team opens their '69 fall season Sunday with a 2.3 mile upstream race on the Charles River in Boston. This year's "Head of the Charles" will attract over 800 oarsmen from 75 schools and clubs. UMass will be out to improve upon last year's fine finish of 19th out of 46 schools.

Two upperclass boats have been working out five days a week in what has been a great fall for rowing. These past two weeks, the club has gone to a seven-day-a-week program covering up to ten miles daily.

Coach Mike Faherty is very pleased with the club's progress so far. He comments, "This should be our best year. We have gotten over many of the rough spots. The boats are experienced overall and, where we lack the experience, we have good strength. We're optimistic."

The club has contracted the services of Larry Dean to coach the freshmen. Dean rowed four years with the Cornell lightweights and had the distinction of rowing on a U.S. championship lightweight boat and a Royal Henley Champion in England in 1967.

Dean brings with him a great rowing background and an eagerness to work with the freshmen.

On-the-water training has already begun for some frosh but many more are wanted. Candidates need no previous experience, only a desire to compete. Frosh should contact coach Faherty in room 211 Boyden.

Harriers Outrun Springfield, 20-40

SPRINGFIELD - To the tune of 20 to 40, the Redmen harriers defeated the Springfield College cross country team here yesterday, Junior co-captain Ron Wayne lead the charge, turning in the fourth fastest time ever on the looping course. He averaged 5:02 per mile tor the 4.5 mile course which included a ten foot wide brook at the 2-1/2 mile mark for the runners to jump, fall into or wade through.

Leo Duart almost grabbed second place from Springfield's Ed Walkiwitz, but with a mile to go, as Duart pulled along side the white shirted Springfield runner, a girl about ten decided to cross the path of the battling pair. Duart fell over her and rolled several times on the grass of the soccer field, sacrificing about ten seconds before he could begin running again. A six second gap separated the pair at the finish.

Tom Derderian took the fourth spot, 25 seconds behind Duart. Derderian started slow but moved up after the first mile until he caught the leaders at two miles. He stayed with them, occasionally setting the pace until four miles where Wayne increased the pace, losing Walkiwitz and Duart who had begun their battle.

Larry Paulson, Redman junior, finished eleven seconds behind Derderian, followed by Brad Kron of Springfield. Kron was a member of Ron Wayne's New England High School championship team from Brockton. Rounding out the varsity scoring were sophomores Bruce Blackburn and Don Dunsky.

The only UMass senior in the race, Bill Donaldson, showed definite recovery from his recent injury by placing 10th. The varsity now has a 5-3 record.

The Little Redmen, with yesterday's 18-41 victory over the Springfield Frosh, now loudly sport a 7-1 record. Tom Jasmin lead the proud frosh, ripping savagely nine seconds from the course record, formerly held by UMass Steve Obietz set in 1965.

Tom Swain missed the record by two seconds placing second. Rick Barry, also a Brockton High School product, manufactured an improved race to snap third place. Phil Riley managed fifth spot and Mike Daly, whose running form is reminiscent of recent graduate Marc Gelineas, controled seventh place. Daly has showed continued improvement over the last few meets according to Coack Ken O'Brien.

Both teams will travel to Worcester Friday to meet Holy Cross, which has a very strong team lead by the untouchable Art Dulong. Dulong has recorded times over a minute faster than anyone in New England on the standard course at Franklin Park in Boston.

Scott Proposes Unilateral Cease - Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott proposed Wednesday that the United States unilaterally proclaim a cease-fire in Vietnam, but Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird rejected the idea.

"I do not believe that would be a successful approach," Laird told a group of reporters. "As secretary of defense I would caution against a unilateral action on the part of the United States without some firm indication from the other side that we would have assurance that they would go along with it."

Scott said he hopes President Nixon will set a date on which American forces will stop shooting unless attacted.

Scott, the administration's chief spokesman on the Senate floor, said he was not signaling any White House intention.

"This is not a trial balloon for the President," Scott said, "it's a personal hope."

But Scott's expression of that hope, for a course long advocated by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, was certain to heighten speculation that Nixon plans some such dramatic move in his Nov. 3 Vietnam report to the nation.

Scott said he was speculating himself.

"I wouldn't think anything could happen of that kind before Nov. 3," he said.

The Pentagon official, who stipulated that he not be named, cautioned against speculation on what Nixon will say in his speech 10 days hence.

Both Scott and Mansfield said the administration's new battlefield policy of protective reaction represents a major step toward a cease-fire.

Under that policy, Mansfield said, U. S. troops fire only to forestall enemy attack.

"This is certainly a far cry from the tactics of maximum pressure, and search and destroy," Mansfield said "and to me is an indication that the President is moving toward a cease-fire and stand-fast policy."

The high defense official noted that Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird first used the term "protective reaction" to describe authority U. S. commanders have been given in conducting border area attacks as a means of defending their positions.

He said, for example, that U. S. troops were allowed to move into the edge of Laos to ferret out the enemy while under heavy attack.

Field Stresses Honesty Between Campus Groups

Dean of Students William F. Field last night told the Student Senate that a "new kind of honesty is needed between the Senate, Area Governments, House Governments, faculty, administrators and the Board of Trustees, if the University Governmental system is to work."

"Too often," Field said, "various groups going before the Board cover up small details in order to achieve passage of legislation."

The deeper the involvement various groups wish in University Government, Field explained, the deeper is the commitment honesty they must live up to.

He added that the Student Voice is stronger at the Trustee level now than it has ever been in the past, and he called for the SWAP conference next month to be a beginning of a new era in faith among the various segments of the University's governmental apparatus.

Earlier in the evening, Senate President Bruce R. Balboni welcomed the Senate's new members by telling them, "We have many things to do this year, and we should become more interested in political issues outside the University than we have been in the past."

But he cautioned his colleagues, "All too often we become bogged down by an avalanche of mediocrity."

He asked the Senate to be realistic in the motions it passes, saying, "We should not legislate that which is realistically impossible to accomplish."

In a special business motion, the Senate recommended that the Office of Placement and Financial Aid not notify local draft boards of a student's status unless the board specifically asks the school.

The Senate also passed a bill calling for a direct popular election to determine the student representative on the UMass Board of Trustees. Other special action included a bill asking that table grapes be no longer served at University dining commons. This is in support of the California Grape pickers strike.

McCartney Rumors Termed Ridiculous

LONDON (AP) - "I am alive and well and unconcerned about the rumors of my death," says Beatie Paul McCartney. "But if I were dead, I would be the last to know."

At least that's what the Beatles' business organization Apple said he said. The millionaire pop musician was on a motoring tour somewhere in England with his wife, two children and a dog and refused to let it be known where he could be found. Apple said Wednesday that McCartney telephoned the denial of his demise to London Tuesday night.

"Paul refuses to say anything more than that," said Derek Taylor, Apple's chief spokesman. "Even if he appeared in public just to deny rumors, it wouldn't do any good. If people want to believe he's dead, then they'll believe it - the truth is not at all persuasive."

Apple and U.S. news media have been flooded with telephone calls, cables and letters about rumors in the United States that McCartney has been dead for years.

"They are all ridiculous," Apple said.

Flurries Accompany Temperature Drop

New England's first well-defined snowfall of the season dumped heavy accumulations on northern regions and lighter amounts elsewhere, including Amherst, Wednesday.

In the local area light snow began falling shortly after 10 p.m. However the weatherman said that only a light dusting would fall on the University area. It was the earliest snowfall in many years in the region.

The weather bureau said that extremely cold air will blanket New England for the next few days with temperatures well below normal.

Montpelier, Vt., had eight inches of the stuff that delights ski area operators and in a few places, resort operators reported the arrival of skiers.

Berkshire County in western Massachusetts reported an accumulation of one and one-half inches by 7 p.m. Wednesday - the heaviest October fall for the area since 1952.

Lebanon and Concord, N.H. reported accumulations of three and two inches respectively while four inches fell in Burlington, Vt.

Moratorium Committee Launches Campaign to Inform Students

LEE R. MILLER
Staff Reporter

The first organizational meeting of the November Peace Moratorium held last night in Engineering East Auditorium saw over 35 people willing to coordinate planning committees.

Gil Salk, Executive Secretary of the King Council, opened the 45 minute meeting thanking those who worked to make the October 15 Moratorium successful.

Salk, addressing the group, warned "We must not take a cease-fire as stopping the war." We must continue looking at the events occurring in Vietnam, said Salk.

Salk reiterated the rationale behind the hopelessness of trying to win the war, "a civil war between the people of South Vietnam and the Thieu-Ky government."

One of the November peace action committees deals with leafletting military installations. Salk emphasized that those people in the Peace Moratorium are really friends of the military. "We want to save them...no longer make them targets," explained Salk.

The goal of the committee coordinators, Salk pointed out, is to get other students to work on the November Program. "We want to make the November Peace Moratorium even bigger than October's" said Salk.

The Information Committee will set up its main table in the Student Union tomorrow. Other tables of information will be set up in residence areas.

The main oversight of the October 15 activities, Salk indicated, was the lack of contacting University staff who expressed interest in the moratorium.

Also considered at the meeting was obtaining a train to carry workers for peace to Washington.

Cost of Living Rises Again

WASHINGTON (AP) - It cost nearly a nickel more a pound to bring home the bacon last month and other price hikes added fuel to the nation's worst inflation in some 20 years, the government said Wednesday.

Living costs rose one-half of one per cent in September, pushing the federal Consumer Price Index to 129.3. That means it cost $12.93 last month for the goods and services that cost $10 ten years ago.

Bacon led the parade of food price hikes, climbing from 90.9 cents to 95.8 cents a pound, the Labor Department said. Grocery prices on the average remained unchanged instead of showing the usual September drop, and higher restaurant charges boosted overall food prices one-tenth of one per cent.

Clothing prices showed twice the usual September rise, up 1.7 per cent for the month, housing costs climbed six-tenths of one per cent and medical care five-tenths of one per cent.

The only major item to decline was transportation, down five-tenths of one per cent largely because of lower new and used car prices in anticipation of the 1970 model year, said the report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Assistant Commissioner Arnold Chase said the over-all five-tenths of one per cent rise for September was the same as the average monthly rise in living costs so far this year. "I would not call it an acceleration," he said. "The acceleration has stabilized."

Still prices were rising at an annual rate equal to the 5.9 per cent increase in the Korean War year of 1951 before wage -price controls were imposed. The sharpest increase before that was 9.1 per cent in 1947 after World War II controls were lifted.

The Nixon administration, still insisting its tight money, high interest policies will eventually slow the rate of inflation, has steadfastly discounted any thought of wage-price controls now.

Chase said the administration is pinning its hopes on the future. "September is in the past," he said, and predicted that next year's rise in living costs will be less than 1969's.

Despite the rise in living costs, average purchasing power of some 45 million workers showed some gain for the first time in months because of a five-cent rise in hourly wages.

The average gross weekly paycheck of $117.80 was worth 40 cents a week more in purchasing power after deduction for taxes and price hikes.

Student Loans Meet High Interest Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) - Banks will be entitled to a special allowance on federally guaranteed student loans to meet higher interest rates under a bill signed into law today by President Nixon.

The allowance, which could amount to as much as three per cent, will be paid in addition to the seven per cent interest fixed by law for the guaranteed loan program.

Under the program, the government guarantees repayment of the loan and pays the full interest charges for students from families with annual incomes under $15,000 a year while they are in college.

Nixon promised the banks last August the legislation would be forthcoming in order to get them to make loans for the current college semester. When the prime interest went to 8-1/2 per cent earlier in the year, the loan program sagged.

The amount of the allowance will be set by the secretary of health, education and welfare on the basis of market conditions and will be adjusted quarterly.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

LONDON (AP) - "I'm alive and well and unconcerned about rumors of my death," says Beatle Paul McCartney. "But if I were dead, I would be the last to know."

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Gale warnings were raised from Fort Myers to Key West Wednesday as Hurricane Laurie sloshed across the Gulf of Mexico toward the southwest tip of Florida.

PARIS (AP) - Prince Souvanna Phouma of Laos said Wednesday he has a "tacit agreement" with the United States that Washington will provide aid to defend Laotian independence, neutrality and territorial integrity.

But the Laotian premier denied that the United States has "infantry" in Laos, adding "there are only Laotian soldiers getting themselves killed, not any American soldiers."

WASHINGTON (AP) – Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott proposed Wednesday that the United States unilaterally proclaim a cease-fire in Vietnam, but Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird rejected the idea.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Claims of perjury and cover-up were made by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., Wednesday as he closed his Senate investigation of retired Maj. Gen. Carl C. Turner, the Army's former top policeman.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Foreign Affairs Committee appears poised to chop a hefty first chunk off President Nixon's initial bid for $2.6 billion in foreign aid.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bill proposing tough new health and safety rules for the nation's coal mines goes before the House Thursday nearly a year after 78 men were lost in a Virginia disaster.

WASHINGTON (AP) - It cost nearly a nickel more a pound to bring home the bacon last month and other price hikes added fuel to the nation's worst inflation in some 20 years, the government said Wednesday. Living costs rose one half of one per cent in September.

VATICAN CITY (AP) - While the world bishops' synod moved toward recommending sweeping reforms in the use of papal power, Pope Paul VI said Wednesday he would accept only moderate and gradual change in the Roman Catholic Church.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami resigned Wednesday after bloody clashes between the Lebanese army and Palestinian guerrillas. The fighting unleashed a storm of protests at home and abroad and brought threats from other Arab nations.

LAS BEGAS, Nev. (AP) - A hotel-casino sale arranged by gangster Meyer Lansky helped finance a foundation headed for nine years by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, who said Wednesday he knew nothing about the deal.

Douglas helped create and direct the Albert Parvin Foundation and served as its only salaried officer-president until last May.

NEW YORK (AP) - Negotiations between unions representing more than 100,000 General Electric employees and management representatives continued Wednesday as the union mobilized for possible strike action. A vote to authorize a strike Monday was under way by the unions with voting reportedly running heavily in favor of a walkout.

Scientists Develop Dry Milk Product

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department scientists say they have developed a new process for commercially producing a high quality dry whole milk which could mean reduced prices for some consumers.

Officials said Wednesday in announcing the development that the milk product could be sold at retail for about 29.5 cents a quart. Ordinary whole milk sells now for 20 cents to 35 cents a quart in major cities. The process took almost 14 years to develop and involves the manufacture of dry whole milk in vacuum and then canning it under oxygen-free conditions.

"It will keep for more than a year in the refrigerator," the department said. "Stirred into cold water, the powder makes a beverage that most people cannot distinguish from fresh whole milk."

The process was developed at the Agricultural Research Service Laboratory in Philadelphia where the product has undergone pilot tests.

Officials said about 6,500 quart equivalents of the product were sold for prices averaging four cents less per quart than ordinary milk sold in half-gallon cartons by supermarkets.

Studies indicate that a plant could be set up for a cost of about $2.6 million for manufacture of about 15.5 million quarts of the product annually.

Officials said studies show the dry milk could be sold at a factory price equivalent to about 21 cents a quart. This would be based on packaging the dry milk in large No. 10 containers for institutional, military or export use.

Packaging in smaller one quart lots for the consumer market would cost more, officials said, but no retail estimates were immediately available for the smaller containers.

Hillel Brunch Hosts Black Rabbi Sunday

Rabbi Hailu Mosha Paris, a native born Ethopian and at present an associate rabbi of a black Jewish congregation in New York city will be guest speaker at a Hillel Foundation brunch on Sunday, October 26.

Rabbi Paris came to the U.S. in the late thirties and was educated in public and Jewish community schools in Harlem. He received a bachelor of Hebrew Letters degree from Yeshiva University and was awarded a Yeshiva scholarship for advanced study of Talmud and Jewish studies in Israel. Upon his return to this country he became rabbi of Congregation B'nai Yisrael in NYC.

In 1965 Rabbi Paris visited Ethopia for nine months in order to make a further study of Ethopian Jewish history and current Ethiopia-Israeli relations. He described developments among the Falashas who claim direct descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, as does Emporer Haile Selassie the Ethiopian ruler known as "The Lion of Judah".

Rabbi Paris, an advocate of strong links between white and black Jewish communities, serves on the Commission for Synagogue Relations of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, at the Jewish Theological Seminary, does volunteer work for CORE and is now working for Haryou-act.

The Hillel brunch, which costs 50¢ for paid members at $1.00 for others will begin in the Student Union Commonwealth Room at 11:00 this Sunday. Rabbi Paris will speak at 11:30.

Drug and Mysticism Expert to Speak On "The Mystery of Consciousness

Dr. Allan Y. Cohen, a consulting psychologist at Berkeley, will be visiting the Amherst area to lecture on drugs and mysticism. Dr. Cohen will lecture Tuesday, Oct. 28, at 7:30 in the UMass Student Union Ballroom. The title of the lecture will be: "Drugs Mysticism and the Mind; The Mystery of Consciousness." Films will also be shown. The public is invited. There will be no admission charge.

Dr. Cohen is Assistant Professor of Psychology at newly chartered John F. Kennedy University in Martinez. He graduated with highest honors from Harvard College in 1961 and was awarded a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology by Harvard University in 1966.

While a graduate student and assistant of Professors Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert, he was involved in the early research with psychedelic drugs. Dr. Cohen took LSD and related drugs some thirty times before splitting with the "psychedelic utopians" and rejecting the use of chemicals as a means of personal growth.

Before moving to California, he was Director of Research for Potentials, Inc. and a Field Assessment Officer for the U.S. Peace Corps. During 1967 and 1968, based at Berkeley's Counseling Center, he functioned as a therapist and counselor for the University of California students.

On the Berkeley campus, he taught a course titled "Mysticism: Theory and Practice" while teaching "Humanistic Psychology" at the University of California Extension in San Francisco. At Kennedy University, he teaches courses on mind-altering drugs and on the enhancement of consciousness.

Dr. Cohen has been extremely active in drug abuse research and education, directing federally sponsored studies on the contemporary drug scene. He serves as a consultant in drug education to several national, state and local agencies, specializing in the area of alternatives to drugs. During 1968 and 1969, he has lectured extensively at high schools, colleges, and professional organizations throughout the U.S.A. and in Europe, discussing topics ranging from drugs and mysticism to student unrest and new trends in psychology. He has just recently returned from England.

He has authored several articles on various aspects of drugs and spiritual development, in professional journals as well as magazines and newspapers. Titles have included "Psychedelic Drugs and the Student, LSD and Spirituality, Inside What's Happening, and The Return of the God-Man." With Peter Marin, he is co-authoring a book for parents on drugs and adolescence (The Dying of the Light), soon to be published by Harper and Row. He has participated in scores of radio and television interviews, including the David Susskind Program and NBC's TODAY Show.

Recently, his primary interest has involved researching new discoveries in methods for unfolding consciousness. His most intense focus has been on the universal and practical approach of Avatar Meher Baba (Avatar means God-Man, Christ or Messiah), perhaps the most unique and authoritative spiritual master to live in this century.

Dr. Cohen twice has gone to India, visiting with Baba's close disciples. Currently, he is editing a book condensing Meher Baba's message and method for individuals who are seeking to experience their greatest inner potential.

Coalition Against Campus War Machine Invites Community to Meeting Tonight

The Coalition, formed last week to get the War Machine off the UMass campus, will meet tonight to discuss President Lederle's reply to its request for debates and plan future action. The Coalition which consisted originally of Greeks for the Coalition, MLK Council, Smile, and UMass SDS, has since grown to include Project 10 Students for the Coalition, and Philosophers for the Coalition. Philosophers for the Coalition is the first faculty group to join the Coalition.

President Lederle's acceptance of the Coalition's request for debates is the first major accomplishment of the Coalition. Lederle's reply will be a major topic of discussion at the Coalition's meeting tonight in the Student Union Plymouth room. However, the Coalition was not formed to request debates but to get the War Machine off campus. This goal is contained in the Coalition's four negotiable demands:

1. Abolition of ROTC.
2. All ROTC scholarships be replaced by University scholarships.
3. All war recruitment and recruitment by war industries be terminated.
4. All research at the University be reviewed in order to terminate all research for war and war industries.

The main topic of discussion at tonight's meeting will be planning strategy to implement the four demands. Also, the result of previous research on University involvement in war-related activities will be announced and new research planned. Project Themis, directed by Dr. Picha and Dr. Carver of the UMass Engineering School will be discussed.

The Coalition continues to organize new groups to join the Coalition. New groups joining the Coalition will be announced as they join. All student, staff, and faculty groups are invited to join. Tonight's meeting is open and all students, staff, and faculty are welcome.

God Is Out

You can't pray in school anymore. Prayer sessions in public schools are unconstitutional. So says the Supreme Court. Leyden, Mass. has been ordered to end prayers in classrooms by the state Attorney General. God has been evicted from public institutions of learning, even in the chaste state of Massachusetts.

Finally, thank Earl Warren!

Americans are hung up on God. He's everywhere, on coins, peace signs - a good place for him,her,it?, in songs, courtrooms, and even in war slogans.

Americans use God for everything. Billy Graham uses Him to condemn naughty books and movies, Lyndon Johnson used Him to ease the pressures of dissent and racial tensions - "Let us pray." Cardinal Spellman even used Him to justify killing little yellow men. After all, He's on our side.

Any people who use God in so facile a manner either value him very little or are very, very egocentric.

Guilty, on both counts.

The Constitution demands separation of Church and State. To pray to God in public schools leads to the identification ! children of God with country, almost as partners. The child prays, then pledges allegiance to the flag of "one nation, under God ('s protection)." The two entities, God and country, become identified as one, while man's reason and ethics, subjects relevant to institutions of learning, go unmentioned. Such mental association leads to the aforementioned problem of using God to justify any government action. If a child prays to God, in an organized school function, then attends publicly supported classes, church and state are no longer separate. In order for both religion and state to be free in thought and action, each must be independent of the other, in fact and in the minds of the people.

There is no reason why a child cannot mumble a silent prayer as to himself at school. Such acts are more heartfelt and sincere than organized prayers. Furthermore, any child who does not participate in organized praying may suffer opprobium from his fellows. Banning prayer protects the rights of all. One may pray or not, privately.

The Supreme Court's decision, and its enforcement in Massachusetts by Attorney General Quinn are of great importance. With God expelled from schools, they will hopefully orient themselves toward iconoclasm and developing penetrating thought processes in students. More likely, the absence of God from public schools will serve to make Americans less self-righteous and end our "holier-than-thou" racism and aggression at home and abroad. With God out of our schools, we may in time stop regarding ourselves as his surrogates in this world, for it is in the schools of the nation that the national character is built.

Bed - Fellows

In your "Dear Jon" letter of October 22, you termed Mr. Gerard a "frustrated rebel" for his scathing attack of President Lederle's insipidness. Let us for just a second examine YOUR basis for such a statement. It seems that your basis for defending Lederle is that last May he called Vietnam a "wasteful mini-war." I'm sure Mr. Gerard would not disagree with such a stance. The issue he was raising in his column is, however, where was Lederle on October 15? You, Mr. Editors, weren't dealing with Gerard's point. You attempted to justify Lederle's intolerable silence on October 15 by an alleged glorious quote from last May.

As editors of a free and responsible press, it was your duty to focus directly on the polemics brought out by Gerard. You "copped out." When I first read your defense, the first image brought to mind was Hubert Humphrey, standing on the dais of the Cage, last May. In the question-alleged answer period, numerous barrages were hurled at his cowardice and irresponsibility at the Chicago Convention. His retort and only defense was, "I've been brave in the past." I think you and Hubert Humphrey would make excellent bed-fellows.

The editorial attack on President Lederle published in the October 20th issue of the DAILY COLLEGIAN is a classic example of the phenomenon increasingly known as the "McCarthyism of the Left". This outpouring of abuse, of hate-filled gutter language and arrogant pronouncements of guilt is an insult to the whole university community: students, faculty and administration. It also discredits the DAILY COLLIGIAN that printed it and the cause it seeks to support.

The author if this editorial must bring under control his longings for unanimity and recognize that there are legitimate differences of opinion on Vietnam as on any other issue of American foreign and domestic policy both within and outside the university.

The DAILY COLLEGIAN and its editorial writers must also realize that they can claim no more respect for their opinions, attitudes and integrity than they are willing to grant others.

Unbearable Cage

I suspect that the members of this University community have become habituated to attending concerts in the Hicks Cage. I can see no other reason for anyone to consider such an experience bearable, let alone enjoyable. Friday night's Laura Nyro-Tim Hardin concert is a case in point.

Item: Those soothsayers of promotional stints, those masters of economic feasibility, over-sold the spacious structure. As a result, people were milling about through the entire performance of Tim Hardin - to such an extent that one had to struggle to hear the performer over the shuffling noises of the people looking for seats (I think I would have been even more irritated had I been one of those who paid to stand or sit on the sand floor).

Item: With the excess people milling around, the concert managers left the "wing" lights behind the stage on during the performances, destroying any possible lighting effectiveness and and forcing the ugliness of the accommodations upon the viewer's attention.

Item: The managers of the concert, after starting late due to the problem of overpopulation, decided to run the performances together without an intermission. As a result, many people who were not interested hearing Miss Nyro filed out of the Cage while she was performing. More shuffling, more noise, detracting and distracting from Laura Nyro's performance as it had done for Tim Hardin's just before.

Item: Countless restless souls in the bleachers on the Cage's sides decided to grope their way out of the concert by climbing over the backs of others, not considering that it might be at least considerate to both the performer (Miss Nyro) and the remaining audience (especially those being climbed upon) to wait for the pauses between songs for their clumsy exits.

Notice that I have not even mentioned the problems of non-comfort and poor acoustics which make the Cage unbearable as an auditorium. If I were to consider all these factors, I would have to conclude that the organizers of these so-called concerts care not at all about the enjoyment of their audience but simply about the affair being a financial success. Surely there are other auditoriums at this university which, while they might not accommodate as many people, might at least allow the concert to be as enjoyable as possible for those who do attend.

BURT FRANZMAN

Where's My Tiger (cat) ?

In the past month, I have counted half a dozen homeless cats wandering around the Southwest area. These felines represent a number of kittens, which, each semester, are imported into the dorms by students who want a furry, cuddly animal around to make their room more 'homey'. But, once its playfulness has gone, its fluff has been shed, its appetite has increased, and its owner has discovered the monotony of cleaning out a smelly catbox, the now-adult cat is chucked out into the community to depend on the generosity of the public.

I am, therefore, at a complete loss in trying to understand why someone would want to steal my FULL GROWN cat from Pierpont luggage room a month ago. I am even more puzzled as to why anyone would take TWO adult cats from there. Yet both cats vanished between 4 a.m. and Noon, September 23. Last Friday (October 17) I saw the other cat hanging around the Little Hatch in the Southwest area, but MY cat has still not shown up, although I have had notices in the Collegian all month and have offered a $5.00 reward for his return. I cannot believe a student would not read at least ONE collegian in a month, and, if by some chance HAD thought the cats homeless (why the the second cat let loose???), would see my notices and contact me immediately.

For the person who has taken my cat, you evidently have never lost a pet, or you would know the anxiety of not knowing if the animal is alive or dead; whether he's being fed nourishing food or starving; whether you will ever see him again. You would know the awful depression which sets in after someone has called to describe a different cat than yours.

I have paged every dorm on campus during the past month for Pushkin, my cat. I have posted notices in the Central area dorms. I have advertised my loss in the Collegian. I have gone to the Zoology department and the Nursing department to see if he had been sold for dissection. This letter is a plea to whoever has my gray tiger-striped cat to please, please give him back.

Guru's Disciple to Offer Mind Expansion for $35

On October first, some 400 people gathered in Mahar Aud. to hear Joseph Clarke, former disciple of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, and member of the Student's International Meditation Society (SIMS), speak on the philosophy and technique of meditation. He explained what one can expect through transcendental meditation.

Clarke will return to campus tonight at 8:15 in SBA 120 for another lecture, on the mechanics of the technique. Students who sign up will then learn how to meditate in the four-day period following the lecture.

A film major who graduated from Boston University in 1968, Clarke has traveled throughout New England and New York under the auspices of SIMS and the Cambridge Institute. This fall he is teaching at campuses in Connecticut, New York and Vermont, as well as here in Massachusetts. He recently completed three months of meditation with Maharishi.

Clarke claims it is not important whether people accept or reject the technique but "see its profound results." He says Maharishi has likened the thinking process and the mind to a vast ocean.

A thought, like a bubble in the ocean, has its source at the "bottom of the sea, then it grows in size and intensity until it reaches the surface".

Through meditation, one can reach down to where the "bubble" is formed - and transcend it.

He likens the search for the source of thought to any other form of science. Atomic scientists, for example, studied the molecular structure to find the greater energy which the atom has. Now they have reportedly isolated the even smaller particles of the atom, source of even greater energy.

In this search for greater energy, scientists are trying to find the source of everything, and thus "are stepping into abstract philosophy." Meditation is similar in its search for the source of thought, and thus for greater happiness.

The results of meditating are then greater happiness, but a greater capacity for learning as well. Physically the meditator, while using the technique, slows his breathing process, heartbeat, and experiences a greater sense of rest than deep sleep can bring.

If one can reach the source of thought through meditation, Clarke feels that the tension that man has within him that restricts his freedom of movement will dissolve. Scientific tests have shown that the temperament of man does affect his environment, that human tension is the likely source of wars and calamities.

If, Clarke says, only one per cent of the world population takes up meditation, the "likelihood of these types of catastrophies is eliminated."

Clarke says that those interested must fulfill three requirements. One, that he be available for the lecture Oct. 23 and the individual sessions the four following days. Two, that he contribute $35 if a student and $75 if a working adult to further the cause of SIMS. Three, that he put off taking drugs for 15 days prior to learning the technique.

He says this third requirement is necessary because Maharishi has discovered that drugs can bring added tension to the nervous system while it is trying to learn the technique. After one has learned meditation, one may, if he wishes, return to taking drugs.

HEW Has Plan For More Aid

The U.S. Office of Education announced today formation of a new administrative unit to help post-secondary two-year institutions of education qualify for assistance under Federally-supported programs.

James E. Allen, Jr., Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and U.S. Commissioner of education, said the new unit will focus directly upon such two year institutions as junior colleges, comprehensive and community colleges, vocational-technical institutes, and hospital schools of nursing, whose programs lead to associate degrees or to credit toward bachelors' degrees, upon transfer to four-year universities.

"The creation of this unit is another step forward in the efforts of the Office of Education to strengthen and encourage community and junior colleges," Dr. Allen said. "It's efforts will reinforce other programs to assist this important segment of our educational system."

Another recent focus on two-year colleges was the appointment of Marvin J. Feldman as Commissioner Allen's special assistant for junior and community colleges.

The new unit is called the Institutional Eligibility Unit - Junior Colleges and institutes. In addition to helping two-year institutions participate in Federal education programs, it will work closely with national accrediting and other associations concerned with these institutions. The unit also will certify academic credentials of foreign students who return home after study in two-year institutions in the United States, and will aid the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department in determining the eligibility of American two-year colleges to receive foreign students.

Frieburg Accepting Students For 1970-71 Program Abroad

The Atlantic Studies Institute of the University of Massachusetts in Freiburg, Germany, has announced its 1970-71 program for graduate students and selected upper division undergraduates at the University of Freiburg. Preceding study in Freiburg is a six-week orientation program which stresses German languages.

Students from all colleges and universities are invited to apply. A good command of German is necessary. The University of Freiburg requires all foreign students to pass its language proficiency test. The program is not restricted to those concentrating in German language and literature.

Courses are offered in the social sciences, arts and humanities, including comparative literature, political science, philosophy, history, music, English, economics, and German Language and literature. The UMass department of anthropology offers special European studies in anthropology through its Freiburg Field Program affiliated with the Atlantic Studies Institute.

Scholarships are available to outstanding students and Fulbright scholarships may be applied to participation in the Freiburg Program. University of Massachusetts students who receive financial aid may apply it towards their expenses in Freiburg.

The approximately $2000 fee includes round-trip transportation, room and board, tuition and fees. Not included are books, travel within Europe, and miscellaneous expenses.

Kentfield Elected Affairs Chairman

Last Monday, the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs elected Student Senator Robert Kentfield as Chairman for the 1970-71 school year.

Student Affairs is a standing committee of the Faculty Senate and is composed of nine students, eight faculty members, and the Dean of Students as an ex-officio member.

Topics suggested for Student Affair's consideration this year have included the formulation of a records security policy and the establishment of a student civil liberties sub-committee.

Kentfield represents the commuter constituency in the Student Senate and chairs the Student Matters Committee, a standing committee of the Student Senate.

Woodbury Sees Merit In Pass-Fail System

Robert L. Woodbury, assistant dean for special program development of the UMass School of Education, hopes the pass-fail system being used in all undergraduate and some graduate education courses this year will be successful.

"The extent to which the pass-fail system can minimize the grading system as the chief means of motivation for learning is the criteria for basing any decision concerning the success or failure of the system," Dean Woodbury said. "Some students will find it advantageous for learning while others just want an easy grade. It will take about six months before we'll receive the impact to determine whether the system has been successful or not."

Approximately 75 education courses this semester are being conducted on a pass-fail basis, affecting approximately 6,000 student courses. Students enrolled in those courses will receive no grades - they will either pass or fail. All students are eligible to take any number of education courses on this basis. However, certain graduate courses requiring a grade for portions of progress will continue to use the letter grading system, Dr. Woodbury said in an Collegian interview.

"Eliminating grades will give students more incentive to study an aspect of a course that interests them," Dean Woodbury said. "Grading is taken too seriously and used for none too healthy purposes. It operates contrary to the making of lifetime learners."

Educators have spent years experimenting with grading systems ranging from letters to numbers and the pass-fail system. So far, opinions vary to the type of grading system preferred. Woodbury feels grades cannot measure success.

"Most universities are set up with an overabundance of requirements to keep a person from sneaking through," added Dean Woodbury. "It keeps the best students from doing things they may have done."

For several years, he continued, the School of education faculty has wanted to experiment with the pass-fail system, but it was not until last spring that plans were made to operate under that system.

"The project involves the academic risks of an experiment," offered the assistant dean. "It's a risk of failure with an F or success with an A or B. We're taking the risks from which we hope the remainder of the University can profit.

Journalism Seminars Scheduled For All Day Program Saturday

The New England Society of Newspaper Editors and the fellowship program for journalists conducted by the University of Massachusetts will jointly sponsor a day of journalism seminars at the University on Saturday, Oct. 25.

The seminars will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a panel discussion on the roles of the media in political campaigns. Participants will be Carroll Robbins, managing editor of the Springfield Daily News, Robert Donahue, public relations director of WWLP-TV in Springfield; Nathaniel H. Akerman, a Harvard law student who wrote an honors thesis last year at UMass that studies the coverage of a 1968 Congressional campaign in the Massachusetts second district, which includes Springfield; Dr. John Fenton, professor of government at UMass; and Alvin F. Oickle, managing editor of the Greenfield Recorder and part - time tutor in journalism at the University.

At 1 p.m. a panel discussion will be given on fairness in coverage of minority groups. Participants include Dr. William Wilson, associate professor of sociology at UMass, who will discuss the problems of the black ghetto; John Robinson who has covered the Roxbury section of Boston for the Boston Globe, Don O. Noel, Jr., editorial page editor of the Hartford Times, and Dr. Barney Emmart, a former researcher for the International Press Institute who teaches journalistic studies at the University.

The program was arranged jointly by Editor Richard C. Garvey of the Springfield Daily News, who is chairman of the NESNE seminars committee, and Dr. Arthur Musgrave, director of the New England Newspaper Fellowships for Journalists that the University conducts in cooperation with NESNE. Journalists currently enrolled in the fellowship program of weekend classes will attend these seminars.

Forest Products Society to Hold Meeting

University of Massachusetts wood science and technology professor Harold B. Gatslick will be one of three keynote speakers at the fall meeting of the Northeast Section of the Forest Products Research Society Oct. 24 at the Morrisville, N.Y. campus of the Agricultural and Technical College of the State University of New York.

According to Dr. Gatslick, FPRS program chairman, "the burgeoning demand for low-cost housing and other necessary accessories such as furniture, makes it imperative that the wood manufacturing industry of the Northeast look toward attracting and maintaining the competitive quality of its personnel."

Technology today makes it possible to utilize almost all species in producing low-cost engineered products, components and modules to meet the challenge and at the same time, provide for economic utilization of the wood fiber produced in the Northeast. Using modern management techniques, the Northeastern forests are capable of producing the aesthetic beauty, the recreational needs for a growing population, and at the same time, provide wood timber, he added.

"The timber resources supports industry, which in turn pays for the multiple-use management of the forests rather than making it a taxpayers' burden," the UMass professor said.

Dr. Gatslick will be one of three speakers on "Our Personnel Needs Today."

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the program and registration should write: Fall Meeting-FPRS, Room 204, Holdsworth Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

Labor Center Awarded Grant

The Labor Relations and Research Center of the University of Massachusetts has been awarded a second grant by the Administration on Aging, a division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, to continue the development of pre-retirement programs for members of trade unions, it has been announced.

The grant of $41,226 for the year ending Sept. 30, 1970, follows the successful completion of the first year's grant. The purpose is to demonstrate the possibilities for pre-retirement education amongst a group of pre-retirees who are members of trade unions in the western part of Massachusetts.

The principal investigator, UMass Professor Harvey L. Friedman and Project Director Bernard R. Moreau, arranged the classes in Springfield, Holyoke, and Westfield. Subjects covered in the classes included Social Security and Medicare, health care, consumer problems, nutrition, use of leisure time, general finances, and interpersonal relationships. The program utilized community, governmental and university personnel as group leaders.

Statistics Released on GI Veterans in College

A study of the veterans who entered college during the first three years of the current G.I. bill indicates that while almost half enrolled as freshmen, about one in five enrolled for a master's or Ph.D. degree.

The Veterans Administration said that more than half of the G.I. college students indicated their field of study.

Of this group 31 per cent chose business and commerce, 14.5 per cent education, and 11 per cent engineering.

Next in order are the life sciences (agriculture, biological, medical, and health), under nine per cent; technical courses, less than eight per cent; and social sciences, under eight per cent.

Business is also popular among veterans who trained in schools below the college level. Electrical and electronic training is another popular subject among this group.

In apprentice and other on-job training under the G.I. bill, structural courses are the most popular.

These additional statistics on veteran trainees were revealed in the report:

* 26.5 was the median age at the time of entering training.
* 70 per cent were in their 20's.
* 8.5 per cent were over 35.
* 28 per cent had completed at least one year of college.
* 39 per cent had one or more dependents.
* 99 per cent were male.

The report was based on the three-year period ending June 30, 1969.

The VA invited veterans in or out of school to contact their nearest VA office if they have any questions about veterans benefits.

Veteran students were urged to inform the VA promptly if they have a change in their courses of study, address or number of dependents.

2. Any student NOW enrolled for first quarter, who DOES NOT plan to enroll for second quarter, must drop PE 100 before Nov. 12. He must then add PE 100 at the beginning of that quarter in which he chooses to complete a semester of PE 100.
3. Students completing their 2 credit requirement in one semester must add PE 101 to accommodate the second credit.
4. Students with physical restrictions MUST report to the Adapted Physical Education table before signing up for an activity.

Swimsuit Styles Reveal Womanly Figure

LOS ANGELES (AP) - California's body-baring swimsuits plunged beyond the bikini Tuesday as designers previewed a 1970 collection of wispy, "no-bra" styles that, as one put it, "let the girls shine through." Cole of California, Catalina and Alexa threw away padding, wires and camouflage in favor of a soft, slinky look which leaves ladies with bulges no place to hide them.

"The body beautiful is all important," said a Cole spokesman. "For the woman that can carry it off, rigid inner construction is out, passe, gone." Fabrics are knit, nylon, see-through crocheted wool, and wet look nylon.

Inspiration for the futuristic look is the past - specifically the 1930s. Catalina's "30s group" set of suits in shimmering designs slink straight out of Jean Harlow movies. Halter necklines are tied and draped; one-piece suits are backless with unfitted "teddy shorts" bottoms or flare "skater skirts."

Alexa's bikini bras are so shapeless they'll fit any size. A spaghetti tie joins two sides of the bra together, tied looser or tighter to change sizes.

"This is a return to peachy-looking beach clothes - the all-you look of the 30s," said a Cole designer.

Bashful bathing beauties are not totally forgotten. Almost every bikini comes with matching pants, coverup coats and even maxishirts. Cole's floor-length, zip-front funnel of nylon in bright orange is the slinkiest. Catalina covers its "second skin look" with billowing floral caftans and fringed Spanish shawls wrapped about the shoulders.

Delta Chi Heads UNICEF Drive

Over the next two weeks, Delta Chi fraternity will be organizing a campus-wide drive for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF). During this time a UNICEF booth will be set up in the Student Union lobby and will be staffed each day between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Contributions may be made either to people staffing the booth or to canvassers who will be visiting the dormitories.

Anyone who would like to canvass for UNICEF may sign up at the booth or call Delta Chi at 545-0156 or 545-0195: ask for either Paul Spigel or George Child.

UMass Off to UConn, On Road to Yankee Conf. Title

Last Year's Conf. Champs are Strong; Victories over UVM, Yale and Maine

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

In the very biggest Yankee Conference game of the '69 season, UMass is at Connecticut to do battle with a Huskie team that is sound both offensively and defensively and one which is hungry to maintain the Conference title it shared last year with New Hampshire.

VINNEY CLEMENTS, junior halfback for UConn, was All-E.C.A.C. last year after gaining 1029 yards. He presently ranks second in Conference rushing with 431 yards on 112 carries, and is also sixth in pass receiving with 11 catches.

UConn, with a 2-1 Conference record, is tied for second place behind the Redmen, who own a clean 2-0 league mark. Game time is 1:30 at Memorial Stadium on the Huskie campus in Storrs.

In '68, Connecticut won four games and lost six, but their Conference record was good enough to earn them one half of the "Beanpot," which is (as the oft-used term goes) symbolic of Yankee Conference supremacy. The Huskies want it all for themselves this season and their 3-1 overall record to date justifies their desire.

They opened '69 with a convincing 26-6 triumph over Vermont and followed it up with a striking 19-15 conquest of Yale. A disappointing 14-6 loss to UNH hurt them but they rebounded by whipping Maine, 28-7, last weekend and the Huskies now have their sites set on the invading Redmen.

UConn's offense is solid, although it did break down against New Hampshire. It is an attack which is prone to come up with the spectacular, long-gainers through the air or on the ground which break up close ballgames.

A single name comes immediately into mind when a review of the Huskie offense is mentioned. He is Vinny Clements, the 6'3-215 junior halfback who was All-E.A.C.A. sophomore of the Year in '68 when he had a total offensive output of 1029 yards, even though he missed two and half contests. Presently he ranks second in Conference rushing with 431 yards on 112 carries and is tied for sixth in pass receiving with 11 catches for 182 yards.

Complimenting Clements at the other halfback slot is 5'6-165 Mike Zito, also a junior. He is eighth in the Conference with 250 yards rushing so far. An injury kept him out of most of last Saturday's Maine game but he is expected to be ready for UMass. Depth in the running backfield is slim.

Rick Robustelli, a 5'11-184 junior is the Huskie quarterback. After a year of learning under departed QB Pete Petrillo, Robustelli has come on in '69 to complete 59 of 121 passes for 740 yards and seven touchdowns. His backup is Greg Gorski, a 5'11-175 sophomore.

Catching Robustelli's tosses will be a fine trio of receivers in the persons of soph flanker Keith Kraham, 6'1-195, junior split end Bob Nichols, 6'1-197, and junior tight end John Crisp, 6'4-200. In four games Nichols has caught 11 passes for 209 yards while Crisp has latched onto 20 aerials for 168 yards. Experienced second line receivers are at a minimum.

At center for Connecticut is senior co-captain Tony Casarella, 5'11-210, a very versatile athlete who played defensive tackle as a soph and tight end as a junior. He is flanked at the guard spots by juniors Bill Spencer, 5'11-217, and Tony Arcaro, 6'-218.

The tackles are both sophs. They are 6'3-225 Ken Pforr and 6'4-247 Bill Tuzil. Reserve strength in the offensive line is for the most part inexperienced.

Turning to the defense one finds the real pride of the Huskies. It is a solid and extremely consistent unit. Opponents have cracked it for only 42 points in four games for a lowly 10.5 average.

The two biggest UConn defensive stars, Chuck Goode and Ralph Tiner, play side by side at left tackle and left end respectively. Goode is a 6'7-250 junior while Tiner, the other co-captain, is a 6'3-196 senior who is considered to be one of the best in the East at his position.

The other side of the defensive front four finds 5'11-222 junior Ken Ryndala at tackle and 6'1-190 junior Bill Hogan at end. Helping out in the line will be Pat Colonna, a 5'6-228 junior.

At middle guard on the UConn defense is 6'1-220 Phil Doran, a senior and an able performer who was All-Conference in '68. Junior Vic Radzevich, 5'11-195, a Vietnam veteran, provides support at this position.

The line backing corps comprises junior Brian Hermes, 6;1-204, and sophs Jim Sproul, 5'11-195, and Rich Savage, 6'2-210. This area also lacks experienced depth.

Manning the cornerback positions are 5'8-168 senior Art Katzman and 5'9-190 senior John Passarini, a converted flanker. At safety is sophomore Bob Warren, 6'-190 and the standout of the defensive backfield. Tom Sweeney, a 5'9-175 junior, will be relied upon for reserve strength in the secondary.

Ironically the Redmen and the Huskies are currently tied for first place in the all-time Yankee Conference standings. Both teams have won 52, lost 31 and tied two contests in all these years of Conference play. Saturday's fray should alter this fact one way..or the other.

Chances are 'UConn's Huskies won't be smiling so much after Saturday's encounter with the Redmen!

The UMass Crew team opens it's fall season this Sunday with a 2.3 mile race on the Charles River in Boston. Coach Mike Faherty is pleased with their progress thus far and is confident that the team will improve on last year's 19th place finish in this meet. Their overall experience and strength should make this season the best they've had.

Unitas on Comeback Road

The John Unitas of old rode again Sunday in New Orleans in his most outstanding performance since he began to suffer elbow miseries.

"He was just beautiful out there," said Tom Fears, coach of the beaten New Orleans Saints to Ed Tunstall of the Associated Press after Baltimore rolled to a 30-10 victory. "Johnny looked better than he has on any of the films we've seen of him this year. I don't know whether you could call it his best game. He's had some pretty good ones in the past."

Unitas' performance of completing 20 of 28 passes for 319 yards and two touchdowns won him the Associated Press' nomination as offensive Player of the Week in the National Football League, an honor he has won many times in the past.

At the age of 36, Unitas stepped into the 1969 season determined to clear up doubts about his position as No. 1 quarterback with the Colts. He sat on the sidelines last year with an aching elbow while Earl Morrall led the Colts to the league title.

When Unitas was picking the Saints apart he went over the 300-yard mark for the 24th time, his first since Nov. 12, 1967. He used a variety of receivers and was awarded the game ball by his teammates.

All reserve tickets for Saturday's UMass-UConn game have been sold out. However, there is a limited supply of student tickets still available but which must be picked up in 255 Boyden before Friday. The price of these tickets is $1.50 and they won't be sold at the UConn gate. Any student who purchases a ticket must show his UMass I.D. at the gate.

Guarino, Sarno Receive Awards from 'M' Club

Andy Guarino, senior defensive tackle, and Ed Sarno, co-captain and senior fullback, were awarded Varsity 'M' Clubc Varsity 'M' Club certificates for being outstanding performers in the Rhode Island game. The awards were made by the UMass coaches at the weekly 'M' club luncheon at the Newman Center.

Guarino, pressed into service due to an injury to Bill Sroka, knocked down three passes, caused a fumble and threw the Rhody quarterback for a loss, while helping the Redman defense hold the opposition to under 100 yards in rushing for the second straight week.

Sarno gained 77 yards in 11 carries while scoring the winning touchdown on a seven yard run, in addition to turning in his excellent blocking.

The UConn game this Saturday which is supposed to be a virtual sell out in Storrs, was previewed by Head Coach Vic Fusia and assistant coach Bob Graham. Graham termed the Huskies an "all-around team." He called UConn receiver John Crisp "one of the best receivers in the East". Graham said the game would be a real challenge for the Redmen.

Fusia, in referring to Crisp, and Huskie star rusher Vin Clements, said, "We can't hope to stop completely the likes of those two. What we will have to do is to slow them up and contain them."

The coach made no bones about the importance of the contest. "This is perhaps the biggest game of the season for us, and if we hope to bring the beanpot back, we have to win it."

F.B.I. Investigates UMass Trustee

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

Martin Sweig, a UMass Trustee and legislative assistant to Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, is under investigation for alleged financial deals by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Since being appointed to the Board of Trustees in 1966 by Governor John A. Volpe, Sweig has attended only two board meetings.

It was learned yesterday that the Government's interest in Dr. Sweig's activities began with the prosecution of Jack McCarthy, a New York labor official, who is an alleged racketeer.

Last June 14, when McCarthy was sentenced in Federal District Court in New York on a conviction for false income reports, the Government prosecutor said there had been "a blatant attempt at influence peddling" to protect McCarthy.

In the course of the McCarthy trial, the prosecution drew testimony from Labor Department officials that they held an unusual meeting with McCarthy March 2, 1965, to consider his assertion that his income reports were in order.

Labor Department officials said at the trial that they had held this meeting only because it had been requested by "a Congressman."

The Labor Department confirmed today that the appointment with McCarthy had been requested by Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York, and by Dr. Sweig invoking the name of Speaker McCormack.

In the 1965 meeting at the Labor Department, McCarthy was accompanied by Nathan Voloshen, who was implicated in the S.E.C. suit as having intervened with Dr. Sweig in the Parvin-Dohrmann case.

INQUIRY BROADENED

It has been learned that the Justice Department's investigation into the activities of Dr. Sweig and Mr. Voloshen has broadened to include at least a score of unusual contacts with the executive branch and independent agencies.

It was not known how much of this was told to Speaker McCormack when he was first approached by the Justice Department about two months ago.

However, in suspending Dr. Sweig last Thursday, Mr. McCormack said that he was acting because of the S.E.C. incident and that he had been informed of this 'during the past 48 hours.'

Asked today about the reported time lapse, Mr. McCormack said, "While the matter is before the grand jury I don't want to get into this any further. I respect the grand jury and the secrecy. I will answer any questions at the proper time."

Dr. Sweig, who has been on the Speaker's staff for 24 years, had been known to identify himself on the telephone as Mr. McCormack.

The investigation, which also involves a Federal grand jury inquiry in Baltimore, is reported to have turned up several alleged contacts by Dr. Sweig with officials of the Bureau of Prisons in behalf of Federal prisoners.

One such incident is reported to have involved intervention by Dr. Sweig on behalf of Edward M. Gilbert, a former New York financier who was convicted of embezzling almost $2 million.

It has been learned that some within the Government say it has information alleging that Mr. Voloshen was paid $45,000 to $52,000 to intercede on Gilbert's behalf.

The Government is said to have testimony for grand jury presentation to the effect that Dr. Sweig telephoned the Bureau of Prisons to insure that Gilbert would be assigned to the Federal house of correction at Danbury, Conn. He was assigned to Danbury, where he remained until he was paroled last April 23.

Prof. Quits Fac - Sen Over Viet

By ROBERT HANCOCK
Staff Reporter

The Faculty Senate's decision to consider a motion concerning faculty opinion on the war in Vietnam last night resulted in the resignation of one of its members, George E. Zinsmeister.

Yesterday, when a motion by Ellsworth Barnard was introduced to the Senate, Senator George Zinsmeister rose in objection to consideration of the motion. When his attempt to block the presentation was defeated, Zinsmeister rose and left Thompson 106, where the meeting was being held, and later told the MDC that he had resigned.

Zinsmeister is an Associate Professor of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering and has been on the faculty since 1966.

When contacted, Zinsmeister said his resignation had "no demonstration value. It was just a personal decision."

Asked why he resigned Zinsmeister replied, "My main reasons are personal. Because of my religious convictions I do not feel I can conscientiously participate in an organization that discusses political affairs.' He is a Jehovah's Witness.

Despite his refusal to discuss the Vietnam situation in this political perspective, Zinsmeister said of the war and war in general, 'I am a conscientious objector. Any war, any killing that man would engage in, such as the Vietnam War, is not proper."

Is Man Worth Saving?

Ecologist Sees Environment in Danger

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

"Is the survival of man worth the effort?"

Dr. Robert Rienow, author of MOMENT IN THE SUN, and Professor at the State University of New York at Albany, posed this question last night at Thompson in one of a series of lectures on environment sponsored by the Sierra Club and Government Department at UMass. Dr. Rienow was speaking of the enormous, "herculean effort" which will be required of the citizens of the U.S. in order to stem the spiraling rate of the destruction of our environment.

The lecture was titled "Politics - Where the Showdown Is." It exposed the "exploiters" of our natural resources and beauty, those Dr. Rienow so aptly termed the ' ecological ignoramouses." Those who are willing to enforce ' environmental disintegration" for the "quick buck."

Dr. Rienow discussed the many governmental agencies that continuously destroy natural and healthful environments for ' special interest" groups. He cited relationships between Federal Atomic Energy Commissions pushing for increased atomic power plant facilities, and Utility interests, when the effects of thermal radiation on local rivers and bays have not been closely considered.

The attempts by the Federal Reclamation Bureau to flood the Grand Canyon to help the irrigation interests. The Federal Forest Service's attempt to free millions of acres of virgin forest land for "rape and destruction" because of an alleged lumber shortage.

It seems that certain lumber interests export so much lumber for quick and high profit that our national needs could need replenishing. Rienow cited 2 1/2 billion board feet going to Japan each year for profitable sale. The lumber companies expect the Government to exploit more land for their own selfish needs. The only ones who lose in this type of deal are the citizens of the U.S. Rienow quipped that "bureaucracy in the U.S. seems to have a standing commitment to do violence to our environment."

Dr. Rienow went to quote estimates by scientists that, unless something drastic is done, in ten to twenty years, "the earth will be unlivable.' One scientist is emphasizing the effect of all the garbage and smog in our air, estimates that in ten years the amount of sunlight reaching the earth will be cut in half. In twenty years he predicts ' global gloom."

The most important point that Dr. Rienow wanted to drive home was that all the new revelations in the area of conservation and the preservation of a livable environment are not enough to change the trend towards environmental disaster. It will take a great "shocking" of our legislative process to appropriate money to make the bills already passed work. It will take a great effort to keep man alive.

There will be another lecture on Ecology and Environment Nov. 13 featuring the well known ecologist, David Brauer.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - Top U.S. military leaders oppose a one-sided cease-fire in Vietnam on grounds it would enable enemy forces to move unopposed into positions from which they could strike serious blows at American units.

Senior generals also dislike the idea of a mutual cease-fire, saying they have no faith that the enemy would keep its part of the agreement. These uniformed leaders contend the enemy's record justifies their misgivings.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, speaking at a "National Day of Prayer" breakfast, said Wednesday that Americans need a "spiritual quality" to guide them through periods of stress.

(AP) - Arab guerrillas from Syria swept into neighboring Lebanon yesterday, attacked three border posts and abducted 24 frontier guards in retaliation for a Lebanese army crackdown on the commandos. Apparently carried out with Syrian cooperation, the raid was bigger than any launched by the guerrillas against Israel since the end of the 1967 six-day war.

NEW YORK (AP) - The leadership of the country's biggest Lutheran denomination announced Wednesday it rejects as unacceptable the "political philosophy" of James Forman's Black Manifesto.

PARIS (AP) - Henry Cabot Lodge took the unprecedented step yesterday of refusing to speak at the Vietnam peace talks.

NEWARK, N. J. (AP) - A defiant cry of secession has been raised in Vailsburg - a predominantly white, middle-class section of Newark.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two more television networks announced plans to cut their rates for political ads yesterday as a Senate subcommittee ended hearings on a bill that would force the industry to offer far bigger discounts.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Four Army sergeants invoked the 5th Amendment more than 100 times yesterday as Senate investigators sought to connect them with irregularities possibly running into millions of dollars.

TUNIS (AP) - Mongi Slim, a former president of the United Nations General Assembly, died yesterday. He was 61.

Slim had returned to Tunisia Oct. 5 after treatment in Washington's Walter Reed Hospital since June 23 for viral hepatitis complicated by heart trouble.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - The 1969 Nobel Prize for literature was awarded Thursday to Samuel Beckett, the Irish emigre playwright of the absurd, whose work was described as "a muffled minor key sounding liberation for the oppressed."

Beckett, 63, has written both plays and novels. Two of his most widely known plays premiered in the United States: "Waiting for Godot" and "End-game" in which two characters spoke their lines while sitting in trash cans.

Explosion Rocks Texas City

TEXAS CITY, Tex. (AP) - Two gigantic explosions shook the Union Carbide plant in this Texas coastal city Thursday night, near the spot where a holocaust in 1947 killed more than 500 persons.

The explosions, about 10 minutes apart, rattled windows and doors 25 miles away at Kemah, Clear Lake City and the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Texas City is south of Houston and north of the island city of Galveston, across Galveston Bay from the latter city.

In April 1947, the French freighter Grand Camp exploded near a Texas City dock setting off fires that caused one of the greatest holocausts in world history.

Ambulances and all sorts of emergency vehicles rushed to the scene. At Galveston County Memorial Hospital, the emergency ward swung into feverish activity as ambulances came and went.

"It shook this place like a piece of paper," a service station attendant a half mile from the blast scene told a reporter.

Justice Dept. Split Seen Over Draft Law Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) - A split evidently has developed in the Justice Department over the validity of the draft delinquency regulations.

Briefs filed in the Supreme Court giving the government's position are in the name of Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. Other department officials also are listed, but Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold's name is noticeably missing.

The solicitor general, third-highest official in the department, normally signs government briefs in the high court. Griswold replied with a terse "no comment" when asked by a reporter why he did not officially support the government's position in two current cases.

The cases test whether the priority induction of young men who burn or destroy draft cards to protest the Vietnam war violates their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and expression.

Additionally the cases test whether the draft regulations have been improperly stretched to punish protesters by Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the Selective Service director.

Mitchell argued in the briefs that tearing up or burning a draft card is illegal, whether or not the purpose is to protest U.S. war policy.

He said such protesters are being stripped of student and other deferments and put at the top of draft lists not because they are dissenters but because they are violating draft regulations.

The delinquency regulations are not punishment, he said, but simply "compel cooperation with the Selective Service on the part of all draft-eligible young men."

Moreover, he said, they serve the "non-punitive purpose" of sustaining the morale of non-delinquents. The realization that they who shirk their duties do not profit from their delinquency and are required under the law to 'go first' helps ease the hardship of compliance for those registrants who discharge their responsibilities," Mitchell said.

Griswold, former dean of the Harvard Law School, has signed department papers in previous draft cases and his expressed views appear to conflict, in part, with Mitchell's.

Griswold did not specifically approve the reclassification to 1-A of draft protesters. And he did not endorse Hershey's October 1967 memorandum counseling draft boards to use the delinquency regulations against young men who engage in "illegal activity."

But he said the regulations constitutionally authorize the priority induction of registrants who turn in their cards.

Fac-Sen Discusses Ph.D, Creates a New Major

By BOB HANCOCK
Staff Reporter

The Faculty Senate met yesterday and took action on proposals concerning implementation of the Ph. D program in the School of Education, registration, a Human Development major.

Professors Anthony and Quint of the School of Education wondered how the proposal to establish a Ph. D. program in that school had been given to the Board of Trustees, who approved the program, without the approval of the Faculty Senate as protocol dictated. This was the jumping off point for general criticism by these gentlemen of the Ph. D. program.

Anthony introduced a motion that would have had the School of Ed. refrain from implimentation of the program until they had submitted a concrete program for faculty approval.

Associate Provost Jeremiah M. Allen took responsibility for failing to bring the matter to the Senate's attention, at the same time he noted that this was represented to him as the offshoot of a program already approved by the Senate in 1963.

To deal with the problem the Senate sent the motion to the Academic Matters committee which will make a recommendation in the upcoming meetings.

The Senate, in dealing with the question of improving registration procedures, set up an Ad hoc committee. The committee will consist of four faculty members, two undergraduates selected by the Student Senate, and two graduate students selected by Graduate Student Senate, and the committee will make a report by March 12, 1970.

A new major has been approved for the School of Home Economics, and will be called Human Development. It is an interdisciplinary major "concerned with all maturational and environmental effects upon developing individuals." The fields this major will relate are "Psychology, Sociology, Anatomy, Physiology, Nutrition, Education, the Arts and Anthropology."

Nixon Pledges to Rebuild US Merchant Marine

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon proposed to Congress Thursday a 10-year, $3.8 billion Merchant Marine program to "restore this country to a proud position in the shipping lanes of the world."

It represents an increase of $1 billion over the present rate of spending.

Administration spokesmen, in explaining the program, said it changes the methods of ship construction and operating subsidies and is designed to produce 30 new ships a year when the program gets in full swing in the third year.

The federal maritime administrator, Andrew Gibson, said there would be no additional expenditures in fiscal 1970 but letting of contracts will begin.

Rocco Siciliano, undersecretary of commerce, said the construction subsidy will be paid directly to the yards instead of through the shipping lines. He estimated that the shipyards would have to spend $500 million in improving their facilities for the program.

The President said in his message that if the shipbuilders do not meet the challenge to lower costs "then the administration's commitment to this part of our program will not be continued."

The President's program calls for reducing the present ship subsidy from 55 to 45 per cent of construction costs in the fiscal year 1971. Then it would drop two per cent a year until it levels off to 35 per cent.

Another major change is in the ship-operating subsidy. Nixon proposed that this subsidy "should be continued only for the higher wage and insurance costs" which handicap American vessels in foreign trade. It would no longer cover maintenance and repair.

ROTC at UMass - Slow Change

Army ROTC at UMass has 145 students this fall. That compares with 301 at the beginning of the 1968 semester. The Air Force ROTC has 220 this year compared to 270 last Fall.

By RICHARD L. LANE '70

ROTC HAS BECOME a source of much controversy over the past few years. Last year students on several occasions tried to disrupt ROTC drills at UMass. The controversy is once again about to erupt when the Faculty Senate Committee's special report on ROTC is made public. (MDC photo by Wayne Lilyestrom)

On April 9, three hundred Harvard students seized that university's main administration building, demanding an end to ROTC on the campus. Both Tufts and Boston University will have Air Force ROTC removed from their course curricula soon. Yet while these and other schools in New England and the country have seen much controversy and crisis on the ROTC issue, the University of Massachusetts (the only college or university in western Massachusetts with Army, Navy or Air Force ROTC) has remained relatively unscathed.

True, there has been some trouble. Last fall a number of demonstrators attacked and attempted to disrupt ROTC drill activities. During their protest, they were assaulted by three former UMass Army ROTC cadets. The university's chapter of Students for a Democratic Society, which contributed many of the protestors, has stated that the ROTC issue should be "one of our main activities." Furthermore, the UMass Student Senate has debated the issue of academic credit for ROTC heatedly.

But for all verbal debate and limited protest over it, ROTC on the UMass campus has not turned into a violently explosive issue. The local SDS chapter is small and relatively unorganized and the Student Senate debate simply resulted in the whole issue being relegated to a special study committee which will be heard from sometime in the future.

NEEDED; QUESTIONS

John Masland and Gene Lyons, in their book Education and Military Leadership, state: "The present ROTC programs have been accepted for too long without asking some really critical questions." They go on to point out that ROTC courses between the world wars "occupied a place in the minds of the students similar to that of required physical education. During this period the number of institutions with ROTC units was limited and the enrollments in the advanced course relatively low, so that total impingement on higher education was minimal."

Now, however, with the war in Vietnam, ROTC programs have taken on a new significance both for the military service and for institutions of higher learning. Considering just the Army program, 17,000 cadets received their commissions following their college graduation last June, and the ROTC program accounts for 52 per cent of the Army's junior officers. There are presently 268 schools with the Army program and 176 with the Air Force program. Not surprisingly, ROTC programs now occupy a considerable portion of the attention of the students and make a sizeable impact on college life.

The sine qua non of an ROTC program is that it be an accepted part of the academic scene. It cannot accomplish its purpose if it is cast in the role of intruder. This was recognized at Harvard; the military took the initative in scheduling an early discontinuation of ROTC there when it was clear that a significant number of people not just a radical minority favored the withdrawal of the program.

OTHER ISSUES

It is never easy, and it is sometimes impossible, to determine the true response to ROTC on any one campus. The debate over the program vies with other controversial issues for the attention of the campus and the public; military personnel, not to mention other concerned individuals, cannot help but be confused about prevailing opinions and relative positions.

In an attempt to sort through the rather haphazard criticisms raised on college campuses, Maj. William E. Muhlenfeld writing in Army magazine identified these four basic arguments against ROTC:

The question of academic credit for ROTC courses is the most frequent subject for debate. Although this issue has been a source of contention for many years, it has become more pronounced recently.

The ROTC curriculum is accused of lacking "intellectual content." A distinction is made here between "education" and "training", and between "intellectual" and "professional." The implication is that academic credit should be offered for the former and not the latter. According to the April issue of Army Digest, schools that object strongly to giving academic credit to ROTC do so because the courses are "not pertinent and germane to work credited toward a degree."

STUDENT VIEW

Of a similar nature is the criticism that ROTC is contrary to the philosophy of higher education; it teaches techniques of violence, whereas a university should be devoted to reason and enlightenment. Academia's traditional function is to inspire critical thinking about man and his society, aloof from partisan or superficial considerations. But according to an editorial in the Daily Collegian (and also published in twenty-eight other college daily newspapers), "It is impossible for colleges and universities even to pretend to perform this unique role if they are also subsidizing the brutal militarism of the outside world."

The common criticism of those who protest ROTC credit is that, "The ultimate design of it all is efficient warfare, which is killing." That was how one former Navy ROTC cadet at Duke stated it. According to the previously cited editorial on ROTC credit, this concept of killing is "totally hostile to the principles of academia."

In the December 1968 issue of The Progressive, UMass faculty member Milton Mayer states that ROTC bears no resemblance to learning. "ROT-cee may not be the only non-intellectual program on the campus, but it is the only one that is by universal and traditional definition anti-intellectual."

UNDER CRITICISM

The military instructors themselves, as well as the course material, have come under fire. In most cases, these officers do not have advanced degrees and are "not by temperament scholars." Furthermore, the rank of Professor of Military Science, which is awarded by the military and not the school, has come under scrutiny. Army Digest has stated that "Some educators feel sincerely that only the colleges or universities should have the right to designate professors. Some feel the entire idea of military training on campus is in conflict with the purposes and ideals of the American system of higher education."

A final argument used against ROTC is that it is an outside influence which "contaminates the integrity of the institution."

The ROTC Program has deep roots in American history, going back to the idea of a "citizen army." Since 1862, all land grant colleges, such as UMass, have been required to offer ROTC or at least a course in military science, under the Morrill Act. Compulsory ROTC, however, has declined from 68% to 30% in those schools offering the program. Basic ROTC enrollment has also suffered a significant drop. For the Army, the total cadet number dropped from 159,000 to 1965 to 150,000 in 1968, and the Air Force has been sliced in half: from 100,000 to 50,000. Clearly then, there is reason for concern and ROTC is reacting.

REQUIREMENTS

An attempt is being made to raise the academic qualifications of the military officers assigned as ROTC instructors. The Army has sent out as many with master's degrees as they can find, and it has formally designated the degree of Master of Arts as a condition of appointment for professors of military science.

More important, both the Air Force and Army ROTC are attacking the curriculum problems. Each has adopted somewhat similar plans, allowing course substitution of university electives for ROTC topics of study. Reforms aim at giving the student more flexibility in devising his own program, lightening the military teaching load, and easing scheduling. The Pentagon plans accrediting more academic courses such as economics, psychology and political science. Purely soldierly skills may be taught more at summer camp.

Experts say ROTC must meet four criteria to satisfy itself and its critics: (1) ROTC instruction must provide a vehicle for the evaluating of cadets in terms of commissionable material; (2) ROTC must be worthwhile for its own sake, without such incentives as avoidance of the draft; (3) ROTC must be so structured as to avoid conflicts with other student interests - graduation, scheduling, credit overloads and imbalances; (4) ROTC must be accepted by administrators and faculty, because a principal value of academic credit is that it serves as tangible evidence of the program's value in the eyes of the institution and serves as a stamp of approval from that school.

Slowly and unsurely, ROTC has begun to change. Traditionalists and revisionists have collided over the issues. The huge problems of bureaucracy, staffing, money and resources have all contributed to further delay.

Meanwhile the existing 268 units in ROTC, each reflecting the history and philosophy of its institution and the background of its student body, must find acceptable solutions to the problems unique to their individual campuses.

Campus Views Differ on Role of ROTC

While ROTC is an issue that frequently comes to public attention, it is representative to the academic community of a much broader and deeper split in the philosophies of education.

Simply stated, there are two sides: those who hold that a university's primary function is to provide opportunities for intellectualism and those who argue that a university must also provide opportunities for vocational preparation. The opponents link such courses and programs as restaurant management and fashion with the military programs.

Here is a sampling of views as taken from statements reported by the UMass alumni magazine:

John W. Lederle, UMass president:

"Instead of a West Point and an Annapolis military force dominated by the old school ties of the special academies, we have an input of bright, able people from land grant and other institutions providing the substantial majority of officers through ROTC. No harm is done to anybody who is opposed to the military industrial complex if some students at this institution want to be in ROTC. This is a community where people should be permitted to pursue the things they want to pursue."

John A. Brentlinger, assistant professor of philosophy:

"To me, there is a more general problem than that of the military, a question of what a university's purpose is and how widely it can extend itself without undermining its primary aims. Traditionally, the university is a place where knowledge is pursued for its own sake and where the great cultural achievements of man are studied and taught. The public service of a university should consist of its contributions to public knowledge and culture. It should not offer itself as a training ground for trades just because the public may consider them useful. Society needs a place with such a high purpose; its soul and sanity depend on it."

William C. Venman, assistant dean of administration:

"While the services themselves have been at fault by not being more responsive initially to changes, I think people opposed to ROTC have also been at fault; they have by and large taken an unquestioningly critical position."

Isidore Silver, associate professor of general business and finance:

"I think I will propose in the Faculty Senate, when the ROTC committee returns its report that the university abolish ROTC on campus. It's an interesting question whether we legally can do it, but let's assume that we can. The best solution would be to allow the Army to train its people on Army time during the summer and pay people for attending. . . I would have no objection to the university's cooperating with the Army by furnishing information to incoming students about ROTC and about the courses a student will have to take in order to be eligible."

Cynthia J. Olken, '70, vice-president of the Student Senate:

"A student's right to take ROTC and the automatic granting of an academic credit for ROTC courses are two different things. The issue that has concerned the Student Senate is the fact that ROTC is virtually outside the university's control. We want to know why it can't go through the regular channel like other departments."

Frank A. Singer, professor of accounting and member of the Faculty Senate subcommittee on military studies:

"Critics argue that ROTC is not in keeping with the spirit of a university; moreover they argue that it is not in keeping with university practice, which is something else again. I think these critics tend to talk about some idealization of a university which isn't reflected in this university or any university I know of. In fact, there is no evidence that the military conducts courses which are different in an academic quality from those conducted by many other disciplines on the campus."

Subsidy System Not Approved

A meeting Tuesday night, the Amherst Housing Authority voted down a move to have rent subsidies for the town, in spite of a survey report that recommended such rental assistance.

The full Authority voted 3-2 against the subsidy plan as recommended by a report made by members of the Housing Authority Bernard Moreau and William Mellen.

The recommendations were for a subsidy system that would have paid as much as $92 a month for rental assistance to a family of 7 with an income of $7,600 renting a $225 a month house or apartment and paying $133 of the cost themselves.

Survey noted that according to state criteria Amherst had an average annual wage of $4,051 below the county average of $4,300.

If the measure had been approved, Amherst would have been the first community in Hampshire County with rent subsidies.

Proponents claim that because of the rapid growth of the town housing has been very expensive. The special town meeting warrant for Nov. 3 carries an article put in by petition to have rent control for Amherst.

Co-chairman Moreau and Mellen presented a report a subcommittee made a study of a rental assistance program for Amherst.

The report reads: The Amhset Housing Authority was voted into existence by the town meeting in 1958 after a survey, conducted by a committee appointed by the board of selectmen indicated the need for low-rent housing for the elderly.

' Proper steps were taken to apply to the State for official approval, and the Housing Authority planned and built 30 units for the elderly at Chestnut Court in Amherst.

"Since that time the Housing Authority has been the administering agent for Chestnut Court, and the units have been well cared for the well-being of the occupants looked after in an exemplary fashion.

"In recent months, the Housing Authority has become aware of the possibility that low-rent housing may be needed in Amherst. Three main factors contribute to this possible need: the growth of the town and the University, the rise in the cost of living, and the rapid rise of rents in the area.

"At the last meeting of the Authority on Sept. 30, the committee was appointed to study the State rental assistance program. This report contains the finds of the committee, and includes a summary of the provisions of the program and figures indicating how the program might be utilized in Amherst.

"SABETY, SERVICE, SINCERETY"

New Book Co-edited by UMass Instructor

A University of Massachusetts professor is a co-editor of the seventh volume of "The Journals and Miscellaneous Notebooks of Ralph Waldo Emerson," just published by the Berknap Press of Harvard University Press.

Co-editors of the volume are A. W. Plumstead, associate professor of English at the University of Massachusetts, and Harrison Hayford, professor of English at Northwestern University.

This volume deals with the period of Emerson's life from 1838-1842. In addition to Emerson's introspective writings, the volume contains his observations on his readings, on his country during the presidential campaign of 1840, on slavery, on art and nature, on religion and the need for a new understanding of its meaning, and on love.

Emerson's relations with his friends--including Bronson Alcott, Margaret Fuller, Thoreau, Samuel Ward and William Ellery Channing--are also reflected.

During this period, Emerson gave three lectures and published his second book, ' Esseys," which included some of his greatest work, "Self - Reliance," "Compensation," and "The Over-Soul." The journals were a workshop for the essays, and serve as a guide to Emerson's creative processes. Many of the entries in the book are being published for the first time, including experimental lists of topics for "Essays" and possible the earliest draft of his poem "The Sphinx."

Emerson considered the journal one of the most important types of literature. He considered his own journals not only as an ' artificial memory," but "a living part" of himself. He later wrote, "The man is only half himself, the other half is his expression."

Graduate Pay Raise Loses to Inflation

Director of placement at Northwestern University, Frank S. Endicott, conducted a survey of the starting salaries offered by 208 business and industrial concerns to 1969 college graduates. The study showed that graduates received an average of $720 a month, 5.4% more than did the previous year's graduates.

The highest paid were those with bachelor degrees in engineering, receiving $818 a month, while those graduating in liberal arts received $657. In 1960, the UMass graduate in engineering received $523 a month while the liberal arts graduate received $405 a month. the 1969 figures represent an overall increase of approximately 40%.

Potential graduates cannot take these figures at face value. According to the Sept. 23 issue of U. S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT, one who earned $10,000 a year in 1946 would have to earn $18,000 in 1968 to live as well as he would have twenty years ago. Of this figure, he would need $6,505 just to pay for the price increases while $3,305 would be for taxes.

According to Prof. Robert Hinckley of the UMass Economics Department, a college graduate can expect to have an annual salary of nearly $15,000 by the mid-1970's. By the next decade, average salaries of $30,000 a year after a few year's experience will be commonplace. However, Prof. Hinckley pointed out, prices will most likely rise at about 3% per year. Therefore, income in terms of real purchasing power will be less.

In the Feb. 17 issue, the magazine's economic unit took the administration's desired 6% annual wage increase and placed it against the increases in taxes and inflation. A man with a family of four earning $10,000 a year would only receive $99 out of a projected $600 increase in salary. The remainder of this increase would be equally divided in price increases and taxes.

Seniors can possibly expect salaries of approximately $800 to $900 a month, extrapolating from previous annual increases. However, all predictions for the 70's depend on how estimators consider the Vietnam War. If the war should end, the annual price increase may drop to the rate of 3% a year, as Prof. Hinckley stated.

The government in its slowness to ease inflation or to initiate tax reform continues to provide no relief for the worker and makes the rewards of a college education no more than minimally profitable. In the end, students and workers can not find any consolation in their government as they wend their way through high prices and increasing taxes.

This year's college graduates and those who graduate in coming years are left with this fact, although a college education may provide a means to a higher standard of living, it does not guarantee a high standard of living.

Spielman Announces New Appointment

Dr. Ernest M. Buck has been appointed Assistant Dean of the University of Massachusetts College of Agriculture, it was announced today by Dean A. A. Spielman.

Dr. Buck will work with high school guidance counselors, community colleges, and junior colleges in improving the career opportunities in the food, agricultural and natural resource sciences.

He will also assist the administration and department heads in improving the educational program for undergraduates in the College of Agriculture. In addition, he will continue as chairman of the Educational Policies Committee.

A native of Harford, Conn., Dr. Buck received his bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut, his M.S. degree at North Carolina State University, and his Ph. D. degree in food science from UMass, where he has taught since 1957.

Dr. Buck is the author of many technical and extension publications, with subjects ranging from the preservation of meat products to muscle physiology.

Dr. and Mrs. Buck have four children, and live in South Amherst.

Course Evaluation

Every year, due to the expansion and reform of curriculum, it becomes increasingly difficult for students to learn about the educational opportunities available to them. The University is in desperate need of a publication which would help inform students of the quality and desirability of the courses now available to us. One possible type of publication is a course evaluation catalogue.

By surveying student opinion of the value of specific courses, this catalogue could accomplish two tasks. First, it could provide us with a reliable critique of what a course has been like in the past. This would enable us to find and choose courses through more substantial sources than rumors which have been passed from friend to friend.

Secondly, a course evaluation catalogue could be an invaluable tool in curriculum reform. Before we, as students, can demand changes in our curriculum and core requirements we must be able to tell the faculty and administration which specific courses and teachers are undesirable. Once we have a reliable evaluation of which courses and teachers have little to offer we can work toward having them removed. But we can not act until we know specifically which courses and teachers our actions are to be directed against.

A group of students, sponsored by the Senate Academic Affairs Committee, have already begun work on a catalogue which would evaluate every course and section in the College of Arts and Sciences. However, if this catalogue is to succeed many more people from every department will be needed. If you are interested in helping, please call Robert Boumel at 772-0453.

Free and Responsible

Monday evening, Oct 20, at 8:15 p.m., Dr. Herbert Aptheker, one of the most distinguished, celebrated and controversial figures ever to speak on this campus, delivered a lecture before over 300 people in SBA 120. The lecture was sponsored by the Orchard Hill course in American Radicalism. When I delivered the article announcing the lecture to the Collegian office on Sunday, Oct. 19, your News Editor personally promised me that there would be at least a reporter, andprobably a photographer present at the lecture. I don't know if anyone from the Collegian was there or not, but no one could have learned of Dr. Aptheker's lecture from either Tuesday's or Wednesday's paper.

I think that those who brought Dr. Aptheker here, this community, and Dr. Aptheker himself deserve at least an acknowledgement of so dramatic a failure to fulfill the published pledge ("A Free and Responsible Press") of this newspaper. It is as a result of such sloppiness and so unsound a sense of relative newsworthiness that on many campuses around the country alternate campus newspapers are flourishing.

It is fair to say, I think, that had Arthur Schlesinger Jr. spoken here Monday evening, the headline in Tuesday's paper would not have read, "Beatlemania Hits -- Is McCartney Dead?"

An Engagement in Trivia

To the Editor:

I would like to take objection to the statement attributed to me in Tuesday's Collegian article concerning Paul McCartney. I have no information regarding a comparison of voice prints that may have been made and, in fact, I have spoken to a friend of mine who is engaged in research of speech analysis who doubts that such comparison would even be valid.

I am not at all convinced that Paul McCartney is dead. If the Beatles have found a replacement that looks, sings, and plays like Paul McCartney and writes music of the genre the Beatles have produced since "Sgt. Pepper," his death is almost insignificant. I do not believe that the Beatles themselves could carry out such a hoax at the expense of Paul McCartney's character, notwithstanding the illegality involved in concealing his death.

It is really sad, however, to think of all the energy being wasted by University students searching for innuendos in the Beatles' lyrics, dismembered faces on their posters and mythological death signs on their album covers. There must be more worthwhile pursuits for intelligent human beings to engage in .

Natty Blue Business

LETTER D P 6

Here they come, all dressed 'n natty blue:
Crass ones, dull ones, obeisant ones,
No other kind will ever do.

Here they come, looking out for you:
Inspecting faults and only faults
No matter what you are or do.

Here they come, alma mater dear:
Enforcing laws and college codes
Where no laws really should appear,

What kind of school do we have here
That hire pigs for parking lots,
Where student piggies work each year?

What kind of brains make up the rules
That punish harmless fun and games;
For which their clerks are witting tools?

What kind of mind accepts such crimes
That drains the poor and powerless;
That pays patrol-boys wasting time?

Here they come, all dressed in natty blue:
Pigs where piggies need not be,
Who only live by screwing you.

And so that there will be no mistaking the message let me interpret my own poem. And, to begin, observe that it is a poem. To be sure, it is not good literature, but it is literary, i.e., it is not based on exhaustive research and documented findings. What is important, however, is not missing footnotes here but missing intelligence somewhere on campus. My point: UMass doesn't need pill-boxes and it doesn't need policemen. At least not in any number. Three officers working staggered shifts could handle the needs of this University. The rest are superfluous.

The administration policy of maintaining a force of police is an insult to the student body and faculty of the school. Conceive of what the blue-coats do: everything from arresting a perfectly harmless and entertaining prankster at the homecoming football game to ticketing cars of those unfortunate enough to need the services of the infirmary. This is sick. And for participating in such mindless cruelty, they are sick. For not protesting University policy here, we are sick.

The school should take steps now to retire the house police. The police aren't needed. We had one month of parking without their dubious service, for one example, and things went smoothly. Until there is a demonstrable need for protection of persons against criminal types, there is no need for money to be spent supporting overgrown patrol boys. Instead, take those dollars and do something useful with the cash., i.e, expanding existing parking facilities.

My poem is intended to call attention to the absurdity of an academic community becoming an employer of police and inventing absurd laws for those police to enforce. The poem is probably bad poetry, but the police situation is undoubtedly bad. The poem, fortunately, can be read and thrown away. The police and the unnecessary laws they enforce, unfortunately, will be here until the university gets out of the law-enforcement business.

For The Sake of Children

Attention Students for Welfare Rights! Up to date this is what the deserving welfare recipient, in Holyoke, is up against:

1. Freeloaders who are taking advantage of the welfare system and thereby creating an incredible misallocation of money, goods and services. This misuse of the public's resources not only takes away from the benefit of those recipients who are worthy of this aid; but also (I have seen many instances) acts to hasten the degeneracy of the abuser.
2. The feelings of the working people whose anger was aroused by the local WRO when they marched on the city hall in Holyoke.
3. The WRO agitators who were responsible for the march and whose talents consist of "psyching" up a group to act on an irrational basis (this is easy especially when the target of the organizers or agitators is the Spanish speaking community).

During the WRO march on the city hall, one deserving welfare mother, who is physically ill and has eight children to care for, spoke out against the obvious farce of a parade and was later beaten and hospitalized by the other "psyched" recipients.

The local WRO agitators that day helped to lower the social standard of the welfare recipient, aroused the hatred of the working people toward those recipients and helped to deteriorate the moral fiber of our community. I believe that those agitators did not "flunk out" that day but really succeeded in what they set out to do.

I have lived in the Holyoke area all my life. While working at various types of employment in this city, I was frequently in close contact with the welfare recipients and have come to understand the delicate situation in this city. I am also sensitive to the college community. Last June, I graduated from a local college and was in contact with students from all walks of life. I have developed what I figure is a fair understanding of what motivates various students to act as they do.

All I can say to you forty students is that if you impose your idealistic madness on this city or any other, the ill effects will be felt long after you have matured and settled down in suburbia to start a family of your own.

As far as you Students for Welfare Rights ever coming to truly understand the situation, I'd say you don't have a prayer. Judging by your article in the Holyoke Transcript you appear to be the type of student who lives in a fairy tale like world, far removed from life's many trials. If you and your followers come to Holyoke like 'soldiers of fortune" (to play with people's lives) you will only further act to polarize the community.

Students for WRO,in the Transcript's article I see where you promise to protect other students who become actively involved with this city's problems against harm of any sort. This is very brave of you; but when the sun goes down and you return to the pleasant surroundings back on the campus, the hatred which you will have stirred up will be felt by the innocent people in this city. Those who stand to benefit the least by your presence are the deserving welfare recipients and their children. It will be difficult for them to carry the burden that you will become. Are you Students for WRO really motivated by the desire to help, or by the need to be vicious? For the children's sake - think it over.

Tit for Tat

I went to the football game last Saturday
Only saw half - cause I got chased away
The guy behind me had diarrhea -
Of the mouth that is.

He'd been on the oil it was plain to see
Though that's no excuse for such ignorancy.
He was just tryin' to prove to the guys -
That he's a big man in everyone's eyes.

The girl he was with you could tell was high class
Cause with each four lettered word she giggled most crass.
His buddies were brave as they all swore at me
Too bad they reside where the pigs should be.

He ran at the mouth like the Mississippi
Showin' everybody - he weren't no sissy
Big bad and brave - what a nighty man
Looked like my old drill sgt sittin' on the can.

The Redmen won and that's what counts
But I hope I'm big enough flounce,
Cause maybe someday he'll be in my seat
His mother and father beside him so neat.

And I'll be sittin' in the row behind
Runnin' my mouth with no control from my mind.
Maybe he'll turn around to me --
I'll smile and laugh - then say something

Grad Students Vote on Housing

Members of the UMass Graduate Student Senate met last night and unanimously voted that two qualifications be added to the proposals regarding married student housing which were presented to the Board of Trustees last Saturday night.

Members requested that:

1. The bids for the private capital plan and for the housing units of the university plan to be let simultaneously, or as close to this as feasible, rather than in the two step method proposed. Unless both sets of bids are simultaneously available, it will be impossible to adequately compare the two plans as to rentals, commuting distances and other critical factors.
2. In all policy matters regarding married students housing - such as bid specifications, site plans and acceptability of bids - the senate be consulted at every stage in the decision process to insure that every effort is made to obtain the lowest possible rents.

This action followed a report of the Housing Committee by Senate Vice-President Arthur Teixeira, who spoke on Friday's meeting of the building and grounds committee at which the proposals regarding married student housing were drafted and approved and on Saturday's Board oftrustees meeting where the recommendations were presented and accepted.

At the latter meeting, UMass trustees voted to reverse a long standing policy with regard to married student housing and build 200 housing units. It was further decided that the University would ask for bids from private developers to construct low-rent apartments by next fall. If no acceptable bids are received, the trustees stated they would authorize the University Building Authority to request bids for single unit prefabricated apartments to be constructed on a 31-acre tract between Puffton Village and Presidential Apartments for occupancy by next fall.

Teixera as well as Senate President David Yelton said the fact that the university was considering dealing with private developers came as a surprise. Both senate leaders stated that prior to Friday's meeting, neither had been informed that the university was considering such a plan.

Teixera further pointed out that the consideration by the university trustees of the construction of multiple as well as single unit prefabricated apartments was another development new within the last couple of weeks.

Two weeks ago the Graduate Student Senate passed a resolution requesting the Board of Trustees to authorize the University Building Authority to proceed with construction of a trailer park for married students on that 31-acre tract. The passing of the resolution followed a report by Planning Officer Jack Littlefield and Dean Arthur Gentile, who recommended, as a result of an intensive study, the construction of such a park as the cheapest, most feasible, short-range solution to the married student housing problem.

Teixera pointed out that since that resolution was passed, UMass officials have recieved estimates from area developers on the cost and feasibility of constructing multiple unit prefabricated on that site. Estimates indicated not only that more units could be accommodated on that tract than trailers, but also that site development cost might be lower than that estimated for the construction ofa trailer park. It would be possible, he stated, rent for such units would be lower than the $140 per month rent estimated for each trailer.

Linkletter Seeks Tighter Drug Control

WASHINGTON (AP) - With President Nixon and congressional leaders as an audience, television personality Art Linkletter made an impassioned plea Thursday for the government to step up and broaden its activities to combat drug abuse.

Linkletter whose daughter committed suicide two weeks ago, urged an educational program aimed at both parents and youngsters.

He suggested strict surveillance of the drug industry to see that manufacturers more closely control the distribution of their products to keep them out of the hands of youngsters. "I would like to see every company be required to keep a record and know where every pill goes," Linkletter told the President and Senate and House leaders during a two-hour meeting.

Linkletter described the death of his 20-year old daughter, Diane, youngest of five, he said, because he wanted to alert parents and legislators on "how this drug society has poisoned the minds and will continue to dry the minds of our young people."

Linkletter's daughter leaped to her death Oct. 4 in what the performer said was "a depressed state from bad LSD trips." He said she had experimented with the drug only once but the bad trips would occur again and again so that she thought she was losing her mind.

"Diane was not a hippie, not a drug addict, not a nut," he said. "She was a typical young person and like all young people, she was curious and wanted to experiment."

Nixon called the legislators to the White House to urge them to take prompt action on the administration's drug control proposals and measures to fight organized crime.

"We tend to blame the kids" for the nation's mounting narcotics problem when "the government has fallen down on the job," Nixon said.

He said passage of his recommendations would give the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs and the Departments of Justice and Welfare the "necessary weapons to attack this whole problem."

"We have to have modern weapons," Nixon said. "We're trying to deal with a problem with laws that were passed as far back as 1914.

Linkletter criticized the record industry because, he said, almost "every one of the top 40 is an invitation for the young to cop out, to groove or to trip."

Linkletter said he hopes to persuade friends in the record industry to produce songs with the same beat and language but which will tell of the evils of drug abuse.

Lindsey Ahead In N.Y. Race

NEW YORK (AP) - Mayor John V. Lindsay was far in front of Democrat Mario A. Procaccino in the first installment of the Daily News straw poll on the mayoral race, reported by the paper Wednesday night.

The first sample of 3,000 voters throughout the city showed Lindsay 44 per cent, Procaccino 33, Republican-Conservative John Marchi 20, with 3 per cent undecided.

The News Poll, which hasn't been wrong on a mayoral race since it began in 1928, will add 3,000 more straw votes at three day intervals up to the Nov. 4 election.

The newspaper's first sample showed a big gain for Lindsay over his showing in an Oliver Quayle poll taken for NBC in late September. The Quayle poll had Lindsay 35 per cent, Procaccino 33, Marchi 12, with 20 per cent undecided.

Senate Approves Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate unanimously approved Thursday a bill hiking veterans' education benefits by 46 percent but a key Republican predicted President Nixon may veto it.

Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware said that if the measure clears a Senate-House conference committee in its present form, "the President will have no choice but to veto it and I think that veto will be sustained."

SUG Board Reviews Tax

By SUE SPATRICK
Staff Reporter

At the Student Union Governing Board meeting last night, the board considered a temporary ten dollar fee increase for next semester's student union tax.

The reason given was, that the $15 tax per semester, paid now, goes into a bond issue fund to help pay for the new student center. This leaves the union with no extra operating costs. The S.U.G. board intends to investigate the bond decision and how it was made.

The union is now operating at a deficit because of various factors such as pay raises, and needs more money to keep all of its facilities operating. However, the S.U.G. board is looking into possible alternatives.

The issue was referred to the financial committee and will be discussed at an open meeting Nov. 4 at 7:30. All interested students are invited to attend.

RSO Questionnaires Due November 7

All R.S.O. organizations must fill out the questionnaire which will be distributed next Monday by the Student Senate Activities Committee, and return it by November 7 to the designated ballot box in the R.S.O. office. This questionnaire will provide the Activities Committee with pertinent data on groups, such as current officers, group activities, etc. The Committee hopes to correlate the information into a booklet of all R.S.O. organizations, to be distributed early next year.

Also planned by the Activities Committee is a comprehensive review of all group constitutions and executive orders. Because of unlocked files, many of these constitutions are missing and the legal status of some groups is unknown. If the questionnaire is not filled out by Nov. 7, the group will run the risk of having its funds frozen or being declared inactive. This withdrawal of R.S.O. status will be accomplished before next semester.

Any group seeking R.S.O. recognition, or wishing to alter their present constitution, should fill out a questionnaire, and indicate on it what these current legal efforts are. One questionnaire will be placed in each R.S.O.'s mail box and extras will be available next to the ballot box in the office.

Among the benefits of becoming an R.S.O. group are eligibility of seeking funds from the Student Senate, use of the Student Union's rooms and facilities for group's meetings and activities, and use of the accounting services offered by the R.S.O. office staff.

Phi Beta Kappa Scholar Visits Campus Next Week

Professor Walter J. Ong of the English Department of Saint Louis University will lead a colloquium on the poetry of Gerard Manley Hopkins at the 10:10 class period on Monday, Oct. 27, in Memorial Hall, Professor Ong, a Jesuit, is Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar and will be on campus for two days.

Hopkins, whose poetry was written in the latter part of the nineteenth century but not published until beginning in 1918, is now considered the forerunner of and a major influence upon much modern poetry. Classes in modern and contemporary poetry are invited, as well as other interested students.

At four o'clock in the afternoon on Monday, Fr. Ong will talk on the topic, "The Audience Is a Fiction, Too." He has written and lectured widely on problems in communication as seen in psychological, literary, religious, and anthropological terms. Students in rhetoric, journalism, speech and creative writing will probably be interested, as well as those from other fields.

In the evening Fr. Ong will give a major public address in Mahar Auditorium at 8:15. He will deal with the development of verbal communication from oral cultures through the age of printing to the contemporary age of electronic media. His topic will be "The End of the Age of Literacy," and the lecture begins at 8:15 p.m.

Precisionettes March

The Zayre's parking lot was the scene of hilarity and hijinks on October 4, as the Precisionettes, the women's drill team, held a car wash.

The event, officials say, was a success, and the receipts taken will be used to help finance future competition trips.

The team assembled the next day, to march in the Annual Fall Foliage Parade, held in North Adams, Mass. After the parade, the team was treated to a picnic at the home of Miss Ellen Berry, one of the team members.

Once more representing the University of Massachusetts, the team marched in the Homecoming Parade on October 17. Especially enthusiastic about that particular appearance were the 12 newest additions to the team, selected only weeks earlier. Donning their snappy blue and white uniforms again the next day, a smaller marching team gave a pre-game performance at the Homecoming game against the University of Rhode Island.

RULED BY MOMENTARY GUSTS OF FEELING?

WOMEN

"What business have women turned of forty to do in the world." In the early 19th Century this question exemplified public opinion regarding married as well as unmarried women. The whole socially contrived feminine, weak-willed, baby machine genre of females whose goals and very methods of reasoning validate the question of their usefulness even today.

There is something desperately wrong with the feminine way of thinking that results in indolent, pleasure-seeking women whose way of life gives nothing valid or worthwhile to society as a whole; but rather women who propagate duplicates of themselves, thereby inculcating new generations with a vacuous mode of existence. Women must allow themselves to be educated in a more rational and reasonable way in order to develop the ability to comprehend concepts with more far-reaching significance and value than the current most fashionable way of dressing.

To regard women and their duties solely from a sexual point of view, reduces both men and women to a state of moral degradation in which the prime objective in a woman's life becomes the necessity of catching a husband. From infancy this idea is impressed upon her, but while the whole of her education, dress, manners and thoughts must be subordinated to this one object, she can never openly avow it. Progress has been made in this area in the sense that the 20th Century's so-called liberated woman can and does blatantly avow her intentions of capturing the best man available.

Making marriage a goal in itself while never openly acknowledging it creates a conflict between the real and the avowed objects of life that gradually eats away the spontaneity and openness of a woman's character. In this way, womanly virtue becomes a long series of pretences. Delicacy and sensibility become the paramount aspects of a woman's personality, and all deeper intellectual pursuits are simply cast aside in favor of creating the image of the feminine, docile creature. Reputation becomes a goal in itself, replacing, in a given situation, carefully thought out virtuous motives. While man is taught to dread the eye of his particular God, women are taught to dread the eye of man. Even religion emphasizes an hereafter which excludes marriage thereby excluding the usefulness of marriage-minded females.

Woman's subordination and consequent perpetual obedience weakens a woman's understanding as well as her ability to cope with any kind of important situation requiring an immediate decision. The husband must then be all-knowing and unbelievably capable of handling all the important decisions that inevitably arise in the course of a lifetime. This is an unfair and indeed inhuman burden to inflict on any one human being. It is a woman's duty to share in the responsibility of promoting a relatively happy existence for her family or herself if she chooses to remain unmarried.

Reason is the one thing man not woman has above brute creation, and virtue is the one thing that distinguishes one man from another. In reality women lack both. In order for a woman to accept the responsibility for governing her own life, she must be educated in a way that implants the realization of certain basic human rights and duties. Logical reasoning is unfashionable in women, because the femininity of frivolous, intuitive, and totally illogical, reasoning has come to be an accepted and expected part of the female mind.

Nineteenth as well as twentieth century society has promoted the moral degradation of women by condoning a separate and totally feminine value system. With the ultimate goal of their lives being marriage, how can women be expected to pursue the kind of self-realization sought by men and why should they? Moral decisions are viewed separately by men and women. So separately in fact that it is hard to believe that one value judgment can be interpreted so drastically differently by two beings endowed with the same brain material. By remaining ignorant of the reasoning processes and the kowledge a man willfully acquires a woman cannot be expected to understand the far-reaching goals and desires of vital, intellectually stimulated men. Her desires are superficial and petty in comparison to the man's. She is satisfied by the material gains she has been taught to cherish, the white house with a picket fence, the adorable well-behaved children, and the attentive husband. She is oblivious to the fact that his important intellectual activities are rarely shared with her, but rather she is appeased by an occasional caress that she has been taught to accept as the ultimate gratification in a happy wife's existence and why not.

To accept the right to determine the important decisions that mold one's life is to accept the full responsibility for those decisions. A woman can be educated to think for herself rather than to have male forces determine every aspect of her life for her. As a more complete human being she then becomes an understanding companion to her husband in place of the vacuous doll that was merely a cherished sexual plaything and why not?

The acceptance of basic human rights necessitates the acceptance of the accompanying duties. Only in this way can a woman realize her full potential as a human being. This realization must in turn obliterate the coquettish behavior that serves to gratify the sensualist at the expense of never realizing a true friendship that develops from compassionate tenderness.

The entire process of preparing for marriage includes the preservation of a woman's beauty. The absurdity inherent in the elaborate costuming and careful cosmetic application is the realization that the passage of time will destroy this superficial appearance, and if the woman has not developed an intellectual beauty and understanding of life she will be destroyed as well. In this case the question of the usefulness of a woman over forty is entirely justified.

This superficial sensibility to all that is beautiful, i.e. in an obvious sense, leads women to become the victims of opinion. Their understandings neglected; consequently they become the prey of their senses, delicately termed sensibility, and are blown about by every gust of feeling. Their conduct is based on events that are calculated to excite emotions. Feeling instead of reason becomes the determining factor for their actions and their opinions are formed not by deliberation or progressive views, but rather by contradictory emotions. Understanding is required in the regulation of a family in addition to being a prerequisite for a deep fulfillment in marriage. The attainment of this necessary understanding is not possible when women have their minds corrupted by transitory but overwhelming emotions.

A woman needs a deep seated philosophy to be able to be content in the performance of daily menial tasks, for if she believes her reason for being to be a slave to her husband her very character is ruined beyond repair. A progressive, more constructive attitude toward her place in life would enable her to attain a more meaningful existence. As a companion and helpmate to her husband rather than a subservient, weak-willed creature, she can perform the tasks in a happier state of mind due to her awareness and realization of herself as a human being first, and a wife second.

The initial passionate impact of love cannot be maintained for the duration of a marriage. Thus over a period of time the superficial plaything of a wife loses any tenuous connection she might have had on her husband's mind. It is of the utmost importance to look beyond the present moment and to try to render the whole of life respectable by forming a plan to regulate a friendship which only death can dissolve. "Friendship is a serious affection - the most sublime of all affections - because it is founded on principle and cemented by time. In a great degree love and friendship cannot subsist in the same bosom; even when inspired by different objects they weaken or destroy each other, and for the same object can only be felt in successions. The vain fears and fond jealousies, the winds which fan the flame of love, when judiciously or artfully tempered, are both incompatible with the tender confidence and sincere respect of friendship." (Mary Wollstonecraft.) The realization of a true, compassionate friendship in a marriage is possible only if the woman is willing to forego her traditional role of the enticing bedmate, and is willing to replace this image of herself with a much more complex, more intellectualized image. There is no room for concern with superficial appearances in such a friendship. There is instead a desperate need for the kind of development of a woman's mind which enables her to comprehend and assimilate lasting, intangible values into her life.

"Let woman share the rights, and she will emulate the virtues, of man; for she must grow more perfect when emancipated, or justify the authority that chains such a weak being to her duty." The amazing thing about this statement of Mary Wollstonecraft's, which was made more than one hundred years ago, is that it applies to women today. The subservient attitude society has inculcated in women under the guise of "femininity" is still overwhelmingly prevalent. The opinion that illogical, emotionally determined behavior is an integral part of the female mind must be obliterated before any constructive attitude regarding a woman's intellectual fulfillment can evolve.

Women's Liberation

A group of women from the University campus and the Amherst area are holding weekly meetings to share their experiences and views in re-examining the roles of women in this society. We are trying to understand the reasons why we hold the values we do, and we are questioning whether the present social system is adequate to meet our needs for self-fulfillment. The group provides both a context in which we can test diverse ideas and a basis for publicizing and implementing our views. We meet every Thursday at 5:30 at the Martin Luther King Council Office in 207 Hampshire House and women with concerns or interests they'd like to share are welcome to come.

Beauty?

"God hath given you one face, and yet you make yourselves another." Hamlet, Act III, scene 1.

Every week the beauty industry puts out a new product to cater to woman's vanity. It's getting so that it's hard to tell where the goop ends and the real girl begins.

Beneath the cover of a new stretch wig or fall, the tinted contact lenses, the fluttering of false eyelashes, and the bright smile made up of capped teeth a girl could walk into her own home unrecognized.

Along with the cosmetic companies making a fortune, manufacturers of small electrical appliances have found their own golden rainbow. With lighted make-up mirrors, facial saunas, electric hair dryers, electric rollers, hair brushes, and manicure sets, a power failure could prove a major disaster for the female population.

The old maxim "You have to suffer to be beautiful" is never more true than now. As you sit under a hot hair dryer for hours or while you have your hair pulled and tugged at during a streaking session or while you cringe during an ear piercing ordeal, you must wonder if the suffering for the beautification of the American female is worth it.

Booters Hope to Continue Winning Ways

By RAY ESONIS
Staff Reporter

Currently sporting a 3-2 record, and fresh off the heels of a 2-1 victory over Rhode Island, the UMass soccer team plays host to Tufts this Saturday at 11:00 a.m.

Tufts is perennially one of the top teams in New England, and this season should prove no different. The Jumbos have posted victories over Boston College, Clark, Brandeis, and Trinity, while losing to Wesleyan, Harvard, and Worcester Tech. While Tufts defeated Trinity by a 5-4 margin, the Redmen lost to that same team two weeks ago, 2-0.

Tufts is an extremely offensive minded team, and have a big, strong front line. It is comprised primarily of Ashim Oyesham and Art Warlier, both Africans, along with two Cape Cod natives, Jack Harrison and Donny Foster. These are all strong, experienced players, and are capable of providing the stiffest competition the Redmen have had up to date. Another important man in the Jumbo lineup is goalie Dick Hansen.

In recent years, UMass hasn't had too much luck with Tufts. In 1967, the Redmen were outscored 2-0, as was the case in 1968 by the score of 3-2. Tufts is a member of the greater Boston League which includes B.U., B.C., Brandeis, and M.I.T. Last year they shared top honors with Boston University.

Coach Peter Broaca was once again very pleased with the winning effort over Rhode Island. The defense proved to be the key, as it had in several of the previous games. Broaca stated, however, that he was still "concerned" with his offense. He felt that they had several scoring opportunities which they failed to capitalize on, and this in turn put pressure on the defense. Broaca cited Rick Matuszczak, Paul Slack, Tom Malone, and Marc Cantor for their fine performances against Rhody.

Although the Redmen were finally recognized this week in the top ten by receiving several votes, Coach Broaca is afraid of complacency. "We can't look past the Tufts match even though Worcester Tech and UVM are next on the schedule. We've got to play each game as it comes.'

Physically, the Redmen are as healthy as possible, with the possible exception of Duane Brown who hurt his ankle in a scrimmage this week.

Streaking Harriers Face Test Meet Rugged Holy Cross Runners

UMass streaking varsity and frosh harriers put their hot streaks on the line on the cold heights of Worcester, against Holy Cross, this afternoon. Holy Cross, a team with top material, got off to a slow start this year but have steadily improved and are now close to the running form that most felt they would be at the beginning of the season.

Leading the charge for the Crusaders will be HC's own Caped Crusader, Art Dulong. The record setting runner from Randolph is having a good season, being undefeated and running a time (23:37) on Franklin Park's five mile course that is a minute faster than any other in New England, on that course, this year.

Another senior, Art Martin, is presently the number two man at Holy Cross and is beginning to run true to form as the season grows older. The Crusaders have a pretty fair five man attack with some sophomores from last year's New England championship frosh team carrying much of the responsibility.

Contrary to the HC squad, the U-Mass attack has depth in its top ten men and its with this depth that the Redmen hope to overcome the Crusaders.

Ron Wayne supplied Dulong with his biggest New England competition last season losing only 23 seconds in the dual meet and placing second to Dulong in the New England Championships. Again Wayne looks like Dulong's top opponent. He has been improving steadily after an ankle sprain and cold slowed him up early in the month.

Not only Wayne but the entire team has improved greatly over the last two weeks. Leo Duart and Tom Derderian have been consistent over the last few meets as has been Larry Paulson who has also improved a lot timewise. Senior Dave Evans has run good races but has been inconsistent because of injuries. However, Coach O'Brien feels Evans will come on strong now that he has broken the injury jinx. Inexperience, according to the coach, has caused the inconsistency in sophs Bruce Blackburn and Don Dunsky but he thinks they will also come around as the big meets near.

UMass depth runs down through a close knit group that keeps improving steadily. Steve Whicher, Bill Donaldson, who turned in a top race against Springfield, Jeff Scagnelli and Bob Benshimol have been pushing the top seven and occasionally have broken in to that group. Also ready to break into the top ten against Holy Cross are Bob Jayes, Don Brigham, Al Mangan and Dave Eiben, all who have been there before. Injuries will force Mike Cowles and Joel Fox out of this race.

The varsity has two tough weeks to go starting with tomorrow's meet. The Yankee Conference meet will be next Saturday at home then a tough Central Connecticut team will come to UMass followed by the New Englands on that weekend. Coach O'Brien feels that from now on every one must be consistent. "The time for inconsistency and getting over problems has past. The success of the whole season depends on how the runners can meet the challenges of the next two weeks. Our depth must back up our front runners if we're to be successful."

The Little Redmen, who have steamrollered every one in sight continue their campaign at Holy Cross. They to need consistent performances from their closely grouped runners as they aim for the remaining meets and the New Englands for the frosh don't run the Conference meet.

UMass Invades UConn for THE BIG ONE

Conf. Title at Stake Huskies Talent Strong

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

UMass will find out if they have come all the way back from the debacle of last season, when the Redmen meet the University of Connecticut in THE Yankee Conference football game of the season. Gametime for the clash at Storrs, which is a sell out, will be 1:30.

Besides a well-rounded, versatile Husky team to worry about, UMass must contend for the first time this season with injuries in key spots. Tackles Bill Sroka and Mike Cooney, center Dave Levine and safety Steve Rogers all will be sub par physically for the game.

The Redmen will have to come up with their best effort of the season to retain their perfect conference record intact. And one thing that will have to be improved is the passing attack. Granted the UMass rushing attack has been awesome at times. But the difficulty the offense has had in scoring more can be traced to the inconsistent aerial attack.

Coach Vic Fusia realizes this more than anyone else. And he says, 'We are a running team, but we have to have some passing to complement the runs. Our receivers and passers are both competent and capable of good performances. They simply haven't been doing the right thing at the right time. They will have to come through this week.'

There is nothing to complain about as far as rushing is concered. The Redmen have four of the top ten rushers in the Yankee Conference. Pat Scavone with a 351 yards and six yard average, is fourth, sophomore fullback Dick Cummings, with 315 yards is fifth, Ed Sarno, is ninth with 224 yards and Jerry Grasso with 205 yards is tenth.

One other guy in the top ten is UConn's Vin Clements, who is second in the Conference with 431 yards. Clements in addition is among the leaders in pass receiving and scoring. And Fusia terms him, "possibly New England's best runner".

Fusia has a high regard for the rest of the Huskies. He calls UConn quarterback Rick Robustelli, "an effective passer," end John Crisp, 'the type of receiver have to double cover' and tight end Bob Nichols as a "real surprise".

He, in fact, thinks highly of the whole UConn aggregate as being top notch. "They are a well balanced team that makes few mistakes. They have a lot of threats which they use frequently."

UConn may be boosted by the return of speedster Mike Zito, a long gain specialist who has been injured the past few weeks.

UMass will again alternate quarterbacks Ken Hughes and Tim Adams. Also, Fusia intends to use third quarterback Mike Marchev in spots. He'll need everybody he has for this the biggest game of the season.

"We will have to put everything together to win. We have to play our game. This is the game that will reflect what will happen for the rest of the Conference race."

"You know,' Fusia went on, " when we started this season, our goal was to win back the Yankee Conference title.

Jocks Cop IM Football Crown

The Independent champion Jocks captured the campus intramural football title last night, by defeating the dormitory title holders, the Chadbourne Marooms, 29-6, in the cold of the lighted intramural fields.

Leading the attack for the winners was quarterback Ken LaChapette. LaChapelle passed for four touchdowns and two extra points while setting up one score with a 47 yard run.

The Maroons had the first opportunity to score, early in the first half, when Brian Shannon intercepted a LaChapelle pass. Maroon quarterback Rich Alyward connected with Les Sherman on a pass to bring the Maroons to the Jock 10 yard line. However the Jocks stiffened and held on downs. with Brester breaking up a pass in the end zone on fourth down.

On the next play, LaChapelle hooked up with Wayne Archenault on 50 yard touchdown pass. The extra point was no good.

Two plays after the kickoff, the Maroons tied things up. The score came on a Alyward to Jack Shaughnessy pass.

The Jocks, however took the ensuing kickoff and drove for what proved to be the winning score. LaChappelle set things up with his 47 yard scamper from scrimmage, and then hit Davidson on a three yard touchdown pass. Jim Collins caught a LaChapelle pass for the two point conversion.

The winners marched again for a score late in the first half with LaChapelle passing to Fred Stiles on a 10 yard score. LaChapelle ran for one point and gave the Jocks a 21-6 halftime lead.

LaChapelle added icing to cake in the second half as he threw three yards to Stiles for a score. The Jocks also caught Alyward in the end zone for a safety.

In other action, DeSesto scored twice and Catarius once to lead fraternity champion Phi Sigma Delta to a 18-7 win over the Adams Smashers, and took third place. A Starsiak to Pacheso pass was the only Smasher's score.

Barry Hasn't Leg to Stand On

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rick Barry, star of the Washington Caps of American Basketball Association, will undergo surgery Friday to remove a cartilage in his left knee, the second time within a year he has had to have such an operation.

Barry expects to be out of action for at least six weeks but the 6-foot-7-1/2, 217-pounder hopes to be playing in early January for the Caps, who last year won the ABA championship as the Oakland Oaks.

"I can't play with the leg the way it is," he said.

Crewmen Row with East's Best

Final preparations for this weekend's Head of the Charles Regatta have been made by the UMass crew club. Boatings and seatings have been determined and only the tedious work of timing and strategy remains.

Cold weather and bad winds have played havoc with this week's workouts but this situation doesn't appear to be a factor.

UMass' junior varsity boat will enter the Mayor's Cup race for junior Eights. Many varsity eights from other schools such as Princeton, Dartmouth, Harvard and MIT elect to enter all their boats in the junior races in this regatta.

UMass will necessarily find the competition tough. The Redmen will counter with a young, strong boat, but inexperienced in places.

Kevin O'Brien, a sophomore, will low stroke, Bob Wenlan and Scott Cline will be rowing their first race.

The JV boat: Bow, Rick Jones; 2, Scott Cline; 3, Dan Sola; 4, Bob Weindan; 5, Dave Richard; 6, Jack Fadden; 7, Steve Malone; Stroke, Kevin O'Brien; Cox, Jerry Ahern.

The Redmen varsity will be entered in the premiere event of the day - The Boston Globe Challenge Cup. Highly touted varsity eights from Harvard, Northeastern and Syracuse have drawn the press reviews and the favorites' roles.

The UMass eight is experienced, has good size and is physically well. Last year's frosh coach Kurt Betchick is active again and will stroke the boat. One soph, Jack Appel, has coached the boats. Otherwise it's all juniors and seniork.

The Varsity Boat: Bow, Charles Leonard; 2, Charlie Sheldon; 3, Tom Mone; 4, Doug Machean; 5, Ron Stoltz; 6, Jack Appel; 7, Bob Spousta; Stroke, Kurt Belchick; Cox, Chris Jedrey.

The Regatta, largest in the Western Hemisphere, will attract over 800 oarsmen from 75 schools and clubs. The course will be an upstream 2.3 miles.

Metawampe's Picks

The rumors spread all over the world. They made every paper in the English speaking capitals. Everyone talked about the rumors, even the Great One, who had a solid and slightly spectacular 76% last week.

He heard them from the babbling brooks of the Student Affairs office as it flowed intothe paternal arms of its field.

Even Mike the Polka Man, took time our from his busy schedule of planning the first annual polkafest to be held in Palham. The rumors of course were: How can you read this thing every week and still be able to retain your sanity (and your lunch).

Chinua Achebe, author of MAN OF THE PEOPLE, will deliver a lecture sponsored by the Distinquished Visitors Program, tomorrow at 8:15 in Mahar Auditorium.

Biafran Novelist to Speak As D.V.P.'s First Lecturer

Chinua Achebe, noted Biafran novelist, will deliver the first Distinguished Visitors Program lecture of the '69-'70 school year Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

He is currently the speechwriter for the Head of the Provisional Government of Biafra.

ACHEBE was born in eastern Nigeria, into the Ibo Tribe, where his father taught in a government school under the Church Missionary Society. He was educated at Government College in Umahai and was graduated from the University of Ibadan with a B.A. He later studied African Literature at the University of Biafra.

In 1954 he began his career in broadcasting working for B.B.C. and in 1962 he became the first Director of External Broadcasting. During this time many of his novels and stories were published.

In the United States five novels are in print ARROW OF GOD, THINGS FALL APART, CHIKE AND THE RIVER, NO LONGER AT EASE and MAN OF THE PEOPLE.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE'S publication and the events of 1966 virtually coincided, and Mr. Achebe was put into a Lagos jail. After his release, Achebe joined the Biafran effort.

Last season, Achebe, joined by Cyprian Ekwensi and Gabriel Okara, toured throughout the United States on lecture tours sponsored by the Committee for Biafran Affairs and Writers. They visited over forty-five colleges and universities in the United States and Canada.

This year, Achebe is touring throughout the United States in the fall and winter.

Attorney Poll Shows Opposition Of Judge Haynsworth Nomination

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - The president of the American Trial Lawyers Association yesterday called White House Aide Clark Hollenhoff "uninformed or irresponsible' for calling an association poll of 1,204 of its members on the nomination of Judge Clement Haynsworth to the U.S. Supreme Court invalid.

Mollenhoff said Friday that no matter how the poll turned out, it would be invalid because it was based on press accounts rather than a study of the record.

He also said that only one member of the association had asked the Senate Judiciary Committee for a copy of its hearing record, and no one had requested any of the material his office and the Justice Department offered to make available.

The results of the poll, released yesterday, recommended that Haynsworth's nomination be withdrawn.

' Mollenhoff is either uninformed or irresponsible in his remarks," Leon L. Wolfstone, president of the trial association said last night.

"At the meeting of the executive committee and board of governors of this bar association, there were in hand, used and referred to, a great many copies of the transcript of the hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on the nomination. The contents of these hearings were discussed for hours and had been carefully annotated," he said.

Wolfstone said Mollenhoff had previously called the poll "ludicrous and useless' because it is Mollenhoff who is inadequately informed or misinformed.

Considered in the voting was a nationwide poll taken among 1,204 members. Officials said 73.29 per cent of the attorneys returning the questionnaire opposed the Haynsworth nomination.

Meanwhile, in New York, the national Bar Association reaffirmed its opposition to Haynsworth and called on Nixon to withdraw his nomination.

William Peterson, president of the organization of 2,400 Negro lawyers, said the association's executive committee voted unanimously on the action Saturday.

UMass Student "Forced" To Sign Loyalty Oath

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

A UMass student was forced to sign a loyalty oath Friday while applying for a University work study job, a spokesman within the Placement and Financial Aid Office disclosed yesterday.

This violates a University policy, initiated upon the insistance of the Faculty Senate and the American Civil Liberties Union, which states, ' The University shall advise new employees personally and individually that they are required to sign the State Loyalty Oath."

The student, whose name has not been released, was reported to have been told that he could not hold a University job if he did not sign the oath.

The UMass administration was forced into changing its policy which had, until this year, required all University employees to sign the oath, when the State Attorney General's office informed the University legal staff it was illegal to require all of its employees to sign the oath.

The text of the loyalty oath follows:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America and the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and that I will oppose the overthrow of the government of the United States of America or of this Commonwealth by force, violence or by any illegal or unconstitutional method."

Senate Passes Alfange's Resolution

Professor Dean Alfange's resolution to have President John Lederle write to President Nixon of the faculties support of an "early and complete withdrawal of all U.S. troops," was passed by the Faculty Senate 48-19 with 9 abstentions. The wording of the Resolution follows:

Whereas the war in Vietnam has brought division and emotional turmoil to the campus, has engendered intense moral opposition to governmental policy, has conscripted or threatened to conscript members of the student body to fight in a cause they consider unwise and unjust, and has made normal and proper functioning of a university as an academic community increasingly difficult:

We urge that the President of the University communicate to the President of the United States the urgency felt by the Faculty Senate for the early and complete withdrawal of all U.S. troops.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SAIGON (AP) - Radio Hanoi has announced that three U.S. Army soldiers listed as missing in action will be released, the U.S. command said today.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) - Two hundred demonstrators staged a protest rally outside the Justice Ministry yesterday to demand political asylum in Denmark for two U.S. Army deserters who arrived in Denmark two weeks ago. They deserted from their Army units in West Germany to avoid service in Vietnam.

PRAGUE (AP) - Jail terms ranging from five months to two years have been given a group of Czechoslovak youths accused of ransacking a regional Soviet occupation headquarters in the "ice hockey riots" last March, the Prague press said yesterday.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Arab guerrillas have passed the word to Palestinian refugees and the Syrian government that they want to cool off conflict with the Lebanese army.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) - A series of earthquakes shook western Yugoslavia yesterday and the news agency Tanjug said a large number of buildings were destroyed or damaged and that one girl was killed. More than 100 persons have been injured.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott predicts President Nixon will cut the nation's armed forces by more than 30 per cent by the end of 1972. He anticipates also a 300,000 man cut in U.S. troop assignment to Vietnam, but sets no target date on that forecast.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Henry S. Reuss has accused the Nixon administration of using executive privilege to suppress reports that strongly indict the supersonic transport program.

BOSTON (AP) - John D. Warner, new director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, BRA, said last night that Boston is afflicted with a dire housing crisis, and the city's so-called "infill" housing program is in serious trouble.

BOSTON (AP) - The newly appointed regional director of the Federal Law Enforcement Assistants Administration yesterday called the Cosa Nostra a real threat in Massachusetts but said there is "no evidence" that the organization is directly involved in narcotics problems in the in the cities.

Student Sen. Act. Comm. to Meet On Stockbridge Self-Government

For the past 26 years, the University Student Senate has had the final word in recognizing Stockbridge student organizations. Last Spring, the Stockbridge Student Senate debated this situation at length and decided to move as soon as possible towards the administratio n of their own organizations.

The Student Senate (University) Activities Committee, R.S.O. personnel, and Stockbridge Student Senate officers met in mid-May at a series of meetings to discuss the feasability of transferring the group administration from the University to the Stockbridge Student Senate. One large hurdle was identified as the absence of a Stockbridge R.S.O. policy to govern the financial transactions of the groups. Another problem was the necessity of the Stockbridge Student Senate generating an Activities Act to establish a framework for the organizations to work in. (This aspect is even more important because the Stockbridge Student body elects its Senators from these organizations.)

An open public hearing, to discuss the feasibility of such a transferral of group administration, will be conducted by the University Student Senate Activities Committee tonight at 6:30 in the Plymouth room of the Student Union. Chairman Staff Sheehan announced that written invitations have gone out to the President of both Student Senates, Bud Demurs representing the R.S.O. office, and the Stockbridge Senate representative to the University Student Senate.

According to Sheehan, "For years, Stockbridge Senators have questioned the right of the University Student Senate to control all Stockbridge groups. A complete transferral of responsibility for these groups would probably have taken place long ago if it weren't for the rapid turn-over of Senators in the Stockbridge Senate. They areonly here for two years, which doesn't give them much time to write and amend long, intricate policies. Tonight's hearing will most likely determine which Senate will control the recognition of Stockbridge organizations in the future. Every interested person should attend this public hearing."

Visiting Phi Beta Kappa Scholar To Discuss Literature and Culture

Professor Walter J. Ong, S.J., of Saint Louis University will be on campus on Monday and Tuesday, October 27-28, as Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar. He will meet students in a variety of informal colloquia, most of them devoted to topics in literature and contemporary culture, and will give a major public address in Mahar Auditorium.

Father Ong was a Guggenheim Fellow, a visiting lecturer at numerous universities in the United States, Canada, and Europe, a Fellow of the Center for Advanced Studies at Wesleyan, and a member of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara. He holds an academic decoration from the French government.

The author or editor of a dozen books, as well as scholarly articles, he has participated in notable conferences on undergraduate education, the teaching of English, religion and contemporary culture, and mass communications. A display of his books has been set up in the University Bookstore, where copies may be purchased.

The primary aim of the Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program is to give students a chance to meet and talk with a noted scholar who is also a distinguished teacher. Groups of students interested in the topics that Fr. Ong will discuss have been invited through their classes, and others interested, including faculty, are also invited.

On Monday, October 27, Fr. Ong will discuss the poetry of Gerard Manley Hopkins in the Memorial Room of Memorial Hall during the 10:10 class period. At four o'clock he will speak on "The Audience Is a Fiction, Too." This subject will interest particularly students in creative writing, journalism, rhetoric, and speech. It will be held in Memorial Hall Lounge.

The public lecture on Monday evening at 8:15 in Mahar Auditorium, "The End of the Age of Literacy," will be concerned with the development of communication from oral cultures through writing and printing to the age of electronics.

There will be two colloquia on Tuesday, October 28. At 3:00 p.m. in Memorial Hall (upstairs) Fr. Ong will speak on "Media and Message in Shakespeare's World." This will be of interest to students of Renaissance literature and culture, and also to anyone concerned for the cultural contexts of communications.

Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in SBA 120 Fr. Ong will lead a discussion on "Intellectual Freedom and Religious Commitment." Students have been invited through organized campus religious groups and the Religion Departments of neighboring colleges. Anyone interested is welcome.

Fr. Ong's presence on campus for two days has been arranged by the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Two social events for Phi Beta Kappa members are planplanned, a luncheon for those students elected last year to Phi Beta Kappa in their junior year who are now seniors, and a gathering for faculty Phi Beta Kappa members and wives or husbands at the Lord Jeffrey Inn at 4:30 on Tuesday.

Ground Broken for UMass Med School

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

Ground was broken in Worcester Thursday for the University of Massachusetts Medical School, an event which marked the first concrete step toward constructing the $124 million complex which has been delayed seven years since first receiving legislative approval in 1962.

UMass President John W. Lederle said Thursday, refering to the prolonged disputes over site selection, costs and politics, "Now we'll know that the school is to be a reality and that it is to be built here in Worcester."

The School's first class of 16 students will enroll next September, and will be housed in temporary facilities until 1773, when the teaching hospital, clinical buildings, and library are built.

The school will accept 100 students in 1973. Medical School Dean Lamar Soutar said, "We already have received hundreds of qualified applicants for the first class of 16."

The man who has been thought of by many students as the most responsible for delaying the school, Governor Francis Sargent, was at the ground breaking and he called the event "exciting and important."

The Governor added, "We are basically committed to the goal of providing all the people in this state with the best health care possible. The Medical School ca n make a fundamental contribution to that goal's achievement." Sargent went on to say, "There are those who would tell you that I did not support the project and that this ceremony is taking place in spite of my efforts, not because of them."

He said that when he became governor he was faced with a program which had lumped in cost from $75 to nearly $124 million.

Sargent insisted that while his review of the Medical School continued, progress in construction of the school continued. He said, "There was no foot dragging. There was no delay. I have great hopes for this facility."

Econ. Center Est.

UMass has established a Center for Economic Education under the direction of Dr. Bruce Morris of the UMass economics department.

The center is being established in an effort to advance the average citizen's understanding of economics and the American economic system.

Studies conducted by the Joint Council for Economic Education, a private, non-profit national organization with headquarters in New York City, reveal an appalling lack of "economic literacy" among the American public. An estimated 80 to 90 per cent of all future voters will never even take one college course in economics. Yet, American citizens are called with increasing frequency to debate crucial economic questions.

According to Dr. Morris, the center is designed "to improve the teaching of economics from kindergarten through grade 12, and at the community college and university level."

The program will offer service and pre-service courses in economics to teachers. Text materials are being developed, as well as plans for integrating economic education into the curriculum.

The center will also offer opportunities for teachers to meet and discuss what they are doing, and what can be done to supplement what's already being done.

Center Growing for Learning Resources

"Teaching is often a one-way street, but learning, which may or may not result from teaching, appears to be maximized when a two-way process occurs." The Learning Resources Center confronts two major components of the two-way process - 1) the appropriate grouping of people compatible enough to profit from a free-flowing interchange of ideas and goals, and 2) the resources necessary to the maintenance of group or self-directed learning.

Learning implies both environment and people. The function of a valuable clearinghouse is to locate and compile, in a useful and accessible way, those re - sources which will help to encourage and expand innovative learning. This requires that it contain information concerning people engaged in various and similar learning experiences (who they are and how to contact them) as well as the ins and outs of the environment, in this case the University structure, which one must know how to utilize in a way which best complements his ideas with action. The learning Resources Center recognizes this to be one of its primary objectives. But to derive such a quantity of information, it needs the cooperation of "learners" on the campus who are involved in projects providing educational alternatives which everyone should know about.

If you're into any kind of effort that deals with educational or environmental reform from research to living-learning communities, to urban studies, to proposals for revision of structures - anything in which the emphasis is on innovative and relevent learning, please let the Center know about you. Call us between 3 and 9 p.m. weekdays (545-0277); write (include your name, telephone, and a time when we can contact you) to: Learning Resources Center, 219 Mills House, U. of Mass. or come by the office between 3 and 9. Any literature you may have will be helpful.

Tonight on WMUA's "Focus" program at 9 p.m., the subject of discussion will be military conscription in the United States. The scheduled guest is Mr. Richard Prunty, a former worker with the American Friends Service Committee, who is presently a guidance counselor in the Enfield, Mass., school system and a draft counselor in Springfield. Mr. Prunty will comment at length on conscientious objection, as well as recently-proposed changes in the draft law, including President Nixon's lottery system.

Interested persons are invited to call in their questions about the draft, which Mr. Prunty will be pleased to answer.

Narcs: A Means to An...

UMass students are once again concerned about the policy of the University police department towards the hiring of "informers" to aid them in arresting students for marijuana and narcotic drug violations.

Recently a UMass junior was found guilty of possession of marijuana in Northampton District Court and was sentenced to two years on probation. The state based its case on the testimony of another University student, who was recruited as a paid informer by the UMass police in July, 1968.

The informer, on instructions from the UMass police department, asked the junior to get him $15 worth of marijuana and the informer gave the junior $15. The money was given to him by the police department.

In recent weeks several high administrators have stated that they oppose this policy of hiring informers. However, they apparently opposed the policy last year when the University police department hired this particular informer.

Dean of Students William F. Field has told the Daily Collegian that to the best of his knowledge "informers" receiving pay from the University, do NOT exist today. However we recognize the possibility that the UMass police department could hire informers on their own, completely bypassing the administration.

The concept of "paid informers," of hiring students to stooge on other students, is completely alien to the nature of a University. The administration, the faculty senate and student senate should investigate the matter immediately. UMass has already had at least one recent incident involving a "paid informer." As of now there is no guarantee that it will not happen again.

MY OWN TRIP

I Am Gerard (Mellow)

It is wise for a columnist to delete value judgements and emotional outbursts from his work. Last Monday I wrote a column, entitled "I am Lederle (Yellow)," which attempted to forward the thesis that "those most responsible for leadership within the universities must take personal stands" on the great moral issues, and that "which side one takes on an issue is really much less important than the fact that one takes a side at all." This thesis, coupled with the suggestion that President Lederle, by virtue of the fact that this is his last year as our leader, was in a better position than most of his collegues to provide a valuable role model by taking a stand, was lost in a torrent of verbiage respondents were to call such things as "hysterical invective" from a "fledgling muckraker," an "outpouring of abuse, of hate filled gutter language and arrogant pronouncements of guilt" that were "an insult to the whole university community."

This episode has taught me a great deal about writing. My intent was to spur a dialogue around the issue raised by my above stated thesis. Instead I precipitated a one-sided attack against the nature of my rhetoric. Not one person who responded to my column so much as hinted that he understood what I was trying to say. Everyone got lost in the rhetorical underbrush. No one asked why I felt that way about Mr. Lederle, they just insisted that I had no right to feel that way.

Such is the nature of radical writing (though I don't believe my thesis was radical at all). While I felt very emotionally involved with my statement and tried to transmit that emotion to the reader, my success became my mistake as my readers responded to the emotion, not to the issue. Any successfully illustrated point must be presented in a cool, rational, logical light if it is to direct attention to its content and not to its style.

Last week I called President Lederle "mediocre, amoral, and uninspirational." As pejorative as these words sound, they are only neutral in meaning. (In fact, after attending a staff meeting last week where he was a guest, I am more inclined to feel that his educational philosophy is bad, immoral, and ill-inspiring). People took this to mean that I wanted such erroneous things as to have him politicize the University by speaking out for us against the war in Vietnam. The conclusions people read were not to be found in my column, but I can understand how my strong style led to such a sloppy reading. It is wise for a columnist to delete value judgements and emotional outbursts from his work. This allows room for the reader to bring his own subjective baggage to the writer's destination and is, in fact, the goal of provocative newspaper editorializing.

In Defense of Pigs

To The Editor:

To begin with, anyone who employs the "name-calling" tactics of assigning epithets such as "pigs" to his opposing faction, must be extremely immature or not be able to justify an an argument with fact. When the author of this editorial admitted, of his poem, that "....it is not good literature,.... It is not based on exhaustive research and documented findings," he should have stopped right there, realizing his ignorance about the subject, on which he was writing. The author maintains that UMass, doesn't need policemen but he makes no attempt to prove his point with fact; he still iterates only his unfounded, unintelligent opinions.

The author demonstrates his profound knowledge of what he is taking about by this statement:".... the blue-coats do: everything from arresting a perfectly harmless and entertaining prankster at the Homecoming Football Game...." This "harmless prankster" ruined the marching band's performance, and embarrassed many people by his obsene language in the stands. Also, I would like to mention that he was escorted from the stadium by a Sheriff's Officer in a green uniform. Green is the color worn by Belchertown Sheriffs; incidentally, Belchertown is where the Belchertown State Hospital is located.

Furthermore, the author contends that, under a policy of no-ticketing of cars, "things went smoothly." He does not seem to be aware of the fact that ticketing was resumed due to complaints from heads of residence, staff, etc., that they could not park their cars anywhere, since all the spaces were taken. The author continues with this sort of prefabricated drivel to the end; however, Mr. anti-policeman, who would you call if someone you know had to be rushed to the infirmary, or a bunch of guys threatened to do you in, or some drunken UMass semi-humans were harrassing your girl - or, then again, would you care?

God Save Us Untried Youth

TO The Editor:

In answer to the article in Thursday's Collegian "Field Stresses Honesty Between Campus Groups", I can only say "God save us from Dean Field's mode of honesty!"

From the domain of strangled truth (strangled by red tape), Whitmore, Dean Field has constantly advocated the "one way street" theory of honesty. He has called for this mode of honesty, while being a master of the infamous administrative run-around.

I will remind him of the famous Free University City "squelch", when he brought the Student Senate to a rude awakening to the doctrine of "in loco parentis". Daddy Field slapped their wrists and pulled the purse strings, apologetically stating that he wished only to prevent them from throwing their money down a "rat hole" - Free University City, a student run, student orientated project - a "rat hole"?

When the widespread tripling took place across campus at the beginning of the semester, Dean Field made a press release blaming the overcrowded conditions on those students termed as "phantoms", rather, those students who fail to notify housing of their plans to leave or remain at the University. He failed to mention the University's guilt in over enrolling. Half truths?

The members of the dormitory Counseling Staff will long remember the elusive quality of Dean Field's dealings with them, when their jobs for second semester were so precariously hanging in the balance. The ridiculous system of priorities established for the 03 fund by Field, ignored the worth of the Counseling Staff to maintain those areas in the fund with a certain amount of status.

In conclusion, to Dean Field's call for honesty, I say that a brilliant study of the "rumor clinic" could be made behind the portals of Whitmore, for no administrator seems to know what his colleagues are saying about policy. And finally, that we, "unfried youth" can only take example from our elders.

A BIBLICAL UPSET
A Time to Win; A Time to Lose

Hi there baseball fans! (You're wondering why I'm talking about baseball. I just came out of shock from the World Series.) 1969 was a pretty good year for baseball, for a while anyway.

Remember last spring Tony C. was making a comeback and if the Sox pitching held out, Boston, Detroit, and Baltimore would be fighting it out for the divisional title. Even Ted was back as a manager; seeing that great baseball mind back in the game felt good. Over in the other division there was going to be a classic battle Oakland's pitching against Minnesota's bats.

The National League wasn't too bad either maybe if the Cards got a little lazy Ernie Banks and Leo Durocher could get the Cubs a pennant. While the other division looked to be a waterfront brawl as Atlanta's and San Francisco's big bats going at each other and Neidro's knuckle-ball in the middle of it all to make this unpredictable.

Well the season started off all right but things were beginning to go sour. Baltimore just ran away with the divisional championship. However Oakland and Minnesota battled as predicted, and for all those hitting addicts, Minnesota won.

The National League should have been all right and was at mid-season. The Cubs were in front, but REAL fans knew something was amiss. The Cards were too far back and the Mets, who were going to have a .500 season because of their tough young pitchers, were playing just a little too well. Fortunately the other National League division was hunky-dory, even though the Dodgers had no right to be doing so well.

The regular season ended with a small disaster. True a baseball fan could look with pride to the American League. The teams that won, Baltimore and Minnesota, deserved to win, but the National League, what the hell were the Mets doing in overcoming a 9-1/2 game lead the Cubs had - Atlanta was all right, but those Mets.

This led to the League Championships. American League, Baltimore over Minnesota in a close contest. National League, Mets pitching would give Braves a tussle but the experience would win out in the end. The real results should have told baseball fans that something was amiss. Baltimore won too easily and the Mets won!!! However we deceived ourselves, Baltimore was just that good a team and well in a short series pitching always becomes more important. We fans sorta ignored the unusual way the Mets won.

Well America, World Series time again. This country's SPORT'S fans were excited. Go Go Mets, come on David get Goliath. The old experienced baseball soothsayers sat back. "Baltimore in six, Mets pitching will give 'em a tussle for a while." "Too bad the Mets had to come up against such a complete team." "The Mets may have a slight edge in pitching but look at the rest of that Baltimore team."

NEWS FLASH: Today October 13 at 3:57 thousands of baseball fans went into shock as the New York Mets won the World Series in five games. Now in a more composed mood I can what the Christ right do the New York Mets have in beating the Orioles. How can a team that starts Ed Charles, Al Weiss, Ron Swoboda beat a team of super stars and just damn good baseball players. Good hitters, good fielders, A perfectly balanced team. How? Ron Swoboda who makes outfield practice a sports event makes an incredible game winning save. Al Weiss who could play for the Sox's Pittsfield team gets 5 hits including a home run.

"Wait till next year," the proverbial cry sounds loudly through the streets, "a real baseball team will win the Series."

Peace Corp Director Blatchford

"Peace is Not the Absence of War"

"An end to the war in Vietnam will not alone bring peace. Peace is not the absence of war, and it isn't achieved at the end of hostilities. It is something built up day after day. It requires painstaking effort. The end to the shooting war in Vietnam cannot bring peace when there is a silent war being waged in the form of the human tragedies that most of manking knows everyday. Peace is threatened whenever men live in ignorance and in agony."

"Today the under-developed nations are losing ground in the war against hunger, disease and ignorance.' Fortunately America is experiencing an "awakening of conscience" to meet this threat to world peace.

"Those who marched (Oct. 15) are symbols of a new awakening of conscience in America of a heightened concern for human lives and human values." This awakening must go further than a step against a negative quality like the war. It must be manifested by something positive for something positive. The Peace Corps is something positive.

Although the original inspiration of John Kennedy has for six years been waning, and consequently the eight year old Peace Corps has lost it's "in-ness", it's stylishness, it's "the-thing-to-do" quality, still "ten thousand people on this planet are dying each day of starvation", still, "two billion human being are going to go to bed hungry tonight and tomorrow night and the night after that." An "in' thing or not these people need your help.

Obviously the Peace Corps is only a very small part of a solution, yet, small as it might be it is effective and it is constant. It is a positive step for a positive quality. It might just be one of the factors that prevents the next "Vietnam" before it begins.

If you are interested in being part of the Peace Corps and wish information, Peace Corps Representatives will be on campus today, tomorrow and Wednesday in the Student Union. In the Hampden Room of the Union there will be an interesting film and discussion at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Note: All quoted sections of this article were made by Peace Corps Director Joseph Blatchford while addressing a group of Tufts University students on October 20, 1969.

Student Ushers Needed For Theatre-Dance Events

The Fine Arts Council is in search of students willing to usher during the forthcoming theatre and dance festival events in Bowker auditorium. Under the Council's auspices, the National Shakespeare Company will be in-residence on campus November 13-16 and will perform "Macbeth", Molier's "School for Wives" and "The Tempest" in repertory. In additon to four evening performances at 8:00 p.m., there will be two 2:00 p.m. matinees.

The Alwin Nikolais Dance Theatre, heralded internationally as one of the most outstanding multimedia dance ensembles before the public today will be featured in a three-day residency November 18-20. This engagement has been arranged through a grant of the Fine Arts Council, Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and The National Endowment for the Arts. During their visit to the University, the Nikolais Dance Theatre will be featured in two Bowker Auditorium performances on November 19-20 at 8:00 p.m. and a special Master Class in the Women's Physical Education Studio at 3:30 p.m. on November 18. Ushers are needed for both evening performances.

Students interested in assisting the Fine Arts Council on these programs are urged to contact Terry C. Schwarz, Manager of the Council at 125 Herter Hall, telephone 5-0202.

Over the past years, Dr. Cohen has authored several articles on various aspects of drug abuse for professional journals, and in addition, has lectured extensively in the U.S.A. and Europe to college university, and professional audiences. He is currently co-authoring a book (with Peter Marin) for parents on drugs and adolescence (The Dying of the Light), soon to be published by Harper and Row. He has participated in scores of radio and television interviews, including the David Susskind Program and NBC's TODAY Show.

Psychologist Offers Lecture-Discussion On Mind Expansion Methods and Drug Abuse

On the 28th. of October, tomorrow, the University community will have the unusual opportunity to participate in a lecture-discussion with Dr. Allan Y. Cohen, Ph.D., consulting psychologist in Berkeley, California, and Assistant Professor of Psychology at newly chartered John F. Kennedy University in Martinez, California. During his graduate years at Harvard, Dr. Cohen participated in the early research on psychidelic drugs as a research assistant to Dr.'s Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert. He later split apart from the "psychedelic utopians"(after taking LSD and related drugs over thirty times), rejecting the use of drugs as means for personal development.

Recently his primary interest has involved researching new discoveries in methods for unfolding consciousness. His most intense focus has been on the universal and practical approach of Avatar Meher Baba (Avatar means God-Man, Christ, or Messiah), perhaps the most unique and authoritative spiritual master to live in this century. Dr. Cohen twice has gone to India, visiting with Baba's close disciples.

America's Police Reaching For Power and Influence

WASHINGTON (AP) - America's policemen, riding the tide of reaction to rising crime and social change, are reaching for power and influence on a national level.

Two of the nation's best known militant policemen, John Cassese of New York and Richard G. MacEachern of Boston, are leading separate drives to forge national police unions.

And the 125,000-member Fraternal Order of Police, (FOP) is readying a national legislative program that would couple a campaign against loosening of social attitudes with a drive for police benefits, including a national minimum police salary.

"If the people in Washington want to do something about crime, they've got to do something about the police," says John Harrington, FOP president. "Decent working people as a whole are not organized to speak out."

Fanning the organizational moves is a widespread feeling among policemen that they are among society's abused and neglected. They say they are hobbled by the courts, left to the mercy of unsympathetic supervisors while being pawns of politicians more interested in votes than in policemen's lives.

"We're sick and tired of being second - class citizens, said Cassese.

Increasingly, police are speaking up. And, said Philadelpha Police Commissioner Frank L. Rizzo, "they should speak out - they should have equal time."

The FOP, with 934 lodges in 43 states, asserted itself earlier this year when it presented Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell with 650,000 signatures on petitions seeking to wipe out Supreme Court decisions which it describes as "lopsidedly in favor of the criminal elements in our society."

Harrington is confident that when the FOP speaks for its legislative program, Congress will be listening.

Behind the confidence is the assumption - one being tested anew in the round of municipal elections Nov. 4 - that the nation's policemen have become a potent political force.

Leadership Training Program to Sponsor Panel

Rhody McCoy, major figure in the Ocean Hill- Brownsville School controversy in New York last year, and three respresentatives of the Model Cities Program will present a panel discussion Tuesday, October 28, at 1:30 in the Media Studio of the School of Education. Their topic: "Local Administration of a Comprehensive Community Social Program -- Emphasis on Educational Problems".

The presentation is open to everyone at no charge.

Joining McCoy on the panel are Oscar Mims, chief education advisor to the Model Cities Program, Washington, D.C.; Ted Greer, director of the Washington Model Cities Program; and Gordon Johnson, director of the Miami Model Cities Program.

The School of Ed visit of the four is being sponsored by the Leadership Training Program at the school. Tuesday's panel has been scheduled by the school's Committee on Alternative Designs for Reform in Education (CADRE).

A UMass student is in the process of organizing the first intercollegiate polkafest, and claims that the movement "to revive the polka" is meeting great success.

"Mike the Polka man" said this weekend that the polka fest, tentatively scheduled for Pelham later in the semester, "will be like a second Woodstock. We are going to have 48 hours of straight polka and will award prizes to the best polka groups that show."

This weekend a spontaneous outbreak of polka by a couple in the little Hatch in Southwest prompted Mike to say "Wow.. I think I've started a movement."

"We Put It Together in Second Half"

Frosh Gridders Rip Rams, 47-26

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

"We were ready mentally and physically, but we didn't put it together until the second half." This quote by freshman football coach Dave Kelley summarizes the 47-26 Little Redman win against the Rhode Island frosh Saturday afternoon at Alumni Stadium.

After receiving the opening kickoff the Little Rams drove downfield and scored as their quarterback went off tackle for 20 yards. The extra point was successful and Rhode Island led, 7-0.

The UMass frosh then came right back as fullback Tiff Rockwell scored on a 40-yard run. Unfortunately a clipping penalty nullified the touchdown and the Rams still led.

Late in the first quarter the Little Redmen drove to Rhody's five yard line where Byron Murray threw a screen pass to Kevin Filley, who scored standing up. The attempt for the point after was wide to the left and the Little Rams maintained a 7-6 lead.

The only other scoring drive in the first half was at 14:52 of the second period when the URI quarterback threw a 20-yard scoring strike to his left halfback.

The UMass frosh played a poor first half. The defense was missing tackles and the offense was unable to move the ball consistently. The only bright spot was fullback Rockwell.

The second half was a complete turnabout for the UMass frosh. Lead by defensive standouts Doug Winslow, John Sperandro, Rich Cronin and John Welsh, the Little Redmen literally blew the Rhody frosh out of the stadium.

UMass scored 34 points in the third period. The Little Redmen received the kickoff and promptly drove down the field. Rockwell scored for keeps this time as he went up the middle for a 20-yard TD run. Quarterback Len Matuza went for two points, but his pass to tight end Winslow fell incomplete.

On the ensuing kickoff, URI fumbled and UMass' Pangallo recovered. Four plays later Matuza scored on a delay. He rolled left but was hemmed up. Reversing his field he broke four tackles and bounced off two Ram defenders as he went 25 yards for the score. Kicker Andy Dunkanidz converted the point after and UMass led for the first time, 19-14.

Now the defense began to toughen as end Winslow put constant harrassment on the Rhody quarterback. Winslow recovered a fumble on third down and the Little Redmen again gained possession of the ball.

Paced by Rockwell's power drives up the middle and off tackle, the frosh drove to the Ram one yard line. Here Murray faked a handoff to halfback Bill Daenz and bootlegged in the opposite direction for the score. The extra point was good and UMass' lead was 26-14.

The Rams were unable to move the ball and were forced to punt. However, Winslow broke through the Ram defenders and blocked the kick. Again the frosh drove for the score. Murray tried the bootleg kick and again it was successful. Adding insult to injury Byron actually walked the last three yards as the Ram defenders were completely faked out.

The Little Rams, now lambs, were again unable to move the ball and subsequently punted. The Rhody kicker, fearful of a rush, held the ball too long and was tackled by Winslow and linebacker Welsh.

On the first play Rockwell scored a thirty-yard touchdown on a trap play. The run climaxed a fine day for Rockwell who had close to 200 yards rushing.

Both teams scored in the fourth quarter as everyone was given an opportunity to play.

Kelley, although pleased to win, feels his team still has a long way to go in order to be a consistent threat. The Little Redmen mostly scored only when pressure was applied.

Dartmouth Keeps Top New England Ranking

Dartmouth cemented its position as New England's top college football power with a 24-10 victory over Harvard Saturday while Yale kept pace with the Indians in the Ivy League title chase.

Third-ranked Boston University shook off the challenge of upsetminded Maine 20-7 in another key game, but second-rated Boston College was belted by Army, 38-7.

Tom Quinn returned a punt 65 yards for Dartmouth's first touchdown as the Indians built a 24-0 lead early in the second period against Harvard. Pass interceptions by Willie Bogan and Russ Adams were the keys to Dartmouth's second and third touchdowns, and after that the Big Green held on although unable to move very well against a rugged Crimson defense.

Meanwhile at New Haven, Yale's tremendous defense led as usual by sophomore end Jim Gallegher held Ed Marinaro, the nation's leading rusher, to 30 yards as the Elis blanked Cornell 17-0. Quarterback Joe Massey mixed up his passing and running games beautifully as he led Yale on a pair of 80-yard touchdown marches to nail down the triumph.

BU's heavily favored Terriers were fought to a standstill by Maine for the first 30 minutes but eventually gained the upper hand. The passing combination of Pete Yetten and tight end Jack Cambest set up the first BU touchdown and scored the second one, while a couple of brilliant punt returns by Bruce Taylor and Fred Barry also were instrumental in the team's fifth victory in six decisions.

Redmen Soundly Defeat UConn, 28-7

Defense Strong Again, Offense Comes Back in 2nd Half

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

STORRS, Ct. - Backed by a defense that never quit UMass soundly beat Connecticut, 28-7, as the Redman offense came through with four touchdowns in the second half of the key Yankee Conference game here on Saturday.

The victory is UMass' third in a row and gives it a 4-2 mark overall with a perfect 3-0 Conference slate. UConn now owns a 3-2 record, 2-2 in league play.

As in previous Redman wins over Boston University and Rhode Island, much of the credit belongs to the defensive unit. It permitted the Husky offense only 37 net yards on the ground and 115 yards on passing. It also registered five interceptions and dumped UConn quarterback Rich Robustelli on three occasions.

Noteworthy performances were turned in by tackles Bill DeFlavio and Andy Guarino, ends Paul Toner and Curt Briston, linebackers Joe Sabulis and Tom York, each of whom had an interception and safetyman Steve Rogers, who picked off two enemy aerials.

The UMass offense, on the other hand, didn't get untracted until the second half. The showing by the Redmen in the first half left much to be desired as they completed but one pass and shamefully recorded only one first down.

Head Coach Vic Fusia's halftime teach-in must have been really something for his forces took the second half kickoff and marched to their first score ten plays afterward.

Steve Parnell, who had one of his best afternoons all around, returned the kickoff 20 yards to his own 35. Halfback Jerry Grasso carried the ball for 14 yards on the first play out to the UMass 40. On the next play, quarterback Tim Adams hit Parnell with a pass on the Husky 30 and the senior end ran it to the 26.

After a fumbled handoff moved the pigskin back nine yards, an Adams-to-McGarry pass and an 11-yard dash by halfback Pat Scavone gave the Redmen a first down on UConn's 12 yard line. The following play was another Adams-to-McGarry toss which was incomplete, but the big end was interfered with and the ball was placed down at the one.

Two plays later Scavone scored, but to the visitors' dismay, an offside infraction moved the ball six yards back. However, the Redmen retaliated as Grasso gained five yards to the one and fullback Dick Cummings busted over for the touchdown. Dennis Gagnon's extra point attempt was good and, with 3:37 elapsed in the third period, UMass had tied the fray at seven points a piece.

Action was slow for the remainder of third quarter, but the opening of the last period found the visitors driving again with a second-and-five on the Husky 42. Four running plays advanced the ball to the 36 for a first down.

At this point Adams drew back into the pocket and fired a completed pass over the middle to Craig Lovell, which the hard-working back took down to the two-yard stripe, eluding enemy tacklers along the way. The next play was another call to Lovell who took the handoff and sliced through the middle for the score. Gagnon's kick was accurate to give the Redmen a 14-7 lead at 1:56 of the fourth quarter.

The Huskies needed a comeback but, on their third play from scrimmage after taking the ensuing kickoff, a Robustelli pass intended for end John Crisp was tipped into the arms of UMass' Rogers. The latter returned it to the home 30 yard stripe.

Adams looked particularly sharp as he guided the third Redman drive to paydirt in four plays, the last of which was a picture play on a first down from the 19. Adams artfully faked runners into the line, then stood tall and lofted the leather into the welcome grasp of McGarry who was alone in the left corner of the endzone. With 10:09 left to go in the contest, Gagnon's kick put UMass further ahead, 21-7.

After the kickoff the Huskies tried in vain to get a drive going as Robustelli, on third down from his own 44, three the ball right to Rogers who ran it back to the Connecticut 49.

Sarno highlighted the drive that followed as he picked up 32 yards and scored the fourth TD from one yard out with 4:53 left in the fray. Gagnon added the 28th point.

One of the keys to the Redman victory was the manner in which the defense contained UConn's star halfback Vinny Clements. He managed to gain only 68 yards on 20 carries, and his only effectiveness was shown in the first half. Clements sparked the one Husky scoring drive and got the touchdown on a five yard dash to culminate an eight-play, 52 yard affair. His efforts in the second half were repeatedly snubbed by sure-tackles on the part of the defense.

As a result of this victory UMass remains alone on top of the Conference standings while UConn tumbles into a tie for third. Second place Vermont invades Alumni Stadium on Saturday where a Redman victory will bring the Yan-Con Title back to UMass.

Booters Topple Tufts, 5-4, in Comeback Effort

By Ray Esonts
Staff Reporter

In an awesome display of offensive power last Saturday, the UMass soccer team, behind a stunning three goal performance by Duane Brown, came back from a 4-2 deficit and tallied three straight goals, resulting in a 5-4 victory over Tufts University.

The match was made even more exciting by rough play, injuries, and numerous penalties, most of which effected the Redman squad.

Early in the first period, co-captain Rick Matuszczak caught an elbow in the face and was taken off the field with a broken nose. In the second quarter, Joe Cerniawski and Dick McCarron collided in mid-air and Cerniawski was helped to the bench with a head injury.

All in all, Tufts was much bigger at most positions, but they couldn't match the determination and confidence that UMass displayed throughout the entire game.

In the first quarter, everything was going for UMass. The Redman booters handled and passed the ball with skill, keeping most of the action centered around the Tufts goal. But they missed several scoring opportunities, and after Tuft's offense began rolling, found themselves down 1-0 to the Jumbos. UMass was thwarted several times by penalties, including four offsides in the first period, which resulted in Tufts continually gaining possession of the ball.

Then in the second quarter, Tufts began gaining momemtum and things looked bad for the Redmen. Two key men had been injured and were out of action, and the Jumbos soon took what seemed to be a comfortable 2-0 lead.

UMass, however, refused to be dismayed by the deficit. With only a few minutes remaining in the second period, Duane Brown tallied the first of his three goals, and the half ended with Tufts on top, 2-1.

The opening minutes of the third quarter saw neither team dominating play, most of which took place around mid-field. Then Redman McCarron broke the second half scoring ice, and UMass' hopes were looking up as the match was deadlocked at 2-2.

Two minutes hadn't passed, however, before Tufts' offense had rebounded, and the tie score proved to be short-lived. The Jumbos now led 3-2, and after UMass failed on a series of several scoring opportunities, the Tufts scoring machine took advantage and added another goal, assuming a 4-2 lead.

At this point, Redman victory hopes seemed to dwindle for everyone except the players. Despite being behind by two tallies, the team never became discouraged. As a matter of fact, this proved to be an incentive for them to play harder, and it was at this point when the UMass comeback rally began to take shape.

With less than a minute left in the third quarter, Brown chalked up his second goal, and his team was trailing by only one. He received a perfect lead pass, and after driving down the middle of the field between two Tufts defenders, he rammed the ball past the helpless goalie in a picture play.

The score was now 4-3 and the Redmen had all the momentum they needed. Before thirty seconds of the final period had elapsed, Brown once again found the range and scored his third goal. The match was even at four apiece, and between the fans going crazy and the Jumbos finding everything so hard to believe, the remarkable Redmen did it again.

With the ball bouncing around the Tufts goal, Marc Cantor tapped it past a numberof defenders, and the seemingly impossible had happened. The Redmen had just come up with three straight scores, and were leading the Greater Boston League champs 5-4.

From here on out, the UMass defense, especially some fine game saving stops by goalie Tom Malone, wrapped up the victory. The Redmen might have been out-sized at most positions, but their zeal and hustle easily made up for that.

The Redmen travel to Worcester Tech tomorrow for an important match with the Engineers. Their overall record is now 4-2, with the Yankee Conference slate reading 2-1.

Harriers Edge HC, 24-31

Running their best meet to date, the Redman Varsity Cross - Country team defeated Holy Cross 23-31 at Worcester Friday, taking four of the top five places.

Holy Cross senior Art Dulong ripped 40 seconds off his own course record soundly defeating Redman Ron Wayne by almost a minute and a half. Dulong and Wayne were first and second in last year's New Englands with Dulong finishing third in the Nationals.

Three more maroon-shirted runners, Leo Duart, Tom Derderian and Larry Paulson finished within 25 seconds of Wayne thus sealing the Crusaders' doom. Four Holy Cross runners finished in the next 25 seconds.

These four Crusaders gave the Redmen a tough time until the four mile mark of their rough 5.2 mile course where the UMass runners tore away on a down hill. Holy Cross is located on a steep hill in Worcester which makes for a cross-country course with a down hill start and a sharp uphill finish, which should have given the home team an advantage but the visitors, used to running Baker Hill, were better prepared for the hills than the home team.

Sophomore Bruce Blackburn showed continued improvement placing tenth only half a minute behind the older runners, with Dave Evans, Don Dunsky and Steve Wilcher rounding out the scoring.

The Frosh continued their romping season, easily slaughtering the Holy Cross runners. The Little Redmen allowed only one Crusader into the top eight. Tom Jasmin, Tom Swain, Rick Parry, Phil Riley, Gary O'Dell and Bob Sullivan participated in the massacre in that order.

The varsity will host the Yankee Conference meet Saturday. Forty two runners, the top seven from each of the Conference schools, will take part. The race for the Conference championship will again be between UMass and Connecticut and individually between Wayne and UConn's John Vitale.

Dorm Autonomy Provision Under Heavy Criticism

By LEE R. MILLER
Staff Reporter

The requirement of Board of Trustee approval for individual dorms to initiate 24-hour open house was debated last night by student leaders, Southwest Master John Hunt, and Assistant Dean of Students Paul W. Burbacher.

Wednesday's Student Senate meeting will be held in the Student Union Ballroom to allow as many students as possible to participate in further debate.

Dr. Brubacker advised students not to inact 24-hour open house by themselves, and urged that all action be delayed at least until the Student Senate hears both sides of the debate.

He based his position on the "so-called agreement" reached by the Student Senate and the Board of Trustees at the Board's September 22 meeting. At that meeting, the Trustees agreed to the idea of dorm self-determination in principle, but voted to continue the old policy of the Student Senate asking the Board to approve all open house policies.

Because of this "deal," Brubacher said he believed "the students must be opted to the relationship."

Counter-arguments were presented by a member of Student Senate Matters Committee. He pointed out that Student Senate passed a resolution calling for dorm autonom y which included the right to determine open house policy. The Student Matters Committee then asked dorms wishing to implement 24-hour open house to set up acceptable security provisions. Five house governments did so: John Quincy Adams Tower; upper, middle, lower; James House; Dwight House.

The Student Matter Committee member felt that power of the dorm to determine open house must be protected by the Student Senate.

Student Senate Secretary Pat Beharry remarked that the dorm autonomy bill was debated and passed by a quorum of 28 or by what Senator Beharry called, "a Lame-duck Senate."

Student Senate. Vice President Cindy Olken said all the "confusion" over where the open house policy stands now was caused by the Board of Trustees belief that the Student Senators at the September meeting were speaking for the student body. Senator Olken maintains that they were only expressing their own opinions.

Mr. Brubacker urged continued debate in the individual dorm governments, and attendance of all students at the open Student Senate meeting to be held tomorrow night at 7:00 in the Student Union Ballroom.

Dean Names Committee For Teacher Evaluation

By LOUIS DIMONACO
Assistant News Editor

Seymour Shapiro, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has appointed an Ad Hoc committee for the purpose of developing "as rapidly as possible a system for the evaluation of teaching."

In a statement addressed to the members of the committee, Dean Shapiro said, "General student and faculty opinion, the report of the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee, and this College's "Statement on Faculty Personnel Policy" have all devoted major attention to the importance of teaching and the parallel problem of its recognition."

He went on to say in the statement that the intial charge of the committee is to "devise a proposal for a College system for the evaluation of teaching that can be placed before the faculty for discussion and adoption, after desirable revisions, if any, have been made."

It is hoped that the committee can draw up an interim report, by Christmas, consisting of "an identification of the problems that might be involved in the creation of such a system."

Shapiro also suggested that the final recommendations be prepared for distribution to the college faculty by early spring.

Military Shutdowns Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon announced Monday that 307 more military bases in the United States and abroad will be shut down or cut back for an eventual saving of about $609 million a year.

The actions affect Army, Navy and Air Force installations in 42 states, Puerto Rico and an as yet undisclosed number of countries overseas.

The Pentagon help up disclosure of the specific bases involved while Congress is notified and consultations are held with host countries.

Details will be announced officially Wednesday morning.

When the shutdowns, reductions and consolidations are completed, the Pentagon said, there will be 37,800 fewer military positions and 27,000 fewer civilian jobs.

Base closings have been a feature of Democratic and Republican administration economy drives for nearly ten years.

Lederle To Aide Resolve

President John W. Lederle said yesterday he is "perfectly willing" to transmit to President Nixon the Faculty Senate's resolution calling for "an early and complete withdrawal of all U. S. troops from Vietnam."

The President said, "While I have not as yet received the resolution, I understand it to be a perfectly reasonable request which they are making, and I will be happy to transmit the resolution, by mail or by what other means they specify, to President Nixon."

When the Faculty Senate voted on the motion at its meeting last Thursday night, one of its members resigned from the Senate, claiming that it was against his religious reliefs to participate in any organization which becomes involved in politics.

George E. Zinsmeister, a Jehova's Witness, said however, that while he could not vote for the motion, he did object to the war. He explained, "I am a conscientious objector, but, because of my religion, I cannot participate in an organization which is in any way political."

G.E. Strike Begins, Few Incidents Seen

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nearly 40,000 employees in five of the six New England states manned picket lines Monday in the first day of a nationwide strike against the General Electric Co.

The walkout, undertaken by members of the International Union of Electrical Workers and other unions, affected GE facilities in every New England state except New Hampshire.

Only one incident was reported. At the River Works plant in Lynn, Mass., two pickets were taken into custody after a rock was thrown through the windshield of a management worker's auto. Some scuffling broke out too, but no injuries were reported, and police brought the situation under control quickly.

At the GE plant in Pittsfield, Mass., site of one of the IUE's strongest locals, all three shifts of the police force were on hand Monday morning for the start of the strike, but there was no difficulty.

At Ashland, Mass., GE officials hired 24 off-duty policemen to cope with problems, but a number of office workers crossed a 200-man picket line without incident to get to their desks.

In Providence, R.I., pickets slowed cars entering a company parking lot. A union spokesman said delaying cars was a token effort and the union did not intend to block their entry.

Picketing at the GE plant in Burlington, Vt., caused a half - mile backup in traffic entering the company's parking lots there.

The strike, over terms of a new three-year contract, also has closed plants in Cranston, R.I.; Fitchburg, Everett, and Wilmington, Mass.; Bridgeport, Conn.; and South Portland, Maine.

Margaret Meed Calls for Marijuana Legalization

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dr. Margaret Mead, dean of American anthropologists, told a Senate panel Monday that marijuana is less dangerous than alcohol, should be legalized, and 16 should be the minimum age for its use.

Later the 67-year-old scientist told newsmen she had tried marijuana once and:

"I don't find it something I need. But if I were young today I'm sure I would be using marijuana."

Dr. Mead, a specialist in primitive cultures and a student of modern health problems, told a Senate subcommittee on drug abuse that continued prohibitions against marijuana are doing greater damage to the nation than the harmful effects on those who use it to excess.

"It doesn't lead to the excesses of behavior that alcohol does," she said. "And it does not have the toxic effects of cigarettes."

She said intolerable tensions between the young and old are created when "you have the adult standing with a cocktail in one hand, a cigarette in the other, saying: 'I don't want my child to smoke pot.'"

"I think talk of marijuana leading to heroin use is sheer fabrication," she said, adding that linking marijuana to hard narcotics is "an act of social creation, just as cigarette s used to be linked to prostitution."

"It is my considered opinion that marijuana is not harmful unless used in enormous amounts over a long period of time," she said. She added there is some evidence that if smoked night and day for 20 years the substance can cause some brain deterioration.

"You can show the same thing if you do nothing but eat for 20 years," she said.

Dr. Mead's testimony was concerned mainly with mood-changing drugs - the spectrum of stimulants, sedatives and performance-improving substances.

She said that criticism of these drugs has been based mainly on cultural prejudices, especially feelings that any artificial substance that makes one feel better is bad by definition.

She drew a sharp line between the use of pills to overcome daily problems and their use to avoid coming to terms with ultimate reality, such as death.

"If a pill will permit you not to burst into tears because the car has a flat tire and you can't pick the kids up from school on time, I think it's a good idea," she said.

When asked, she said LSD is a dangerous drug. But she predicted that within the next 15 years a mind-expanding drug will be developed that will produce the same effects as LSD but be safe to use.

She said other drugs used by young people - she mentioned amphetamines and barbiturates as examples - might be less dangerous if society didn't prohibit them. "They're like bathtub gin," she said of drugs often cheaply produced in unregulated laboratories.

Sly to be Penalized For Breaking Contract

By DICK KLINE
Special to the MDC

Sly and the Family Stone's trip to UMass was a real bummer for a lot of people. It was a Homecoming concert that people will take a long time forgetting, especially Homecoming '69 Chairman Jerry Burke.

"Sly was more trouble than he was worth," said Burke reflecting on the evening that Sly appeared. "He did his best to singlehandedly reek havoc on Homecoming weekend."

The Homecoming Chairman revealed that the Homecoming Committee has decided to take action against Sly for his actions a week ago last Saturday night. "We think that we have sufficient grounds for legal action," he stated. "But we don't plan on bringing him to court."

"Sly and the Family Stone did perform and we had to pay the group their flat fee," Burke explained. "We did decide, though, that the $4500 of ticket sale percentage that the group would normally receive should be withheld."

Relating problems of the weekend, Burke said "We were about twenty seconds away from cancelling the show when Sly went on. He was an hour and a half late setting up his equipment and he actually arrived over an hour after the contract had called for."

The results were almost disasterous. By the time the second show was over the restless crowd had caused over $400 in damage to the Cage and equipment, five people had to be sent to the infirmary, and "untold inconvenience for thousands of people was the least of the problems."

"Sly broke virtually every time clause in his contract including performing for less time than specified for the first show," Burke stated.

"The other two performers were just great," the Chairman said of Vivian Reed and Tony Joe White. "They were really understanding and cooperative as well as being fine performers."

"Sly, on the other hand, was extremely arrogant and difficult to work with. It must have taken gall for him to demand his check before he had performed for the second show. After fifteen minutes of stalling he realized that we weren't going to give it to him until after he was on and finally went out to perform."

"He even demanded $50 in cash from Tony Joe White for the use of his amplifier during the concert," Burke continued. "Sly's whole attitude was disgusting."

"I wish we had known that he pulled a similar stunt at the University of Rhode Island about three weeks ago," Burke said. "He came there three hours late, performed for less time than contracted for, and the Director of Student Activities labeled him 'most uncooperative'. URI is trying to get a rebate from Sly's agent in New York, William Morris Agency. If they don't get it I'm sure they'll take legal action."

The high paying college tour circuit may soon be out of bounds for Sly and Family. "We're going to do our best to warn other colleges and universities about Sly," Burke stated. "And maybe they won't have to suffer through all the grief that we did."

There will be a Student Senate election held November 6, 1969 in Brooks House, since the last election was voided. Papers are available now through October 30, in the RSO office. For further information contact Dawn Dudash, Senate office.

CCEBS Program Boosted by Ford Grant

CCEBS, the program for disadvantaged black students at UMass has chalked up some important gains this year, including a $356,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

CCEBS stands for Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black Students, which began last year as a largely experimental effort by a volunteer group of black faculty trying to help black students in this state overcome financial and academic barriers to attendance at the University.

This year, it has more students, a more effectively organized tutorial and counseling program, an administrative staff and over three quarters of a million dollars in funds from federal, state, foundation and other sources.

"It's become a financial and academic asset to the University," said CCEBS chairman R.W. Bromery, also head of the UMass geology department. "It helps support some 60 graduate students who serve as tutors, has brought black students to the predominantly white Amherst campus and in its two years has brought more than a half-million dollars in federal and foundation support to the University."

The Ford Foundation has called CCEBS "the best program of its type in the country," according to Dr. Bromery. "They say our retention rate is far above that of similar programs and think that CCEBS will serve as a model program for others throughout the country," he added.

This year, in addition to the $356,000 Ford grant, $132,950 comes from the federal Economic Opportunity Grant program, $30,000 comes from UMass student funds appropriated by the Student Senate and $300,000 comes from a state appropriation.

The CCEBS faculty group last year recruited a pioneer class of 125 black freshmen. This year, there are 290 students - 185 freshmen and 105 black as sophomores from the original class.

This year's tutorial program is under a new faculty director of tutorial counseling and has some 60 graduate students under special fellowships to tutor in basic subjects. The director is Dr. Cass B. Turner, assistant professor of psychology.

The emphasis in tutoring is moving toward what Dr. Turner calls the "shared learning concept" through increased use of group sessions. "This provides two valuable things in tutoring: building a community and helping the student," Turner explained. Another innovation is tutoring by CCEBS students who are proficient enough to do so. "When they reach a certain level they are fed back into the system," Turner explained.

Recruiting of the 1970 class is already underway by John Childs of the UMass admissions office. The goal is 250 students. Overall administration of the program is under administrative director Dallas Darland, a staff assistant to UMass Provost Oswald Tippo.

The CCEBS faculty group headed by Dr. Bromery is now a policy making body.

Though the program has grown, the basic idea has not changed, Dr. Bromery said. It was and is "to bring in a large number of black students and to provide academic and financial support. It's aimed primarily at those black students who have been denied a primary and secondary school education of a quality that would enable them to compete at the freshman level with the white students on campus."

Dr. Bromery concluded: "The CCEBS group is convinced that the student participants in its program are definitely a financial and academic asset to the University community."

Cornell Gets Diciplinary Rule

Cornell University students will participate in the trying and punishing of faculty members under a new disciplinary system at the Ithaca, New York institution.

According to Cornell President, Dr. Dale R. Corson, the new disciplinary regulations establish "a separate category of offenses - namely misconduct sufficiently serious to constitute a violation or threat to maintenance of public order." This category will apply to faculty, administrators, and other staff members, as well as students.

Any disciplinary cases which in the opinion of the University's judicial administrator fall under the new category, will be referred to a special hearing board. The board is to have 11 members - 4 faculty members, 4 students, an administrator, a member of the academic staff, and a member of the non-academic staff.

The faculty will elect its representatives to the board. As yet there has been no decision as to how the other members, including students will be chosen.

The hearing board will be able to hand out punishments ranging to expulsion in the case of students and dismissal in the case of faculty members.

Free University "Alive," Gains Five Room Suite

It's tents have been blown down, but Free University City still lives.

Seymore Shapiro, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has donated five rooms in South College for Free University classes during the cold-weather months ahead. And small seminars conducted by students and faculty members are being planned for the upcoming weeks.

Spokesmen for the City also indicate that FUC is planning several special programs, details of which will be released soon.

A Trial of Need

The UMass School of Education has encroached on a new era in education this year by the institution of the pass-fail system. The pass-fail system, one of the many new inovations introduced by the School of Education under the very capable direction of Dean Dwight Allen, is without doubt one of the major experiments in the educational field today.

"Eliminating grades will give students more incentive to study an aspect of a course that interests them," said Robert L. Woodbury, assistant dean for special program development of the School of Education. The importance of this statement cannot be over emphasized. It is many times the case where a student will have a real interest in a small area of a course that he is taking, but because of the enormity of material to be covered and that always present fear of that final alphabetical placement determinant; the incentive to probe deeper is destroyed.

Most opponents of the pass-fail system use the rational that students will be more able to exploit the system or sneak through with a minimum of work under the system. Though this could very well be the case with a few students who really have no desire to learn anything anyway and who would have probably been able to find short cuts even without this system; one must not overlook the students for whom this system as well as the whole educational system was contrived for, namely, the students who want to learn.

In many cases such a system might even inspire some of the "sneak through" students to become more involved in the processes of a real education.

We hope that this experiment is an ultimate success, and that as a result of its success other schools in the University will give it a try for the sake of all the students.

An Exposed Lie

There have been many and varied, subtle and not so subtle statements made to the effect that the Orchard Hill residential area has been for the last year an unsafe place (to put it mildly) to walk alone (especially if you are a co-ed) after dark. This writer finds such statements completely unfounded, if for no other reason than for the simple fact that such reports seem to sharply conflict with the campus police crime books on muggings and rapes in that area.

It seems that there is, in fact, a certain element on this campus which is trying to sway the general mass of UMass students into believing by whatever dubious means that because of the fact that there was a higher concentration of black students on the Hill last year; there was correspondly a higher rate of felonious attacks in that area.

Such rash generalizations and untruths have gone unchallenged too long. To say that the incident of crime in a certain area of this campus has gone up with the increase in enrollment of black students is a LIE. And to attribute to the black students crimes which they have had no part in through whatever underhanded, back-stabbine methods employed by these liars, is nothing short of couradous personal attack on an innocent group. It would also seem that people who feel it necessary to vent their inert bigotry would do so in a more direct and open manner rather than stooping to the back-alley back-stabbing methods with which they cringingly accuse groups already exploited to the endth.

Police: A Societal Need

To the editor:

My letter is a response to the editorial "Natty Blue Business" which appeared in Friday's edition of the COLLEGIAN. My retortions are addressed to the statements:

(1) "UMass doesn't need pill-boxes and it doesn't need policement."

(2) "My poem is intended to call attention to the absurdity of an academic community becoming an employer of police and inventing absurd laws for those police to enforce."

(3) The examples of "a perfectly harmless and entertaining prankster" and "ticketing cars of those unfortunate enough to need the services of the infirmary.'

Allow me to respond to each of these points step-by-step, as these formed the mere essence of the article and the rest was merely an expansion on their explicit emotionally-laden content.

First, the university may not need pill-boxes, but it certainly needs policemen. For all of the shortcomings of the police force - and indeed there are many - there remains a need for men who are appointed with the task of maintaining the safety and protection of some 18,000 students, as well as visitors, faculty, and employees of campus work forces. This is simply due to the fact that society itself needs laws to help govern very basic human relationships and to grant each individual person some modicum of protection to exercise rights guaranteed by our constitution. Certainly this sounds highly idealistic because of the ever-present human elements involved. Yet, without the presence of men trained for the work of maintaining some tenuous balance of order to the law - and JUSTICE for each person involved - society at large, and our own university community as well, could barely hope to function and to provide everyone with guaranteed rights and privileges to exercise personal freedoms. Does my inclusion of JUSTICE surprise you?

Second, the laws formulated by the academic community are not absurd. They have emerged from careful consideration of the human needs facing this community as an educational establishment. At UMass, there are the student and faculty senates comprised of duly elected officials who have been vested with the responsibilities of enacting these laws and governing their enforcement. If one law proves to be unjust, there are legitimate channels through which individual reformers and groups may seek to rectify problems. It is up to them to take advantage of the means available for voicing dissent and for providing alternatives wherever necessary.

Third, take the two examples used to illustrate "absurdity of law". Consider this possibility. What if several dozen pranksters, instead of one, decided to invade the athletic field and disrupt some perfectly legitimate activity taking place? It would take scarcely a half-dozen such nincompoops to throw the entire performance into a state of confusion and perhaps lead to a major disturbance within the stadium. And this latter possibility is not so far removed from the imagination considering the amount of liquor consumption which goes on in the stands during the games. It's a wonder some major riot hasn't broken out long before now. Did you happen to realize that there's a state law against that sort of thing? Maybe when one of those thoroughly drenched souses accidentally bops you over the head with his ever-faithful hip flask you will then be thankful such a law exists and that there is an agency appointed to enforce it.

As for the second example, that requires another solution and certainly more parking lots would be the answer. A temporary solution might be the issuance of special dated tickets to mark the cars of those who must make use of the infirmary. Until such a measure or a similar one is taken, who's to tell what car belongs to an ailing patient or to an outsider bumming free space?

In conclusion, let me say: our law enforcement agencies are truly in need of reform. But such tawdry editorials and accompanying nursery rhymes as appear in the DAILY COLLEGIAN are hardly steps toward a solution. Neither are masses of football fans who can only scream "Pig!" and give the finger to men who are trying their best to balance the scales of justice in some small way.

The problems - and the solutions - start with society. You, my friend, are a person and, by reason of that fact, a part of society. It's up to you to do something more than waste valuable newsprint for mulling over puerile examples of the problems we can face and overcome in a more realistic fashion.

What is Stockbridge?

To those misinformed bewildered students of the University who ask this question, I would like to brief you about our School. Stockbridge School of Agriculture is part of, and affiliated with, the College of Agriculture and the University. Graduates receive the Associate Degree. The School was founded in 1918 and has over 5,000 alumni. Stockbridge is rated as one of the best 2 year Agricultural Colleges in the nation.

Students may select 1 of 13 programs of study. Courses are taught by the University staff. Particular emphasis is put on the Sciences of each course and on practical laboratory work. Five of these courses require freshmen to hold summer placement jobs for 5 months, and the other courses require about 3 months.

Although limited to 600 students, Stockbridge is an important part of, and a credit to, this University. The successful careers of our graduates are the best proof available as to the value of this kind of concentrated and technical education.

Hanke-Quint Curriculum Reform Proposal

(Ed. Note: The following is the text of a proposal for a revision of requirements for the Bachelor of Arts Degree in the College of Arts and Sciences. The authors of the proposal are Lewis Hanke and Howard H. Quint of the History department. This is just one of several proposals now being discussed by the faculty in the line of curriculum reform.)

One of the distinguishing features of a liberal education is that it has no single definition. Rather than prescribe which specific courses must be taken by all students, the College of Arts and Sciences requires that each student seeking the Bachelor of Arts degree design his own program of study, suited to his own particular needs and interests, from the multitude of courses available in the University. Similarly, each department will determine the nature of the program for students majoring in its field. Both students and departments will observe the regulations cited below in the selection of courses.

The 120 credits required for the B.A. degree shall be distributed as follows:

1. Each student must take a minimum of 6 credits in each of the three divisions of the College: Humanities, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Physical and Biological Sciences.

2. Each student must take a minimum of 75 credits outside the department of his major, of which at least 30 credits must be taken in the College outside the division in which his major falls.

A maximum of 15 credits may be taken outside the College of Arts and Sciences.

3. Each department will establish its own requirements concerning its major.

4. If non-departmental major or other special programs are approved by the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences, they will be regarded as the equivalent of a departmental major and their curricula will be governed by the specific requirements of such programs.

5. On entering the College, each student must take a proficiency examination* in English composition. Those students displaying a deficiency will be required to take non-credit remedial work.

*Such as the College Entrance Examination Board "Achievement Test in English Composition".

Mysticism to Be Discussed By Berkeley Expert Tonight

Beginning at 7:30 tonight, Dr. Allan Y. Cohen will discuss the rapidly growing influence of eastern mysticism in western cultures. Dr. Cohen a former research associate to Dr.'s Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert, is now a consulting psychologist at the University of California in Berkeley, and Professor of Psychology at newly chartered John F. Kennedy University.

The lecture-discussion will cover a wide variety of topics including drug use and abuse as related to the emerging crisis in, and search for, individual self-identity in our rapidly changing, fast-moving, and vastly complex culture. Not only are Dr. Cohen's lectures intellectually well-founded, but perhaps more importantly, his presentations are warm and spontaneous, creating almost immediately the feeling of empatny and enthusiasm within his audiences.

His experiences with drugs have been extensive, having taken LSD and related psychedelic chemicals more than thirty times. After splitting with the' "psychedelic utopians", rejecting the use of drugs as a means toward personal growth, Dr. Cohen proceeded to investigate alternative methods of unfolding consciousness.

The lecture will include several short films, and considerable time will be given over to audience discussion and questions. It will be held in the Student Union Ballroom beginning at 7:30 p.m. There will be no charge for admission.

Phi Beta Kappa Scholar Speaks Today

Professor Walter J. Ong, S.J. of the English Department of Saint Louis University, noted Renaissance scholar and student of communications and contemporary culture, will lead two colloquia today, as part of his two-day stay as Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar.

At 3:00 p.m. in Memorial Hall he will speak on "Media and Message in Shakespeare's World." Ong, who contributed to the volume McLUHAN HOT AND COOL, has long investigated the kinds of cultural relationships that have lately become the central concern of Marshall McLuhan and a group around him. Students in courses in Shakespeare have been specially invited, and others are welcome too.

At 8:15 p.m. in SBA 120 Fr. Ong will lead a discussion of "Intellectual Freedom and Religious Commitment." Himself a noted scholar and Jesuit priest, Ong sees clearly the problems involved, and has discussed them at length in several of his books.

LET GO - Redman halfback Jerry Grasso(22) is grabbed from behind by Connecticut end Ralph Tiner(83).

Redmen Within Game of YC Crown

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

Indeed, the UMass football team has returned to glory. An emotional, come-from-behind win, a UConn game they had to win, clinched it. And they did it with nothing more than solid, hard-hitting football, and a second half that was virtually letter perfect.

The Redmen are within one game of their fifth Yankee Conference gridiron championship in seven years. Such are traditions made of. UMass is beginning to look like the pre-Henry Finkel Boston Celtics. No individual stars (UConn has them all) and not too flashy, but when everything is over, there are the Redmen drinking gatorade out of another Beanpot.

Connecticut has a wealth of talent, and Vin Clements, a do-everything junior halfback, is the crown jewel. UMass did not stop Clements completely, but he never busted things loose, and had a personal convoy of Umass admirers following him from sideline to sideline.

The Umass defense has got stronger as the season gets longer and they outdid themselves against the favored Huskies. Bill de Flavio, Andy Guarino, Curt Bristol, Tom York, Paul Toner, Bill Sroka, and the rest of their defensive line cohorts, stopped the vaunted U-Conn rushing attack to the tune of a whopping 37 yards. And when the Huskies decided to throw, the ball-hawking Redmen intercepted five times and came dangerously close to picking off three more.

But it was the second half comeback that caught most of the headlines. Actually, anything short of fielding the cheerleaders would have been a comeback from the first half. The defense was adequate in that first 30 minutes that seemed to last 30 days. But the offense was as futile as trying to track down Paul McCartney.

Then there was the second half, and "the docile Indians were transformed into the fighting Redmen" to use the innocuous phrase of an observer. The question that immediately arises is what was said at halftime.

Says Coach Vic Fusia, "I just told them to stop running around hysterically. This is a game of emotion, not hysteria. They just had to calm down."

Fusia did not change anything. The team did that by not making mistakes. He says of his defense, "They have kept getting better all the time. The mistakes they made before, they don't make anymore."

The coach is definitely enjoying the Redman switch in fortunes. "I have liked this team from the start. It is even more satisfying for myself and the rest of the coaching staff to see the way they have come back from two early defeats. And the change from last year is a great one. Our spirit and attitude have been excellent."

So it's just like the good old days in Boyden, with another Beanpot within grasp. A win over Vermont and the Redmen will have two weeks to think about B.C.

Who ever heard of 1968 anyway? REDMAN RANTINGS - The great performance by UMass spread all the way from the team to a huge contingent of fans who went to Storrs, and as ticket manager Wally Novak said, "We would have sold a lot more tickets"...The biggest plaudits have to be given to the Redman marching band, whose superb halftime show won a standing ovation from the record UConn crowd. Steve Rogers is now, along with a bunch of others, third in the country with five interceptions this season....The Redman safety now has 18 career interceptions, a UMass record....Craig Lovell continues to score while coming off the bench, for the third straight game....Steve Parnell had his best game to date returning kicks 40, 42, and 20 yards while catching three passes in key situations....Tim Adams completed eight passes in the second half for 124 yards....UMass fans chanted "We're number one" the last couple of minutes of playing time....And thanks to the wonderful lady in blue who fed a starving press corps in the parking lot following the game.

ONE HANDED! - UMass safety Steve Rogers (45) seems to be teasing UConn's Kraham while returning an interception in Saturday's 28-7 win. (MDC photo by Ken Emery).

Rugby practice will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 p.m. An announcement will be made on Tuesday setting new practice times for Eastern Standard Time. All players must report on Tuesday, otherwise call Brian Leach.

Ruggers Get First Win, 5-0

The UMass RFC took the measure of the rugby club from Colgate University in posting their first win of the season, 5-0. Colgate's loss put them at 3-2 for the season.

The contest spent its early minutes with Colgate pressing deep in UMass territory, but once the ball was cleared from the end zone by a long kick to touch by fullback Brian Leach, the UMass forward took control of the game. Massachusetts had its first scoring opportunity as a penalty kick which went awry. The only scoring in the game came on a 55 yard run by wing Frank Desiata, Laurence kicked a very difficult conversion to set the score at 5-0. In the second half, with a wind advantage, UMass maintained their pressing play and controlled much of the game. On several occasions, the UMass wings nearly broke away, but the only serious scoring threat mustered was a kick blocked by Jim Vilkitis' right eye and recovered in the end zone by the Redmen, but the score was denied by the referee, claiming a knock-on. Sterling performances were given by forwards Willie Frisbee, Don Chamberlayne, Vilkitis, and backs Desiata, Conturi and Ed Magiera.

The UMass "B's" lost to Colgate's "B's", 6-3, in a close, well played contest. Colgate scored a try in the first half, missed the conversion and led 3-0. With a minute left in the first half, UMass was awarded a penalty kick. Ed Chamberlayne missed his attempt. Play between the two clubs was quite even in the second half with Colgate scoring on a penalty kick putting the score at 6-0. UMass came back quickly and drove Ed Higgins over for the try he was denied last week. The conversion failed and UMass trailed 3-6. The UMass forwards kept pressing and were threatening at the end of the game. Standout play was supplied by Mike Balfe, Jess Kane and Niggins.

The UMass RFC faces the Boston Rugby Club in Boston next Saturday. The improvement demonstrated in the win over Colgate will have to be continued if UMass hopes to topple the premier club in New England rugby.

Fixture Secretary Brian Leach announced plans to play the Freeport Rugby Club on Grand Bahama Island, B.W.I., in early spring, quite likely during the spring break. Leach also announced that plans are set for the First Annual New England Rugby Football Union Tournament to be held here at UMass on May 9-10, 1970. Twenty-two clubs from the New England area have been invited. Among them are Brown, Boston College, Dartmouth, and Amherst.

Frosh Booters Win, 2-1

In one of the roughest games of the season, the UMass freshman soccer team downed the UConn frosh, 2-1, Friday afternoon.

All three goals were scored in the first period. Left winger Jeff Hague put the Little Redmen in front, as he tucked a well placed shot inside the left post through a screen of players. UConn however came right back with an indirect free kick from inside the penalty area.

Little Redman goalie Bill Leary took care the rest of the way as he stopped everything that came his way, including some hard-charging UConn players.

For the rest of the game, the Huskies rotated two complete teams in a futile attempt to wear down UMass. The Little Redmen suffered a key injury when fullback star Dave Ollilette was injured in a pileup in the penalty area. However, Brad Powell and Phil McKeague came off the bench and did a good job in the substitute role.

UMass has two tough ones this week to remain undefeated. They meet always tough Trinity at home on Wednesday and then travel to meet the rugged Springfield frosh Friday.

Ohio State Retains Top Ranking

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Penn State and Florida gained the most ground among the Top Ten teams. Notre Dame moved in among the elite and Ohio State maintained a commanding lead Monday in The Associated Press' major-college football poll.

Penn State and Florida each rushed up three places, the Nittany Lions to fifth and the Gators to seventh. Notre Dame, 12th a week ago, advanced to the No. 10 position. Penn State crushed Ohio University, 42-3, Florida beat Vanderbilt 41-20 and Notre Dame walloped Tulane, 37-0 last Saturday. There were no changes among the first four teams as Ohio State held first place followed by Texas, Tennessee and Arkansas.

In the balloting by a national panel of 39 sports writers and broadcasters, the Buckeyes collected 35 first-place votes and 772 points. Texas drew two votes for the top spot and 692 points while Tennessee accumulated 570 points and Arkansas 547. All four teams have 5-0 records.

The Buckeyes beat Illinois 41-0, Texas defeated Rice 31-0, Tennessee was idle and Arkansas trounced Wichita State, 52-14.

Missouri's 31-20 loss to Colorado caused some of the switching around. The Tigers, ranked fifth last week, tumbled to 14th. Southern California advanced one position to sixth after downing Georgia Tech. Louisiana State also climbed one place to eighth although it struggled to beat Auburn, 21-20. UCLA slipped from sixth to ninth after its 20-20 standoff against Stanford.

Colorado and Michigan are the newly-rated teams with Colorado taking over 18th place and the Wolverines, 35-9 victor over Minnesota, slipping into 20th. Oklahoma and Mississippi dropped out of the Top 20 after the Sooners' 59-21 setback by Kansas State and Ole Miss' 25-11 defeat by Houston.

The Top 20 with first place votes in parentheses, and points for the first 15 picks on a 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8- etc. basis:

1.	Ohio State 35	772
2.	Texas 2	692
3.	Tennessee 1	570
4.	Arkansas	547
5.	Penn State 1	453
6.	Southern California	396

Kennedy Cancels Trade

NEW YORK (AP) - Commissioner Walter Kennedy of the National Basketball Association canceled the recent transaction that sent Sam Williams from Milwaukee to Los Angeles and directed Monday that the player be returned immediately to the Bucks' active roster.

The Bucks assigned Williams, a second-year guard, to the Lakers last Monday as final payment for guard Fred Crawford.

"There was misunderstanding about certain restrictive clauses contained in Williams' contract," Kennedy said. "When John Erickson, general manager of the Bucks, and Fred Schaus, general manager of the Lakers, could not mutually agree on a solution, they asked me to arbitrate, both agreeing to accept my decision without reservation.

Mystics, Youth Ask Question; Who Am I?

By SUE GERSON
Wednesday Issue Editor

'Who am I!' and 'What's it all about' are the key issues behind drugs and mysticism, said Dr. Allan Cohen, consulting pyschologist at Berkeley, who spoke to a packed Ballroom in the Student Union last night.

Dr. Cohen began his speech, entitled "Drugs, mysticism and the mind - the mystery of consciousness", by talking about his own start with drugs. As a graduate student at Harvard, his first class was taught by Timothy Leary and Richard Albert, who were just learning about LSD and offered to have the whole class learn with them. Cohen took them up on the offer.

"In this culture it's one hundred percent natural to take drugs", he explained. When adults get upset, they take the advice of TV ads and take pills for headaches, nervous tension and constipation. Young people are perhaps following this example of "drug" use set by their parents.

Also, all the dissatisfaction with today's world on the part of the young leads them to take mind expanding drugs to help them perceive better what they see.

But drugs do not help one to see things better, Dr. Cohen stated. According to the mystic Meher Baba, "Drugs are physically, mentally and spiritually harmful."

"The experience under Psychedelics was in fact a mirage that one would take for reality. It would blur your vision as to what you really could be," Cohen said.

Cohen said he realized he was being 'faked out' by drugs when he saw that drugs did not expand the consciousness, they just altered it. This was when he stopped turning on.

Once on the subject of Old Eastern philosophy, Dr. Cohen began to speak with admiration about the mystic from India, Meher Baba, who's name stands for the 'Compassionate Father'.

'Who am I!' is also the key question for the mystic. The answer to this and other questions of philosophy tends to get pretty deep. Cohen said that the answer to this question is developed in four phases: I am my body, I am my emotions, I am my mind and I am my consciousness, which is aware of my body, my emotions and my mind and identifies with them.

"You have enough consciousness," said Cohen. "It simply has to be cleared."

When people in India heard about the American use of drugs they laughed, Cohen explained, because "we were trying to create an internal state of awareness by external means."

The mystics also stress that 'Love is where it's at.' "Love is the basic force in the universe," Dr. Cohen said. The two facets of love, attraction and the desire to move toward cohesion, make even gravity and eating forms of love. The former is attraction and the latter is a merger of man or animal and his food.

The love game is one of self-consciousness, says Cohen, since lover and belived should become one in the highest form of love.

The remainder of the lecture was devoted to ennumeration upon Meher Baba and his life. Two films showing the silent mystic Baba, who communicates with hand gestures by choice, preceded a question and answer period which concluded the evening.

How Much Power Do Students Have?
Student Senate Meeting To Discuss Open Houses

The Student Senate will hold an open discussion on 24-hour open house and dorm determination at its meeting tonight, in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:00 p.m.

The question of open house, which was debated at a meeting in Southwest Monday night has become, according to some Senators, an issue symbolizing the role which students are being allowed to assume in determining their own life styles by the Board of Trustees.

The Senate public relations committee has released the following facts about tonight's meeting.

The Senate in its September meetings voted and passed a bill going on the assumption that there was no formal open-house policy for this year. In an effort to stop a potentially anarchic situation, the Senate asked that all houses wanting 24 hr. open house, to present to the Student Matters Committee security proposals for implementation.

Whether or not the Senate acted in "good faith" or "honesty" is now not the important question. The Senate, in its actions, has aggravated a potentially explosive issue: How much power do students have? Where should it (if any) lie? How should we utilize it for the benefit of the students and the whole university community? Is the relationship with the Trustees worth preserving? Is the traditional process of change worth preserving?

These questions have been brought out and must be answered before anything can be done. The Senate feels the responsibility to either answer these questions itself or to at least set up communications where these questions can be answered.

G.E. Strike Continues; May Last Until Christmas

Several minor incidents, resulting in five arrests, were reported Tuesday in New England during the second day of a nation-wide strike against General Electric Co.

Picket lines were reported thinner than on Monday as 40,000 G.E. employees in five of the six New England states remained out of work. Only New Hampshire was not affected.

At a GE stockholders' national meeting in Minneapolis, Herman L. Weiss, a company executive officer, said he had heard indirectly that 13 striking unions were prepared to stay out until Christmas. The strike is being spearheaded by GE's two largest unions, the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the independent Union of Electrical Workers.

About 3,000 pickets confronted half that many salaried personnel across a 100-foot-wide street in Schenectady, where GE has its largest plant. Eggs were hurled at the pickets.

Police waded in with nightsticks to prevent the nonstriking employees from charging the picket line. Police Chief John Murphy said he feared mass violence and added: "We could not let them across the street."

GE reported all of its 280 plants in 33 states were open, but production was at a halt in an undetermined number of them. At least 25 plants were not struck - either because they were manned by non-union members or had union contracts that ran beyond the Sunday midnight expiration date of most. In addition, the company said some workers have crossed picket lines.

The company claimed about 125,000 of its 310,000 employees were on strike. The unions, which represent 147,000 GE production employees said at least 132,000 were out.

Meanwhile, the IUE and the UE were giving attention also to negotiations with another industry giant, Westinghouse Electric Corp. where contracts expire Nov. 9.

The union demand from GE a 90 cents an hour increase in a 30-month contract - 35 cents the first year, 30 cents the second, and 25 cents in the final six months, plus up to 50 cents additional for special skills.

OH Gov't. to Stand Pat Until Trustees Meeting

Last night in a special emergency meeting of the Orchard Hill Residential College Area Government, a major decision was reached as to this area's student mood.

It is contained in a resolution passed by an overwhelming majority of members of the Government stating that in effect, Orchard Hill will stand pat on any legislation involving social matters until the Trustees meeting at the SWAP conference in Lee, Mass., on November 14, 1969. The text of the resolution reads:

"We, the duly elected members of the Orchard Hill Residential College Area Government do hereby agree to delay legislation of any social policies pending the outcome of the next meeting of the Trustees (Nov. 14)."

This in effect states that this Area government will not institute any policies solely decided upon by the Student Senate until the Trustees make a decision on social policies of some sort at their next meeting.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

(AP) - Picket line violence broke out in five cities Tuesday on the second day of the nationwide strike against General Electric Co., the nation's fourth largest company. The strike is affecting at least 125,000 production employes.

At the company's large Schenectady, N.Y. plant, police wielding clubs beat back three white collar workers who sought to cross picket lines. Police said they feared mass violence would erupt if they did not stop the attempted crossing.

There were minor picket line flarups also in Bloomington, Ind., Lynn and Pittsfield, Mass., and in Collingdale, Pa. But picketing of company plants in some 30 states was generally peaceful.

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Harold Wilson clashed bitterly Tuesday with his Conservative challenger, Edward Heath, over the Labor government's lawmaking plans laid before a new session of Britain's Parliament.

The score of social reform and modernization legislative measures, seen together, had the look of an election manifesto. Most authorities expect Wilson to set a national ballot either for the spring or fall of 1970 in the hope of winning another five-year term.

SAIGON (AP) - The current lull in the Vietnam war, with its attendant low casualties, is likely to continue four to eight weeks. This is the appraisal of ranking civilian and military officials in Saigon.

Although the lull may be punctuated by high points or by localized flareups, the war planners evidently believe Hanoi currently is attempting to build its capabilities but is uncommitted to any over-all offensive plans.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fourteen railroad labor unions opposed key points in the administration's rail safety bill Tuesday while the industry hailed it as a "workable solution to the safety problem."

"If this bill is adopted it will be quite clear that the old piecemeal approach to railroad safety is at last off the books," said Thomas H. Goodman of the Association of American railroads.

SAIGON (AP) - American military authorities said Tuesday the U.S. Command will respond affirmatively to any Viet Cong offer for a battlefield meeting to turn over three American prisoners of war.

"No question about it," a spokesman said. He noted that in a similar case last winter, the Americans had agreed to go "anywhere, anytime" for the return of prisoners and said the offer still stands.

Firm Given Gov't Contracts Linked to Mafia, Says Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Pennsylvania manufacturing firm linkec to the Mafia by a Senate subcommittee has won millions of dollars in defense contracts from the Pentagon.

Medico Industries Inc. of Pittston, Pa., currently is working on a $4 millio n contract to produce parts for rocket warheads used extensively in Vietnam.

Since 1966, the firm has received about $12 million in Army, Navy and Air Force contracts. Pentagon records indicate it has performed well on all its defense work.

Medico Industries' present contracts do not involve a classified material. However, a Pentagon spokesman said the firm and its principal officers had a security clearance from Jan. 28, 1968, tc June 20, 1968. It was terminated at the company's request - a request which Pentagon sources said came after security officials asked for additional information about its officers.

The company's name has cropped up in the organized crime investigations of a Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark.

In 1964 McClellan's subcommittee listed Medico Electric Meter Co., later to become known as Medico Industries, as a principal hangout of Russell A. Bufalino, whom it described as "one of the most ruthless and powerful leaders of the Mafia in the United States."

William Medico, former president and now general manager of Medico Industries, was listed in the same report as among the "criminal associates" of Bufalino.

Bufalino has been battling deportation since 1952. According to the McClellan committee's 1964 report, the Sicilian-born Mafia leader has been active in narcotics trafficking, labor racketeering, and dealing in stolen jewels and furs. Last year, Bufalino was charged with transporting stolen television sets across state lines.

Investigators say Bufalino and Medico have been friends since Bufalino moved to Pittston from Buffalo, N.Y., in 1958.

In a telephone interview, Medico said he has no business interests with Bufalino. He said he has known Bufalino all his life.

As for the McClellan committee report that Bufalino frequents the Medico plant, Medico said, "Sure he comes to see us. We're selling him equipment; he's a customer. I can't tell him to get the hell out."

The information made public in McClellan's investigations and from FBI files has had no apparent effect in Medico Industries' standing as a defense contractor.

Violence Flares In Italian Cities

A thousand policemen patrolled Pisa after a night of bloody violence left one dead and more than 100 injured in the famous city of the Leaning Tower.

The riot, Italy's worst civil disorder in seven months, set off violence in other cities, enraged militant students, rocked Parliament, and spotlighted a recent wave of agitation by extremists.

It came amid a massive onslaught of labor strife that saw the center of Rome paralyzed Tuesday by a demonstration of 25,000 construction workers. The industrial center of Milan was gripped by a water shortage and traffic chaos as the result of a strike by 18,000 municipal employees.

It was Italy's tensest day in a season of unrest that some commentators have likened uneasily to the days preceding Benito Mussolini's accession to power on Oct. 28, 1922.

Bombarded by demands for action from leftist and rightist Parliament members, Interior Minister Franco Restivo told the Senate that the Pisa violence was touched off by extremists who sought to "perturb souls and exasperate passions." Leftist youths had battled the police in Pisa after being blocked from raiding the local Fascist party headquarters.

SDS to Picket Against G.E. At Whitmore

SDS is planning tc ket in front of Whitmore Administra...n Building Thursday morning in support of striking General Electric workers. Their action is prompted by the scheduled appearance of a G.E. recruiter on campus that same day.

Plans call for picket lines to be formed and leaflets handed out protesting what the group feels to be unfair labor conditions practiced by General Electric. The demonstration will begin at 9:00.

Arab Guerillas In Lebanon Demand Freedom of Action

(AP) - Guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat dashed hopes Tuesday for a negotiated settlement of the violent conflict between his Arab commandos and the Lebanese army. Scattered fighting was reported throughout Lebanon.

"We fedayeen guerrillas will be inflexible in any peace talks or negotiations with the Lebanese authorities as far as the complete freedom of action of guerrilla operations and movements is concerned," the Al Fatah commander told a news conference in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

"I am doubtful," he said, "if any talks can be held." Arafat accused the United States of meddling in the Lebanese-guerrilla crisis.

Lebanon, fearful that guerrilla raids from its territory will bring painful Israeli retaliation, has been demanding that the guerrillas coordinate their activities with the Lebanese army. An army crackdown on the guerrillas last week triggered the crisis in which at least 30 persons have been killed and scores more wounded.

As Arafat spoke, Lebanon's army commander in chief, Gen. Emile Boustany, flew to Cairo for talks with President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt. Arafat declined to say whether he would go to Cairo or send a representative. The Cairo talks were intended to pave the way for negotiations between the disputants.

Do Your Own Thing

School of Ed. Experiments With Module Credit Concept

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

Under a new program at the school of Education, students are able to receive credit for participating in "educational experiences" outside of the traditional concept of classroom academics.

"Students can now receive credit for participating in experiences ranging from teaching in the Northampton city jail to editing a newspaper," grad student Paul Christianson explains.

The student is awarded anywhere from 1-20 "modules" of credit for each experience in which he participates. 15 modules equal one University credit.

Students are limited to taking 45 modules a semester, or three credits, in this program.

"Even with this limit," Christianson says, "Students will be able to get full course credit for doing something that interests them. This is truly an experiment which makes education relevant to individual students."

Students outside the School of Education are welcome to participate in the program. Christianson explains that they must submit their topic to the School of Education, but that the topic may deal with anything which interests the students, so long as it in someway relates to education.

Christianson explains that this program was developed at the School of Education's "the year of planning" last year, and that a committee, the Modular Arbitration Committee, has been established to review the program and its experiences throughout the year.

One of the more interesting offerings of the program of education majors, Christianson explains, "is the ability of Education majors to participate in any of the Five College Cooperation Lecture series, and receive one module of credit.

Free University to Hold Open Meeting

Free University City broke its long period of silence today with the announcement that an open meeting will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the new headquarters on the third floor of South College (old comp. Lit. office).

The purpose of the meeting is to plan new and more effective means of implementing the goals of city members.

City members stressed that they felt dome construction drew attention to important issues, but acknowledged that the domes had failed to bring about any substantive changes in the University education. They say, however, that hopefully certain spin-off activities that are arising directly from the dome city venture will have a clear effect on the quality of student's lives.

Activities that are to be discussed at tomorrow's meeting are: (1) Reorganization of the free university. A proposal will be considered which suggests that the free university be organized along the same lines as the Mid-Peninsula Free University at Stanford and the N.Y. Alternative U. The proposal allows for monthly policy-making general meetings for all members with a coordinating "Gadfly Group" in an administrative capacity. Included among several task groups is a Committee on Investigation of University Procedures to provide a balance between the free school and regular university. Free University seminars will be scheduled in residential areas to provide dorms with experiences around which to build community.

(2) Opening lines of communication with faculty so that successful innovations with the content and structure of free university classes can be made known to traditionally oriented University classes.

(3) Establishing task forces to research educational and environmental issues and make proposals in those areas.

(4) Construction of some permanent domes and other alternative building structures at some off campus site. MIT architect Edward Popko, recently spent a day consulting with FUC builders and gave them a lot of desperately needed information on ventilating, waterproofing, insulating, heating, and most importantly, strengthening geodesic domes. Builders would now like to use this information in building some structures for the use of weekend live-in workshops. Participants in workshops on such topics as nonverbal communication, radical politics, and university decentralization would live together for a weekend and thereby entirely immerse themselves in a workshop topic.

Sly: Bad Logistics

The Homecoming Committee's decision to financially penalize Sly and the Family Stone for their performance of Saturday a week ago seems to us to be perfectly justifiable in light of the circumstances leading up to this decision.

It is a fact that Sly was an hour and a half late in setting up his equipment and that he actually arrived over an hour after the time that the contract had called for. It is also a fact that while the crowd was waiting outside for the second show to begin, they caused over $400 worth of damage to the Cage and equipment, five people had to be sent to the infirmary for injuries sustained in the crushing crowd, not to mention the thousands who were inconvenienced by the long delays apparently due to no other reason than for the fact that Sly seems to think relatively little about his colleges performances as compared to his regular circuit. And last but not least, no other circuit but the college circuit would allow a performer to get away with this without some form of penalty. In most cases the circuit unit would have cancelled the performance leaving Sly with little more than a big unpaid travel bill.

We are not disputing here the ability of Sly as a performer. His ability in this area can readily be testified for in his numerous praising reviews and standing room only engagements. But we are, however, testifying to what we have readily experienced, that being his rather poor logistics in the staging of his performance. It is true that many performers look upon the college audience with a little less enthusiasm than they do their regular audiences, but this should not detract from the fact that we are, in fact, a legitimate paying audience and for this fact we should be treated as such.

Mystery Deans: Home Ec Goe's Hip

At last it is apparent why a sign appeared mysteriously on the Student/Faculty Lounge in Skinner Hall three weeks ago. The sign stated that the Lounge would be closed until further notice due to the large number of meetings that had been scheduled for the room. As days went by and no sign of life was shown in the Lounge, it was evident that the sign was a ruse. And now appearing on the locked door of the Lounge is a nearly lettered sign declaring the room to be: FACULTY LOUNGE - Closed to students without special permission of the dean and signed by the Asst. Dean. Again it seems that the Home Ec students have been subjected to more of the petty beaurocracy typical of this school. Not only must we put up with so many required subjects and artificial prerequisites that we have little opportunity to expand ourselves with enlightening electives, but many have been subjected to arbitrary dress codes, seating plans, attendance sheets and the like. No other students on this campus are subjected to so many rainbow hued mimeographed messages from teachers. With the exception of some outstanding faculty members, the Home Economics School should be completely revised. Due to the peculiarities of tenure this, I know, is impossible.

And what of the Dean of the School of Home Economics? Who has ever seen her? Where does she hide? If you stood any five adult women in a row and included among them Dean Canoyer, I would be willing to bet that not even 10 Home Ec students could identify her correctly. This is not a huge School, why is no effort ever made to bring students and faculty together so that they could get to know each other on a more human level? But I don't think our "Mystery Dean" cares to get that "involved" with her students. I, personally, would prefer someone with less prestige and more interest in the students.

All of this is extremely distressing to those students who have a real desire for knowledge and the tools they will need to pursue their careers. They are still bound by the outdated subject requirements and prerequisities; impediments thrown up by an outmoded educational attitude and a small number of faculty who insist on treating college students as though they were infantile. It is this attitude that continues to cost the School of Home Ecomonics some of the best student minds on campus. Many erstwhile Home Ec students have found the irritations in and within the School to be unbearable and so they change Majors, and find an area where their desire for education and information will not be stifled. Those students who stay are those who care enough about the field to put up with all the pettiness involved. The closing of the Lounge to students is just one more item to be added to the long list of irritants endured by those courageous enough to remain in the School of Home Economics.

Amherst: A Student Ghetto

There are exploitative housing conditions in Amherst. Students living off-campus, mostly graduate students and upperclassmen, are especially aware of the problem since they must put up with exorbitant rents and poor repair and maintenance from their landlords. Those living in the housing complexes should be particularly aware because of both the shoddiness and cost of their apartments. It is not unusual to find 4 or 5 students living together in order to afford the rent.

Landlords and businessmen have a free rein in this town since most laws and the town government act in their favor. One of the largest local realtors heads the Amherst Housing Authority. The realtors possess advantages in everything from local tax practices to priorities on land buying and University contracts.

The housing situation in Amherst is one of supply and demand. There are always people looking for an apartment and this is a major factor in keeping the rents high. People must pay what is asked for rent if they have no other place to go. Those unable to afford rent increases have no alternative but to leave the area and live a dozen or so miles away. The University does nothing to remedy the situation. By bringing in a surplus of students and leaving the off-campus housing burden entirely to the town, the University helps worsen the already exploitative housing conditions. Neither does the business community desire the solution of low-cost housing since there is too little profit involved.

That is the situation. There doesn't seem to be any way to "officially" remedy the present conditions. Evidence is the town and University's failure to have done anything thus far. This leaves the job up to the exploited, because something really must be done. Tenants united against the interest of the local profiteers would be working for their own benefit. Tenants acting alone are ineffective since a landlord can always find some way to get rid of the troublemaker. It has been done. There are blacklists. But an organization of tenants together can accomplish something. Can you imagine the lengths that landlords will go to to make repairs and not raise rents when hundreds of hundreds of his tenants threaten to withhold rent? Can you imagine hundreds of tenants demanding a rent control board composed of both tenants and landlords?

The government has failed to respond to people's needs. And it seems very apparent locally that exploitative housing conditions will continue unless the people organize to fight the profiteers. The only alternative is higher rents, poorer services, and fewer and fewer decent places to live.

Hello: A New Point of Departure

"All the lonely people, where do they all come from?" All the lonely people at UMass.; all the lonely people in a desperate search for companionship -- someone they can lean on, cry upon, and give outlet for so many frustrations.

How many times have you sat upon the grass near the pond -- alone? How many times have you walked home in need of someone to talk to? How many times have you sat alone in the Hatch -- looking, staring, and side glancing at someone you'd like to meet, share a coke with you, or just someone to be with.

Loneliness at UMass.; a product of people resigned to four years of wall-climbing, restlessness, and unhappiness.

How much longer can can you take it? How much longer will you have to take it?

When it comes down to the point that everyone doesn't want to take this situation, but they do, then someone has to make a suggestion. Here's ours:

Carry the idea around that you're going to say hello to someone you didn't know previously. Carry it to your classes, in your classes, on the way to class; everywhere. You're not being too awkward or too forward, you're just trying to be friendly. It certainly is a shame when college students are too afraid to say hello in fear of being laughed at or ignored. On the same token it is equally saddening to know that college students scorn friendliness in a person and in a way promote loneliness in themselves.

Imagine yourself sitting by the pond or in the union or walking home and someone comes up to you, smiles, says "Hello" -- and suddenly you're no longer alone. Saying "Hello" won't solve all your problems; but at least you're meeting some people. Through the people you will meet you're pulling yourself out of the university cell. Once you're out the university will no longer be loneliness.

Be receptive to someone saying "Hello" -- it should come naturally.

Concert Blues. A Real Dooping

To the editor:

As a grad student here at UMass, I would like to air my views on the "Homecoming Concert Farce." The Daily Collegian said, "Sly and the Family Stone would start at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., and admission would be $3.50 per person." It was on this basis that I purcheased my ticket. The concert started at 7:45 p.m. and featured some second rate entertainers (whom the D.C. never even mentioned) that performed until shortly after 9 p.m., at which time a marathon intermission began.

At 9:30 p.m. "Sly and his Family" had still not appeared. I paid $14.00 for four tickets. Two of my guests were from New Hampshire and one from Virginia. We had to leave by 10 p.m. Rather annoyed to say the least, I went upstairs to the managers' office and demanded a refund. My demand was refused. Since my tickets had been taken at the door, I asked for a receipt as proof of my ticket purchase. This request was refused, too. I brought in an officer to verify the mgr.'s refusal of my request. This was overheard by a member of the administration and he promptly came in and wrote out a receipt for me. I went down stairs and by this time (9:45) "Sly and his Group" had finally found the stage. Quite angry, I left the concert immediately with my guests.

I feel sorry for the thousands of undergraduates who were "dooped" into paying $3.50, expecting to see a 3 hour concert, performed by "Sly". The M.D.C. made no mention of other groups and stated 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. as show times. I think 2-3/4 hours is an unreasonable time for anyone to wait. As far as I am concerned, "Slow Sly and his Turtles" violated their contract by not appearing on time and it is an unforgivable crime that UMass students had to pay for this "fiasco." A further outrage is that after waiting an unreasonable 2-3/4 hours for the stated performers to appear, that when a ticket refund was demanded it was refused.

I have been rather conservative in my views in the past and have not generally supported student protests. However, after this experience, I have begun to see why students are reacting to the unfair treatment they are receiving from those in positions of power. I doubt that this letter will change future proceedures regarding 1) false advertising, 2) late starting, 3) misleading connotations of the time featured artists will perform, or 4) any other normal considerations for the students, audience, and attending public. If it does, I shall be pleasantly surprised.

The Pill: Not Worthy of God

The saintliness of a Christ or Buddha cannot be attained through a pill. Unfortunately, it is not that easy. As the Persian poet Hafiz said, "If God could be found through the medium of any drug, God would not be worthy of being God." Hafiz attained Nirvana; he should know.

Acid can do one thing, however. It can bring about a longing to find the Truth. Once we have this longing, further ingestion of any drug is only fooling yourself. Instead, listen to the wisdom of Christ and Buddha, try to follow their teachings, and find the peace within yourself.

Zara Nelsova and Grant Johanneson will perform at Bowker on Nov. 4 & 5. The second event in the University Celebrity Series, the program will include works by Beethoven, Hindemith, and Franck. Tickets are on sale now at the University Fine Arts Office, 125 Herter Hall.

"Guys and Dolls" Opens This Weekend

For its 26th season, the UMass Operetta Guild will present "Guys and Dolls." Performances are scheduled for Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, 7 and 8 at 8:15 p.m., and a special Sunday performance Nov. 2 at 2:30 p.m. All are at Bowker Auditorium.

The "Guys and Dolls" script is the creation of Abe Burrows and Jo Swerling, with music and lyrics by Frank Loesser.

"Guys and Dolls" is described by visiting director Tom Fisher of Davenport, Iowa, as being concerned with New York City people - not the glittering characters, but the underworld of Broadway and the common denominator types.

Fisher has worked two seasons with Dallas State Fair musicals. Dallas was the first to do "West Side Story" off-Broadway. He directed "The Lark" and "Inherit the Wind" at the University of Texas where he taught theatre and speech.

Musical director is by Dr. Dorie Alviani of the UMass Music Department. Dr. Alviani, founder of the Operetta Guild, has done musical direction for many of its past shows. Choreography is the work of Sue Bacon, a UMass junior art major.

Reserved tickets are on sale at the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall (545-0202) or may be purchased at the door preceding each show.

UMass Computer Center To Expand Facilities

By ROBERT MANGIARATTI
Staff Reporter

By the end of this year, 3,000 students and 590 faculty members from 46 different departments will have used the facilities of the university's Computer Science Center.

With its $6.5 million worth of computer equipment, the Center devotes over 50 per cent of its time to faculty and student research. Eight hundred "programs" are on file at the Center, which is located in the Engineering complex.

The two big Control Data Corporation 3600s are the heart of the system. This year, 384,000 "jobs" will have been processed by these computers.

Most of the jobs are done by the time sharing system, which allows up to 67 programmers to use the computer simultaneously. Under this system, users may enter programs, data, and commands to the computer from one of 67 teletype terminals located throughout campus.

The batch processing method, by which the computer is fed a number of different programs one at a time, accounts for the rest of the jobs.

The time-sharing facilities will be increased by thirty-five terminals within six months, David Musante of the Computer Science Center said recently.

These teletype terminals eventually will be replaced by cathode ray tube devices. The devices are more efficient, but at this stage of development they are too expensive for widespread use.

Fraternity-Sorority Park To Face Financial Problems

Fraternity and Sorority Park is facing a major financial crisis, according to Robert Galley, president and man ager of the park.

Chapters are finding difficulty in getting bank loans and mortgages. And, if additional funds aren't obtained, construction at the Park may come to a standstill.

Mr. Galley, in an MDC interview, explained the problem as being caused by today's money situation. Inflation and tight money make financing difficult.

Mr. Galley said, "It is the government's intention to slow down the economy. Consequently, fraternities can't get loans at a high 9-1/2% interest."

As of now, the park is in various stages of development. Two houses are already under construction. Three or four chapters have plans to build, and even more houses have intentions to buy land and build. But financing is a problem.

Searching for other means of support, Galley is asking for a commitment from the University. He said, "The University must realize that Fraternity and Sorority Park is student housing and as such the University should share responsibility."

National chapters are trying to help by providing $20,000 to $100,000 in mortgage money. But, said Galley, this is still not enough. Each UMass chapter is expected to contribute $300,000 in bank loans or mortgages. All told, $2 million is needed to complete the first half of the Park.

Unless Fraternity and Sorority Park and its member chapters can come up with the needed funds, construction may soon stop, Galley said.

ALD to Hold Initiations This Sunday

Alpha Lambda Delta will hold its fall induction on Sunday, November 2. The freshman women's honor society, ALD requires that freshmen women have a 3.5 cumulative average or better to be initiated.

The induction will be held at 3:00 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. It will be held in conjunction with Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman men's society.

Following the ceremonies, the groups will join in the Commonwealth Room for a social hour.

Sony FM/AM clock radio sounds as good as it looks.

Sony's 8FC-53W is way ahead of its time with "L" shaped styling. And when you hear its remarkable clarity, you'll agree it's advanced in performance, too. Here's why: a powerful output power through a 3" P.M. Dynamic speaker. The clock turns the set on or off—automatically. And the time setting knob is up front for easy adjustment. Other features include buzzer alarm for heavy sleepers, illuminated clock and slide rule tuning dial. In a compact cabinet accented with a rich woodgrain front panel, the 8FC-53W blends beautifully with any decor. Come in and admire it...then listen to it. SONY.

Library Tours

Lost in the Library? A 20 minute slide/tape program designed to introduce new students to the building could help you. The program developed by the Reference Department of Goodell Library will be presented in Thompson 102 on Monday, November 3rd at 11:15 and Tuesday, November 4th at 12:20. A reference librarian will be there to answer your questions about Library policies and procedures.

The Library staff has also prepared a small pamphlet outlining a "Walking Tour" of Goodell Library which will introduce you to the essential service areas of the building in about ten minutes. Copies of this pamphlet will be available at the slide/tape presentation and at the security desk inthe lobby of the Library.

Salk Out to Prove to Nixon Moratorium was Not a Fluke

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

Gil Salk, executive secretary of the King Council of UMass, is out to prove to President Nixon that October 15, National Peace Action Day, "wasn't a fluke."

Wearing jeans and a heavy iron peace symbol, Salk admitted he was disappointed at the turnout of the morning rally. But the numbers picked up during the day. The afternoon rally in Amherst had about double the number of students.

Salk estimated that 2,000 to 3,000 students attended the morning rally held at the Student Union.

"Most of these students," Salk said, "were used as canvassers who knocked on the doors of about 20,000 Amherst area homes asking townspeople to sign postcards urging President Nixon to immediately withdraw all American forces from Vietnam."

So far, according to Salk, almost 10,000 postcards have been returned to the King Council office, which will be forwarded to the White House.

Though confident the cards will reach the White House, Salk expressed doubt that the president will see them. He said he is even more doubtful that President Nixon will reply.

As for subsequent moratoriums, Salk said emphatically that he will not beg the UMass administration to cancel classes on November 13 and 14. I will not give the administration a chance to make a comeback from their onerous position of October 15. "The administration," he said, "is morally bankrupt."

No matter how successful the October Peace Moratorium was, Salk predicts the November Moratorium will be "even bigger." Although the main focus in November will remain "Bring the Troops Home," Salk indicated discussions will also be heard on how the war is "symptomatic of what's wrong with the country."

Salk believes that November's Peace Moratorium will be more successful "in overcoming the old image that it is just hippie freaks with long hair who want to see an end to the killing."

Proposed plans for November include an afternoon rally featuring speakers, a march from Northampton to Amherst, a candlelight service, canvassing outlying districts, and leafleting military bases, factories and stores.

While Salk went over the proposed plans of November's Peace Action Days, he warned of the necessity of making the Peace Moratorium, "an expanding and ongoing activity."

RENAISSANCE the world touring company from Southern California, will appear here in a musical variety program to be held at the Farley Lodge, October 31, at 7:00 p.m. Their show will include original material plus the mellow pop hits, folk adaptations, and rock classics. The performance is in conjunction with the C.A.T.G.I.F. (Christians Also Thank God It's Friday).

'Joint Adventure' Art Gallery to Open In Old Grad House

Students from Mount Holyoke, Smith, Amherst, and UMass are establishing an art gallery which will open November third. The gallery, called 'Joint Adventure', will be located at the old grad house, 382 North Pleasant St., near the corner of Fearing St.

Art and craftwork, including among other forms, pottery, photography, metalwork, jewelry, sculpture and clothing, will be sold there during the afternoons.

Creative artists and craftsmen can loan their works to the gallery on consignment, setting their own prices. The gallery will sell the object for them and retain a percentage of the price to help maintain the facilities.

People interested in selling or displaying their work are invited to call Steven Oldsman, 586-2661.

UMass Crew Club Impressive at Head of The Charles

The UMass crew team made its biggest stride into the ranks of big league rowing Sunday with an impressive display of style and power at the Head of the Charles! Over 800 oarsmen from nearly 50 colleges and clubs gathered to match strokes in the 2.5 mile race.

The Redmen JV's entered the mayor's Cup race. This junior race included many college varsities and some crack club and prep squads. In all, 33 eights finished.

UMass finished fifth. The Redmen, stroking at 32 strokes a minute throughout, experienced some problems but rallied for a fine 12:43 time. Princeton's varsity led the field in 12:27.

Dartmouth JV's, Rutgers and Yale were the only others to outpull the Redmen who were rowing in their brand new modified Pocock. In the process, UMass outrowed Northeastern JV's, a number of Harvard combinations and any other competition that UMass would normally row in the spring season.

Soph Kevin O'Brien stroked his first race ever as did Bob Weimar and Scott Cline, both out all last year with injuries.

The boat consisted of four sophs and four juniors.

The Redman varsity entered the premier event in the 13 race program, the Boston Globe Challenge Cup. This year's field was loaded with talent as usual. Harvard, perennial national powerhouse and five years running Eastern sprint champion, won the race in a fast 11:55. A strong Syracuse boatload of veterans pushed hard for second. Northeastern's defending champions finished third.

UMass' top eight followed in fourth. Rowing at an appreciably lower stroke (31) than all the other crews, the Redmen powered past BU, MIT, Columbia and a surprisingly strong Holy Cross eight.

Veteran stroke Kurt Belchick kept the stroke low and hard as planned to account for UMass' best finish ever in the crew club's short history.

While many schools openly train and gauge their practices to race conditions, UMass preferred to row low, and worry about more speed in the spring.

Northeastern, whose time of 12:12 was only slightly better than UMass' 12:20, was four and five strokes a minute higher than the Redmen.

The entire boatload, while not entirely satisfied with its performance, left little doubt of its potential.

Faherty felt the race went well, but also felt that with a few training method adaptations and more work, the crew will become much faster.

This weekend performance of the Crew Club left little doubt as to the potential of the program. Very few of the rowing establishment would have considered the Amherst contingent as legitimate threats two years ago.

Hard work and determination, along with a rapid upgrading of the program has put this RSO organization into the upper echelon of rowing in the East.

Offers of scrimmage work were extended by Princeton and Harvard. Yale, a school the Redmen scrimmaged earlier this month, has again asked the Redmen to New Haven.

Faherty gives all credit of this phenomenal development to the club membership. "These are the most energetic, unselfish and cooperative people I've known. They work well together, accept many of the responsibilities and rise to meet any challenge. Any benefits they may accrue from this 'experience' in rowing, they deserve. A fourth and fifth in this regatta is fantastic. We are real happy and anxious to begin our winter training program."

Intramural Program Grows in Size

The Intramural Program at the University of Massachusetts consists of three segments - Men's Athletics, Co-Recreational Activities and Recreational Activities.

Last year, undergraduate and graduate students, faculty and staff members accounted for over 60, 000 participants in the various activities.

This year, Paddleball and the Metawampe 500 Bicycle race have been added to the Men's Program, which now numbers 19 activities. The Co-recreational Braves & Squaws Program consists of seven activities, with the addition of softball.

Ninety-one Touch Football teams, this year, played a total of 325 scheduled games. Cross Country, Tennis Singles, Tug-O-War, Co-recreational badminton and Beef-Pull all have shown an increase in participants and participations. If this trend continues, it is probable that last year's record of two out of three undergraduate male students having participated in some aspect of Men's Athletic Activities, will be surpassed.

To accommodate the rapid growth of the Intramural Activities Program, 68 acres of athletic fields have been added to the existing facilities, resulting in one of the finest athletic-recreational complexes in the East.

DeFlavio, Guarino Win YC, ECAC Citations

Massachusetts tackle Bill DeFlavio (Worcester, Mass.), New Hampshire halfback Art Randlett (Concord, N.H.), and Rhode Island quarter back Bob Ehrhardt (Flushing, N.Y.) have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

DeFlavio, a 5'9, 215-lb. sophomore, was the key man in the UMass defense that held Connecticut to 39 yards rushing as the Redmen won the important Conference game 28-7. DeFlavio caught the UConn quarterback three times for losses of 36 yards and made 9 tackles as UMass ran its first-place record to 3-0 with an overall 4-2 mark.

DeFLAVIO

Randlett, a 6; 183-lb. senior, sparked UNH to a 26-8 win over Northeastern by scoring two touchdowns and gaining 124 yards rushing on 9 carries. Randlett's TD's were on runs of 62 and 27 yards as UNH made its record 2-3.

Ehrhardt, a 6'1 180-lb. sophomore completed 13 of 32 passes for 200 yards including touchdowns of 64 and 15 yards as URI snapped a five-game losing streak with a 13-3 win over Cortland State.

Other nominations were: Offense-halfback Vin Clements (Conn.), halfback Dan Sullivan (Maine), halfback Bob Rodger (Vermont) and fullback Ed Sarno (Mass.); Defense-linebacker John Thies (Conn.), linebacker Mark Richardson (Me.) safety Jim Engott (R.I.), tackle Cliff McDonald (N.H.) and end John Wojciechowski (Vermont); Sophomores-safety Bob Warren (Conn.) tailback Jim Hayes (Maine), quarterback Bill Murdoch (N.H.), linebacker Kevin Lynch (Vermont) and linebacker Joe Sabulis (Mass.).

GUARINO

Andy Guarino (Everett), the other tackle in the defensive line for the Redmen, also came in for praise. Guarino has been named to the ECAC Division I weekly football team. His contributions went a long way towards limiting Vinny Clements, UConn's vaunted halfback, to only 68 yards in 20 carries.

Redman Rifles Open with Bang

On Friday the Varsity Rifle Team traveled to Providence College for this season's first match and they won in spectacular fashion 1325-1276.

Last year, the Redmen were 9-0, they won their division and finished 4th in the New England Finals. This year, with all of the 69-70 squad back, the riflemen were hoping for a good start against PC which is one of their strongest rivals.

After the first two details, UMass had a slight lead with Capt. John Lacouture still to fire. John then proceeded to annihilate PC's hopes of a win by shooting an excellent 276, one short of his own UMass record. Lead by the 276, the Redmen set a new school record of 1325.

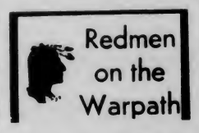
Other scoring members for the UMass team were:

DUDLEY DARLING	267
DAVE CRAIG	264
BERN ARMATA	261
DOUGH HJORTH	257

High score for PC was 265, followed by 261, 253, 250 and 247.

On Saturday, half the riflemen moved on to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy for an informal individual tournament with the New England Champions and some of the defeated PC team. Again Lacouture was in the final detail and he needed a 274 to win the meet. He shot a perfect prone score of 100 and was well ahead of the winning total with only 3 of 30 shots left. Much to his disgust, John then threw a 5 in the standing position and finished with a 271. This gave him third place medal behind two Coast Guard Cadets with 273 and 272.

The rifle team hopes to record its next win at Central Connecticut on Saturday, November 1.



SOCCER (Fr.)-vs. Trinity at home (3:00)

SHOW AND TELL - The story of the UMass football team's explosive fourth quarter against UConn is depicted in this sequence of photos taken of the scoreboard by Ken Stevens. The points were put on the board on (l-r) a run by halfback Craig Lovell, a pass from quarterback Tim Adams to end Nick McGarry and a short burst by fullback Ed Sarno. · Dennis Gagnon accounted for one point in each of the pictures with his accurate conversion kicks.

Senate Reaffirms Open House Stand

Funds Appropriated For Washington Trip

By John Dubois
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate last night in three separate actions clarified its position on the question of residence hall visitation, and also on the larger questions of student power which the open house issue raises.

The action of a number of residence halls in proceeding with self-determination with respect to visitation prior to official Trustee implementation, together with recent Senate action (providing for Senate sanction of immediate self-determination for those residence halls that so desire and present a security plan acceptable to the Student Matters Committee), has brought considerable administrative pressure upon those residence halls that have gone autonomous to rescind that action, and upon other residence halls to refrain from taking similar action.

Against this background, the Senate, in a meeting in the Ballroom attended by about 200 members of the community, soundly defeated a motion to endorse the action of the Board (postponing implementation of self-determination pending a comprehensive security plan), by a vote of 26 aye, 46 nay. The Senate proceeded to approve by voice vote a motion seeking to have the Board "recognize the authority of the Student Government Association to set all social regulations pertaining to student life at UMass, Amherst." This stand was the culmination of several years' effort by the Senate to gain increasing autonomy for students in this area.

In debate, Senate President Balboni rejected the contention that an agreement was concluded between the Board and the Senate officers, stating that no such agreement was reached, and that it was not in fact within the proper purview of the officers to conclude such an agreement. He further stated that he did not see his role as an agent to sell whatever the Board decides to the Senate and the student body; that, in this area, the Senate is not automatically bound to enforce the Trustee decision, and that in this instance it would be "dishonest" for the Senate to endorse a policy the enforcement of which is "beyond the realm of possibility. He concluded by saying that "the Student Senate will not enforce the Board of Trustees' open house policy."

The tenor of the negative debate was that the Senate may by this action jeapordize the final acceptance of the policy by the Trustees. But the most compelling sentiment appeared to be that the Senate, in taking this action, is bringing about, in the words of Senator Madden, "no great change. This is simply a recognition of reality."

The final action in this area, passed by a vote of 54 to 11, laid down in detail the reasons for the Senate's stand in favor of recognizing self-determination now. There was little debate, and the sentiment of the Senate was summed up by Senator Brickhouse, who stated that the bill "expressed the mood of the students on campus." Text of the bill appears on page 2 of today's MDC.

In other action, the Senate, after protracted debate, appropriated up to $10,000 to subsidize 50% of the cost of sending undergraduate students to the November 15 march on Washington. Opposition centered about the contention that the campus is not unified on this issue, and the Senate therefore could not responsibly tax the student body for this purpose. A substantial majority of the Senate thought otherwise, and, after defeating two attempts to lower the amount to five and one thousand dollars, passed the appropriation (the funds for which will come largely from homecoming profits) by a vote of 44 to 26.

Senator Ernest Sarro of Butterfield argued that pushing the Board of Trustees might jeopardize future student attempts for self-determination.

CAS Faculty Votes On Curriculum Reform

The faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences will be voting this weekend on proposals for curriculum reform: the feasibility of initiating a study concerning a four-course per-semester load; and temporary, but immediate, relief from the present graduation requirements.

Ballots were distributed to all departments yesterday and will be collected Monday afternoon.

Members of the faculty will vote on the following three propositions:

Proposition I - "As a temporary measure to become effective immediately and to continue only until one of the proposals in Proposition III below receives final approval, the requirements for the baccalaureate degree from this College shall be those recommended by the College Curriculum Committee (basically the present University core curriculum) in its memorandum of Oct. 14." Vote yes or no.

Acting Dean of the College, Seymour Shapiro, said of this proposal, "This will provide immediate relief from the restrictive features of the present graduation requirements. It was the intent last year to effect a substantial modifications of the requirements by last Sept. 1, primarily for the reason that the whole problem of modification had been before us since the spring of 1966."

The Dean reiterated that this proposal, if passed is only a temporary measure until one of the proposals now under study is implemented.

Proposition II - "The Dean of the College shall appoint an ad-hoc committee which will be charged with 1) preparing a report to the College faculty on the merits of a four-course system to replace the University's present five-course system, including replies to possible objections, 2) adapting any proposal in Proposition III which is finally approved to the four-course system, and 3) presenting the four-course proposal which may be finally approved by the College faculty to the Student and Faculty Senates for final action on the University level." Vote yes or no.

According to Dean Shapiro this proposal was originally made by Professor Paul Sanders of the English Department.

"It is clear that the four-course syste m can be adopted only on a university wide basis and hence, requires far more consideration than the curricular proposals in Proposition III," Dean Shapiro said.

The third proposition on the ballot involves curriculum reform directly. The faculty of the Col-

Senate Committee OK's "June Proposal"

After careful consideration, the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate has announced its endorsement of the "June Proposal", one of the four proposals for curriculum reform now being voted upon by the faculty of the College of Arts and Science.

"Our basic belief in the 1968-69 Report (the committee's own report on curriculum reform) necessarily has influenced our decision to support the 'June Proposal' (Maki Proposal)," the committee said. "The tone of the 'June' Proposal seems to reflect many of the ideas incorporated in the Academic Affairs Committee Report of 1968-69."

"It must be noted however, that this committee is satisfied with the June Proposal not as a permanent curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences, but rather as an excellent basis for further curriculum reform."

The complete text of the Academic Affairs Committee's report is printed on page 5.

SDS to Picket in Support of GE Strike

UMass S.D.S. plans to picket Whitmore this morning in support of the General Electric strike, and at least one member of the radical community believes that the demonstration could become a "major protest."

While he would not elaborate, the student said, "This is the first opportunity we've had this year to gain student support for a demonstration, and many of us want to use this opportunity to stage a large demonstration."

Plans call for a picket line to be established outside of Whitmore at 9:00 a.m. Leaflets will be handed out detailing support for the strike and explaining what is felt to be the unfair labor conditions maintained by the General Electric company.

The G.E. strike began at midnight Monday over a prolonged contract dispute. Sporatic outbreaks of violence have been reported throughout the five states affected by the strike.

MIT Protests GE Presence

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (AP) - More than 50 persons stormed an office at Massachusetts Institute of Technology Wednesday while General Electric Co. officials conducted job interviews. The demonstrators did not get into the office.

They identified themselves as members of the November Action Committee, a faction of Students for a Democratic Society.

They said the G.E. representatives were "scabbing" during a strike at General Electric plants. They also protested defense contracts at G.E.

Four faculty members and three police officers were roughed up in a shoving incident outside the office on the fourth floor of the Horace Administration Building.

The students left after Kenneth Wadleigh, vice president of MIT, gave them five minutes to leave the area.

March on D.C.

Uneasy Alliance Plans for Nov. 13

By MARY MCGRORY

WASHINGTON - The marriage between the Vietnam Moratorium and the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam was not made in heaven, and everybody agrees there may be a trying period of adjustment between now and Nov. 13, when they march down Pennsylvania Ave. together.

The Moratorium brings a handsome dowry to the match - the record of an Oct. 15 observance which even so critical an observer as Secretary of State Rogers was constrained to call "dramatic but dignified."

The Mobilization's most famous outing, the 1967 March on the Pentagon, led to mass arrests and a leap in Lyndon Johnson's popularity.

The Moratorium is cool and concentrated; the New Mobilization is hot and diffuse. The Moratorium wants peace-seekers to stay home and rink doorbells - spokesman Sam Brown referred deprecatingly to "the rally syndrome." The Mobilization wants the peace-seekers to descend on Washington, preferably in the hundreds of thousands, to present an ultimatum to Richard Nixon.

The Moratorium high command consists of four young people, whose only history is their participation in the McCarthy campaign of 1968. The membership of the steering committee of the New Mobilization has names which will give Vice President Agnew enough speech material for the next seven years. It includes two defendants in the present Chicago conspiracy trial and one member of the Communist Party.

A Mobilization spokesman, Stewart Meacham, a gentle grey-haired Quaker, said the groups come together under the banner of "non-exclusion and non-violence." Right now, the prospects of the former are more certain that those of the latter.

The Moratorium, daunted by the thought of Viet Cong flags in the line of march, provocative rhetoric and police-baiting, made the alliance rather than face the possibility of headlines declaring civil war in the peace movement.

But even their reaction to the President's much heralded Vietnam speech on Nov. 3 showed that in this case the young are more restrained than the old. Sam Brown said if the President calls for immediate withdrawal, he is prepared to call off the march. A Mobilization speaker, Dr. Sidnet Lens, brushed aside the possibility the President would do anything of consequence and escalated his demands to unilateral disarmament, a condition another Mobilization speaker said was not official policy.

The Moratorium hopes to have a say in the choice of Monument rally speakers, and the tone of the literature to be distributed. It hopes congressmen will stay in their districts and make new converts. The Mobilization would like them to swell the numbers on Richard Nixon's doorstep.

While 68 members of the House and Senate endorsed the Moratorium, they apparently will be slightly more inhibited at giving their blessings to the new alliance. While there are impeccable groups under the umbrella, such as the Clergy and Laymen Concerned about Vietnam, and the Catholic Peace Fellowship, they have all been alerted by the Agnew offensives to the perils of the united front.

The most critical phase of the merger is undoubtedly in the marshals division. The Moratorium's Michael Driver, the 24-year-old who coordinated the District of Columbia phase of Oct. 15, has the 600 marshals - all law students - who kept the candlelight parade before the White House in perfect order, ready to go again in November. He has extremely strict ideas about marshaling and wants to rule out the carrying of all flags - which, being on sticks, are potential weapons.

Driver hopes to persuade his opposite number in the Mobilization to let him run a training school for marshals, and form a trouble squad consisting of "people with credibility with radicals," who could defuse militants like the SDS.

The only light note in the grim preparations that are proceeding came from Steven V. Cohen, the New Haven organizer who, upon hearing the Vice President's characterization of his group, rushed to the buttonmakers and ordered 5000 that say, "I am an effete snob for peace."

CAS Faculty

lege has been asked to vote for one of four proposals: the current CAS graduation requirements (as of Sept. 1, 1969), the Curriculum Committee proposal, the "June Proposal", or the Hankequint Proposal. All four proposals are outlined completely on page 5 of today's DAILY COLLEGIAN.

All four proposals deal only with the Bachelor of Arts degree. No changes are recommended for the Bachelor of Fine Arts and the Bachelor of Music degrees, already authorized by the College faculty.

"If one of the four proposals receives a majority of the votes cast (50 per cent or more)," according to Dean Shapiro, "it will be regarded as the officially faculty-approved proposal. If two (or more) are clearly favored over the others a run-off may be held. However, in such a case, I shall be strongly disposed to call another College faculty meeting to review the merits of the favored proposals."

The Dean urges all faculty members within the College to vote.

Text of Open House Bill

Whereas, the Senate, in keeping with its open house stand of last Spring (S220 68-69), believes now, as it believed then, that Trustee regulation of the private lives of undergraduates in the area of residence hall visitation beyond the close of last year is unacceptable; and,

Whereas, it would therefore be philosophically inconsistent, as well as unrealistic, useless and futile, for the Senate to seek to impose a policy which has not been functionally in effect since before the close of last year, upon a student body justificably unwilling to submit to any continued Trustee enfringement upon their private lives; and,

Whereas, it would be dishonest and hypocritical for this student government to pretend that the 1968-69 visitation policy can, will, or should be enforced; and,

Whereas, the Senate in passing S 306 made adequate provision to meet any genuine security questions that arise as a result of residence hall self-determination; therefore,

Be it resolved, that the Senate, in keeping with stand of last year, consider that this question, and other questions relative to social regulation of students' lives, are and ought to be outside of the jurisdiction of the Board of Trustees, and are and ought to be exclusively the concern of the student and his elected governing agencies, with the advise and assistance of student personnel services; and,

Be it further resolved, that the Senate strongly urge that: no reprisals be taken by any agency against anyone or group exercising his long-neglected right to lead his life as he will; and,

Be it further resolved, that the Senate urge the administration to consider carefully the potentially disastrous consequences of any such retaliatory action, in terms of jeopardizing the continued harmonious working relationship between the student body and the Board in the many areas of legitimately joint interest.

Operetta Guild Prepares "Guys and Dolls"

By NANCY MCAVOY
Staff Reporter

When the UMass Operetta Guild opens for its twenty-sixth season this Friday with Frank Loesser's "Guys and Dolls," a bright young man will make his debut.

An excitement for musical theatre brings Tom Fisher here from Davenport, Iowa to direct "Guys and Dolls." He enjoys working with this medium best at the student level.

Out of the confusion of last-minute preparations at Bowker Auditorium, Fisher found a few minutes to say why he thinks "Guys and Dolls" to be a worthwhile experience for a general audience.

"Basically, 'Guys and Dolls' is concerned with New York people and characters of Broadway - not the glittering characters but the underworld of Broadway and the common denominator kind of people who bring their 'Dolls' out after the shows close and before the street cleaners come out. They are cartoons."

"Guys and Dolls" is Loesser's most popular show. It is based on a Pulitzer Prize winning short story by Damon Runyan about the invincable Sarah Brown of the Save-a-Soul Mission who falls in love with gambler and sinner Sky Masterson. It is typical 'boy-meets-girl' but with a unique and thoroughly enjoyable twist.

Fisher adds that these cartoon caricatures are "not out to make social comment but merely to provide a pleasurable theatrical experience."

These photos show Operett Guild members at final dress re hearsal, putting finishing touche on show.

"Guys and Dolls" will be Oct ober 31, November 1, 7, 8 at 8:1 and November 2 at 2:30 in Bowke Auditorium. Plan on experiencin a little bit of Broadway for your self.

Pres. Patterson Announces New Hampshire Staffers

Hampshire College President, Franklin Patterson announced today the appointment of three new staff members and a recent Board of Trustees decision to give faculty appointments to five current staff members.

Andrea W. Wright, of Warren, Pennsylvania, is the institution's Director of the experimental Early Identification Program. Others named to fill important administrative positions were Elliot E. Maxwell, of Port Chester, N.Y., who is Hampshire's Assistant Director of Admissions and Director of Financial Aid, and Barbara Turlington, of Granby, Mass., Assistant to the Dean of the College.

Under the Early Identification Program, disadvantaged youths showing exceptional promise in their primary school performance will be encouraged to fulfill that promise through the guarantee of a full college scholarship if they complete their secondary school work satisfactorily, the offer of free tutorial help and the availability of special programs which would include their families.

Miss Wright brings considerable training and experience to her challenging new position, having worked with young people since she was 14.

A 1960 graduate of Smith College, she spent her junior year at L'Universita di Firenze, Italy, and earned her Masters Degree in Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. She taught English and History in Ethiopia for two years as a Peace Corps Volunteer and recently has done extensive work in Federal educational programs to help disadvantaged children and students with special study problems.

Maxwell's association with Hampshire College is not new, for while a student at Brown University, he acted as a consultant to Hampshire. Before graduating CUM LAUDE from Brown in 1968, he co-authored a working paper that led to a recent reorganization of the Brown curriculum.

Barbara Turlington has long been deeply involved in the field of higher education, both as a research assistant at Columbia University and as an instructor in Political Science at Connecticut and Mount Holyoke Colleges. A 1954 graduate of American University of Beirut, Lebanon, after three years of study at Swarthmore College, she has worked the past year as Staff Director for the Five - College Long - Range Planning Committee in Amherst.

In speaking of the Board of Trustees action, President Patterson noted that the five administrative officers who received faculty appointments would continue to concentrate on their administrative duties. "But," he said, "their training will bring invaluable strength to Hampshire's curriculum planning and help integrate our administrative support with the academic program."

Named by the Trustees as Assistant Professors of Law to the School of Social Science were David E. Matz and Kenneth Rosenthal, Mr. Matz is Assistant to President Patterson and a graduate of Harvard Law School. Mr. Rosenthal is Executive Assistant and a graduate of Yale Law School.

Dr. Foley, Professor Emeritus, Retires After 39-Year Career

A professor in the department of veterinary and animal sciences twice cited as an outstanding teacher has retired after a 39-year career at the University of Massachusetts.

Dr. Richard C. Foley, who joined the UMass faculty in 1930, was granted the rank of Professor Emeritus as of Sept. 1 by the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees.

Known as a friend and advisor to students and alumni, Dr. Foley taught dairy cattle management, dairy cattle and milk production and allied subjects. His research was in bovine reproduction and physiology.

Dr. Foley was chairman of the Dairy Farmers Seminar Committee, and was an aide and advisor for such extracurricular events as the Bowditch Speaking Contest and the Bay State Livestock Classic.

In recognition of his accomplishments as a teacher, Dr. Foley was presented the University's Distinguished Teacher Award in 1968, and the Outstanding Professor Award for the Stockbridge School of Agriculture in 1969.

A native of Portland, Me., Dr. Foley holds B.S. and M.S. degrees from UMass and a Ph. D. from Rutgers University.

Dr. Foley is currently completing a textbook on dairy cattle and herd management.

Dr. Crossley Elected Vice-President Of World-Engineering Organization

Dr. Frank Erskine Crossley, professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering of the University of Massachusetts, has returned to Amherst from Poland, where he was elected vice-president of a new world engineering organization, the International Federation for the Theory of Machines and Mechanisms, established to bring together experts in automation, machinery, design of robots, prosthetics and related scientific matters.

Its founding was supported by UNESCO, and witnessed by representatives of sixteen nations. Elected president of the federation was Professor Ivan Artobolevski, member of the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union.

Professor Crossley was the principal author of the constitution of the federation which was adopted.

The other elected officers come from West Germany, Bulgaria, Poland, Australia and India.

Preceding the trip to Poland, Professor and Mrs. Crossley were guests of the Academy of Sciences of Roumania, staying in the "House of Scientists" in Bucharest, and also visiting the faculties of the Technical Universities of Brasov and Jassy. He gave a lecture on vibrations in mechanisms before a meeting of the academy in Bucharest.

Smith-Amherst Orchestra Presents Opening Concerts

Songs of a Wayfarer, one of Mahler's best known orchestral song cycles, with soprano soloist Miss Margery Anderson will be featured in the Smith-Amherst Orchestra's opening concert of the season Monday and Tuesday evenings, November 3 and 4.

Both performances will be presented at 8:15 p.m. and are open to the public without charge. The Monday concert will be in Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, and the Tuesday concert in John M. Greene Hall, Smith College. William Wittig, assistant professor of music at Smith, will conduct.

The program will open with Beethoven's Egmont Overture. Written in 1808, this work tells the dramatic story of Goethe's hero whose martyrdom was responsible for the freedom of the Netherlands.

Next the orchestra will accompany Miss Anderson in the Mahler composition. This song cycle was written in 1883 by the youthful composer. With lyrics folk-like in their spirit and simplicity, the Songs of a Wayfarer reflect Mahler's love of nature and of German folk songs.

A graduate student at Smith, Miss Anderson received her bachelor of music degree in 1967 from the New England Conservatory of Music. She has presented solo recitals in Boston and Atlanta and in 1966 was a soloist for the United States Cultural Exchange Program to Spain and the Soviet Union.

The program will close with Stravinsky's Firebird Suite. Long a favorite of concertgoers, this piece was composed for the 1910 Paris season of the Ballet Russe. The scenario is based on various Russian legends.

King Council Plans Exhibit Of War Art

The Martin Luther King Junior Social Action Council is accepting photographs, paintings, and drawings depicting concern over the effects of war. They will be presented in an exhibition November 5 through 11, in co-operation with the Moratorium.

After the exhibition there will be a sale of the pictures; the proceeds will be contributed to the Moratorium. Please submit your work by November 3 to Room 207, Hampshire House. Call 545-0648 for any further information or if you are interested in helping to set up the exhibit.

The Council is interested in obtaining work from both professional and amateur artists and photographers of any age.

Students Protest at Chamberlayne

Some 400 persons invaded the offices of the school to present the administration with a list of grievances.

Details of the grievances were not available.

Those arrested were identified as Stuart M. Gedal, 19, Mark R. Dyen, 21, and Susan Hagedon, 24, all of Cambridge.

Police said the three were arrested on charges of trespassing after they failed to leave the administration building when ordered to do so by a dean. They were not students at the school, police said.

All three were released on personal recognizance for a court appearance Thursday.

Last week, students at Chamberlayne protested the dismissal of an instructor for cancelling a class without authorization.

Curriculum Committee proposal recommends that current B.S. requirements in humanities and social sciences be changed to be same as in University core curriculum.

Text of Academic Affairs Committee's Endorsement of June Proposal

(Ed. Note: The following is the complete text of the Academic Affairs Report)

"The Academic Affairs Committee has been vitally concerned with the problem of curriculum reform for a number of years. During the 1968-69 session of the Student Senate the Academic Affairs Committee proposal for curricular, as well as other, reform for the College of Arts and Sciences was passed and was published in a special edition of the COLLEGIAN.

The present Academic Affairs Committee feels that whenever curriculum reform within the College of Arts and Sciences is discussed, the Academic Affairs Committee Report of 1968-69 should be consulted as the most comprehensive and authoritative document on curriculum reform published within the University to date.

"Our basic belief in the 1968-69 Report necessarily has influenced our decision to support the "June Proposal" (Maki Proposal). The tone of the "June Proposal" seems to reflect many of the ideas incorporated in the Academic Affairs Committee Report of 1968-69. It must be noted however, that this Committee is satisfied with the "June Proposal" not as a permanent curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences but rather as an excellent basis for further curricular reform."

"While the Committee is partial to the philosophy involved in the Quint-Hanke Proposal, we find numerous flaws and weaknesses in the document which preclude the advisability of our supporting the document in anything more than principle. We admire the degree of academic freedom of choice in the Quint-Hanke Proposal, but we tend to find the 30 credits required outside the major division as somewhat excessive. We are more importantly quite wary of allowing the major departments a completely free hand in determining requirements. Therefore, we prefer the "June Proposal" over the Quint-Hanke Proposal; the former placing a 60 credit maximum on the major department program.

"This Committee can support the Curriculum Committee Report only as a short range, stop-gap measure. We cannot, under any circumstances, regard the Curriculum Committee Report as a long range program primarily because it does not address itself to even the rudimentary problems of mutual student - faculty concern. The Curriculum Committee Report falls far short of being a viable solution to the negative student and faculty opinion of the system of requirements. This Committee will, however, contend that the Curriculum Committee Report is a move in the general direction of curriculum reform and urgently suggests that it temporarily replace the present, long out-dated, curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences.

"We have attempted here to justify our present position on curricular reform.

FROM OUR SIDE

Bold New School

The School of Education has implimented a new program this semester in which students are able to receive credit for participating in "educational experiences" outside the classroom. This new system called the Module Credit Concept is set up where a student is awarded from 1-20 "modules" of credit for each experience in which he participates. 15 "modules" equal one University credit.

Under this system students can get full credit for participating in educational activities outside the traditional classroom framework for projects which interest them and which under their own initiative they go out and seek.

The School of Education has opened its doors to all students interested in the program and will be interested in hearing ideas from students concerning proposed projects.

We find this to be just one of many innovative steps that the Ed. School has incorporated in the last year which have not only been bold new ventures in education but moves to involve the student more and more in the processes of his own education, allowing them more freedom and flexability in participating in their own education. It is our hope that this one particular school will not stand alone in making education a tool used by and for the student instead of something to be used by someone else and seemingly for the student.

Crisis Money

School's out. Catholic schools, that is. All over Massachusetts parochial schools are being forced to close due to lack of funds. Their pupils will flood into already overcrowded public schools. Accordingly, Commissioner of Education Neil Sullivan has suggested that Governor Sargent appoint a committee to study the question of public aid to non-public schools. There is also a movement in the General Court, promoted by the House leadership and the Senate president - Maurice Donahue, who is a gubernatorial candidate, to the same end.

Mr. Sullivan also wants state aid given to cities so that they can purchase Catholic schools to use them as public schools. Mr. Wallace, legal counsel to the Dept. of Education, has said that priests and nuns may be hired as teachers of secular subjects by public schools, and may wear habits if school committees allow it.

The public support of parochial schools is unconstitutional. In the event the legislature passed a law, and an amendment to the state constitution, permitting such aid, the federal courts would soon declare the act a violation of the Bill of Rights. If the Congress cannot make a law establishing a state religion, neither can a state legislature. Public aid to parochial schools amounts to such establishment. It is not "aid to the child", since public schools exist in which a child can be educated among children of all ethnic and religious backgrounds. Such contact is as much a part of education as books.

Parochial schools are detrimental to the health of society. In upper grades they separate the sexes at the very time when, writes noted anthropologist Ashley Montagu, they should be learning how to adjust to one another. Religiously run schools are de facto segregated. It is unethical for public funds to be used to support segregated schools. Students meet and hear the ideas of peers of only one religion, which can lead to an insular and closed-minded adulthood. If a parent wants to cripple a child by sending him to a parochial school, it is his business, but the society which may suffer because of it should not be made to pay for the crippling.

It is outrageous that in a state which ranks last in funds spent for public education, and whose public university lacks funds to buy books, the Comdr. of Education and the President of the Senate should suggest spending money to support parochial schools.

Certainly the closing of Catholic schools will cause problems in school systems, but the solution is that funds be spent to build new and well-equipped schools for all students, not in supporting segregated, sectarian schools. Furthermore there is no reason why the state should give money to the cities to buy parochial schools when modern ones can be built with those funds. The money ought to be invested in the public's future, not given to the archdiocese of Boston.

The statement by Mr. Wallace that nuns and priests may wear habits while teaching in public schools is naive. A clergyman dressed in a habit is a walking instance of proselytization. Parents of the Jewish and Protestant faiths will vehemently object to their children being taught by instructors in religious garb.

The state of New York recently faced such proposals for state aid to parochial schools and the result was a tempest in which Jews and Protestants faced Catholics and orthodox Jews in bitter arguments. Communities were torn and prejudice was fostered by the proposals. Messrs. Sullivan and Donahue are abetting legislation which would establish a state religion, support de facto segregation and aid schools whose very existence is detrimental to brotherhood and idea exchange. It is legislation which puts the welfare of one sect above that of the public.

The public school systems of many cities are a mess. The closing of parochial schools will exacerbate the situation. Yet it is also a golden opportunity for the state to revamp the school systems and create new and modern systems as parochialism dies out. The modes of action suggested by Mr. Sullivan are regressive and against the public interest. They will only lead to bitterness, law suits, and time and money lost that could have been used constructively.

"Let Us Pray"

I wonder if the decision against prayer in public schools is as libertarian as Mr. Baskin supposed it was in his editorial. No one should be forced to say a prayer against his will. But should the courts be able to forbid a voluntary act of self-expression which does not create a clear danger to others, such as yelling "fire" in a theater, merely because the act is committed on public property? To be more exact, isn't the prohibition of voluntary prayers said in a school building before the start of classes a denial of the right of freedom of speech? Are we to condone the violation of this right because the thing said or the social pressure created by an act of speaking might have some vague and indeterminable harm to other members of the community? A doctrine which would allow such an excuse sounds too much like the rationale of the Inquisition to be acceptable in a democracy.

The First Amendment was supposed to prevent the establishment of a specific denomination as a state religion, not to exclude the Divinity from government. The fundamental principle upon which our government is founded is that man is endowed by his Creator with certain inalienable rights. Government can abridge any privilege it grants but it does not have the authority to abridge God given rights. The First Amendment states that government "shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or the prohibiting the free exercise thereof." It may be time we asked ourselves if the courts have forgotten the second part of this clause which ensures us of liberty of conscience.

Real Pigs Throw Pies

For the benefit of those students who did not attend yesterday's lecture on mysticism by Dr. Cohen, I would like to relate and comment on a few incidents which took place after your reporter had left.

During the question and answer period, Dr. Cohen had to grapple with many searching and critical questions. He gave honest answers to every question including a few that I thought were gross and disgusting. Dr. Cohen's willingness to answer all questions was not sufficient, however, for two or three students who took pleasure in monopolizing the question and answer period by constantly interrupting Dr. Cohen with personal questions suggesting that his belief in mysticism was based on "sexual hysteria;;, One of these students even admitted to his intention to continue to interrupt Dr. Cohen.

During the Q & A period, a student entered the ballroom and threw a pie at Dr. Cohen. Dr. Cohen didn't "lose his cool", however; he just asked for a towel and went on with the question he was answering at the time.

A girl who sat in front of me cried out, "Why did you do that?" In that instant, I realized the futility of trying to settle this kind of a problem by "intellectual encounter". I frankly had more respect for the one or two students who tried to physically assault the pie-thrower.

Both of these incidents reflect behavior unbecoming a college student and are examples of the lowest forms of "confrontation" that I have ever seen.

I personally doubt that anything can be done to prevent such incidents in the future, but the university community should at least know who is responsible for these disgusting actions. I hope those persons will be identified and their names printed in the Collegian.

Dr. Cohen certainly deserves an apology for what happened last night but this university does not have an "official school apologizer" so I will write to Dr. Cohen myself. Maybe it's "not my responsibility", but I find it hard to have witnessed what I did last night and then do nothing about it.

Vietnam: Another Facet

As a recipient of a letter, from the University, soliciting support for the War Moratorium, I wish to take this opportunity for making a few unsolicited observations.

First of all, let me say that, in my mind, the War Moratorium is unnecessary and approaches an irresponsible abuse of ascendent student power. In the past few months, there has been a demonstrable deescalation of the war and an obvious working effort on the part of the current administration to disengage from it in a reasonable, purposeful manner.

Senator Edward Muskie has observed most wisely that "democracy chokes on too many non-negotiable demands presented in swift succession". Let me say to the academic community, students and faculty alike, that the breaking of a President which could be an ultimate end of the current moratorium trend if carried out as threatened, has certain possible serious consequences.

The spectre of George Wallace hangs over the national scene like an ominous, distant, thunder cloud. The power vacuum that could be created by the failure of Richard Nixon could precipitate devastating events politically; the 10,000,000 votes for Wallace takes on a new and, in that event, a threatening significance.

There is a ground swell developing today of antagonism toward an academic community that constantly tears down, but offers nothing, in the way of constructive creative alternative plans.

May I suggest that, among other projects, your student activities group could show some fervor on behalf of those American prisoners of war held by North Vietnam who are daily subjected both to brutal, inhuman, physical cruelty and to psychological torture that has as its malignant purpose the breaking of the human spirit. Your interests, as students, are rather narrow in this unhappy war.

Here's what your first year or two at IBM could be like.

You'll become involved fast. You'll find we delegate responsibility—to the limit of your ability.

At IBM, you'll work individually or on a small team. And be encouraged to contribute your own ideas. You'll advance just as fast and far as your talents can take you.

Here's what three recent graduates are doing.

Soon after his IBM programmer training, John Klayman, B.S. Math '68, began writing programs used by a computer system to schedule every event in the Apollo tracking stations. And when the finished programs were turned over to NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, he was responsible for making them work.

Marketing representative Bill Manser, B.S. '67, is selling computer systems for scientific and engineering applications. His technical background and 14 months of training at IBM help him solve his customers' complex information handling problems.

Within three months after her IBM programmer training, Mardi Joyner, B.S. Math '68, found a way to streamline a key part of our Management Information System—a computer complex designed to give decision-makers constantly updated data.

Education Needs Fails According to Truman

SOUTH HADLEY - Education "must bear a necessary and indispensable responsibility for providing the faith and some of the means through which a new generation can live, and as real human beings," Mount Holyoke President David B. Truman, declared Saturday afternoon during his Inauguration Address as "Liberal Education: Source for a New Faith."

Mr. Truman, political scientist, author and former vice-president and provost of Columbia University, was inaugurated Saturday during ceremonies attended by representatives of 182 American colleges and universities, including over 30 presidents; delegates from three foreign universities; 35 learned societies, foundations, professional and cultural organizations; and 14 independent and public schools; as well as members of the College community.

McGeorge Bundy, President of the Ford Foundation and former special assistant to the late John F. Kennedy and former President Lyndon B. Johnson, was the keynote speaker.

Smith College President Thomas C. Mendenhall brought greetings on behalf of the other colleges in the Valley involved in Five-College cooperation; Miss Meribeth E. Cameron, academic dean and professor of history, spoke on behalf of the Mount Holyoke Faculty; Mrs. David J. Stephenson, President of the 19,000 member Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association, spoke for her group; and Janet C. Hall '70, President of the College's Student Government Association, brought greetings from the students.

"Few of us can be unaware of the contemporary fact of profound change, thanks to events that are all too visible," Mr. Truman said. This change, including "the rapid cumulation of technological development and its often wanton exploitation have led us not only to abandon an earlier, naive faith in 'progress' but to entertain an uneasy suspicion that the net result of such innovation and growth may be a decline in the quality of life

The Marching Band's 17 member percussion section, coached by Dr. Peter Tanner, will be featured again this Saturday as the Band presents its final show of the season END OF AN ERA. Great female vocalists of this decade will be spotlighted by Barbra Streisand's "People," Aretha Franklin's "Respect," and Nancy Sinatra's "These Boots Are Made for Walkin'." This is the Band that drew a standing ovation from the UConn stands and press box: don't miss it!

Peace Corps Representatives to Visit

Representatives from the Peace Corps will be on campus next week to discuss opportunities in that service.

Recently, the Peace Corps has come under heavy criticism by several people for its role in the United States' OFFICE OF FOREIGN SERVICE. The following is the text of a speech delivered by Ann Anderson, of the Corps public information office, detailing the Peace Corps role.

In any society that believes in freedom of speech, questions as to its protection periodically arise. And it is good that they do. It is true that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

The question of freedom of speech in the Peace Corps is very current now. In many quarters people are asking: Can a Peace Corps Volunteer speak out? Can he speak his mind? Are there limits to what he can say?

I have discussed this question with congressional committees. I know it is being discussed on campuses across the country. It is even a point of contention in a legal case before a United States District Court.

I want to take this opportunity today to state the position of the Peace Corps in regard to freedom of speech. It is a position the Peace Corps has always held. It has not always been judiciously applied, and there have been misjudgments made about it. But we believe the position to be valid, and it seems, very much in need of restatement.

The Peace Corps Volunteer is not a political agent of the United States government; he is an expression of the good will of the American people, and a representative of the powerful idea, as Sargent Shriver, the first Director of the Peace Corps put it, "that free and committed men and women can cross, even transcend, boundaries of culture and language, of alien tradition and great disparities of wealth, of old hostilities and new nationalisms, to meet with other men and women on the common ground of service to human welfare and human dignity."

That idea can only be served by free men and women. To place restrictions on the thought or speech of our Volunteers would undermine what they best represent: the ability and imagination which a free society can mobilize for the common good.

Our Volunteers to overseas as free men to help pull down the barriers that exist between men. They are not expected to practice any particular faith, nor preach any doctrine, nor publicize or adhere to any policy.

At the same time, however, a Volunteer is expected to practice self-discipline, exhibit sensitivity and maturity, and observe limitations that his own good sense would suggest.

For example, a Volunteer is asked to respect the religious and cultural traditions of the country in which he is serving. He also must not interfere in that country's politics.

A Volunteer is the guest of a foreign government. He is sent overseas to do a specific job. That job never requires him to become politically involved in the affairs of his host country. To meddle in the internal political affairs of a foreign nation would make a Peace Corps Volunteer a source of controversy instead of an agent of understanding.

In an editorial last week, the NEW YORK TIMES touched on an aspect of this; it observed that there are any number of countries "where domestic conditions dictate policies that are quite different from those Americans would prescribe for themselves." The Peace Corps expects its Volunteers to recognize this too, as well as that they are sent abroad to work with and among people - and not to advise them, employ them, or use them.

These aren't considerations that can be codified and rigidly adhered to. They are simply part of the realization that the Peace Corps is not designed for and doesn't practice political activity.

This doesn't mean that a Volunteer is expected to avoid controversy, or if he is a teacher, to hedge when a student asks a question. The sharing of opinions and values is inherent in the idea of the Peace Corps, and we want that sharing to continue.

The Peace Corps Volunteers go abroad free to learn and free to be a learning experience for others. His freedom of speech must be valued because it is a right his government guarantees him, and because he cannot be effective in his job if that right is abridged. So too be is directed not to involve himself in his host country's politics because that would destroy his effectiveness.

The effectiveness wit h which he can do his job has always been the paramount consideration in questions of freedom of speech among Peace Corps Volunteers. It will remain so. When a situation arises in which the issue of free expression is raised, then a judgment will be made upon the individual merits of the case. A fair hearing and due process will be guaranteed to all involved.

The viewpoint of a Volunteer's host country will be crucial. If the government of Chile or Malawi decides that a Volunteer's behavior is detrimental to the job he has been asked to do, then we must honor that country's viewpoint.

The errors that have been made in the past canno t bind us now, nor undermine this policy. Forty thousand Americans have served in the Peace Corps in the eight years of its history, and in those years only one case involving these issues has come before the courts. Senator Fulbright has said, that isn't "too bad a record." I think that, in itself, is evidence of something.

Thinking Determines the Course Of Our Lives and World Peace

Computers can make a million separate decisions in one second but they can't create love and understanding in the heart. They can't change our feelings toward the man next door.

Despite today's technological explosion, "it's still the kind of thinking we do that determines the course of our lives and the freedom and peace of the world," says James Spencer, a Christian Science lecturer from Detroit, Michigan. He spoke Wednesday in the Colonial Lounge under the auspices of the Christian Science Organization.

To illustrate how improved thinking, based on an understanding of God, can change our lives for the better, Mr. Spencer told of being healed through prayer of an injury he received in a college football game.

The Science that Mary Baker Eddy discovered, the lecturer said, has divine Mind, or God, as its Principle. It is demonstrated, or proved practical, through thinking based on the divine Mind, not on brain cells, he explained.

Christian Scientists use the term Mind, he said, to designate "the purposeful, divine intelligence behind the universe." Mrs. Eddy's life, Mr. Spencer, said, exemplified a natural turning to God as divine Mind. He quoted from her book, MISCELLANEOUS WRITINGS, "Every human thought must turn instinctively to the divine Mind as its sole centre and intelligence."

Christian Scientists were taught by Mrs. Eddy to be concerned with the welfare of others, Mr. Spencer said. Christian Science, he told his audience, is concerned with social injustices and social ills as well as with individual physical, moral, and mental problems. Christian Science, he continued, goes beyond concern with bringing about "a happy material state of things." Its deeper concern, he said, is proof of "the basic fact of the perfection of God, divine Mind. . . and man's relation to God as God's perfect spiritual creation."

And he added, "The possibilities we have for helping the world through right thinking are unlimited; they are without horizon."

Mr. Spencer explained that in Christian Science all discords are seen as false impressions or misconceptions and are dealt with as illusions from which men must be awakened. Our material experience, he continued, is a false impression presented not only to our vision but also to our hearing and feeling and thinking. Thoughts based on the one divine Mind correct the misconceptions that make up a discordant, materialistic world Mr. Spencer said.

Interest Revives Recreation Club

By MARY ANN BAGDON
Staff Correspondent

"The Recreation Club is really beginning to shape up," says newly elected president Christy Hass. Inactive for three years, the Club almost remained so this year. "However, one glorious day, members of the Recreation 112 class, meeting in the fields near the Southwest Campus, decided they wanted to camp-out there that night. They obtained official permission and had a great time and someone said -- 'why don't we form a club and schedule more events like this'?"

Howie Sherman made all the arrangements for the first meeting October 1, attended by about 20. "Howie discovered that the Recreation Club was still officially recognized by the Student Senate even though it was inactive, due to the foresight of Miss Scanlon, who resubmitted the organization's constitution each year," said Miss Hass.

Elections were held at the second meeting on October 8. The results were: President Christy Hass; Vice-President - David Murey; Treasurer - Joseph Charest; and Secretary - Kathy King.

The aims of the organization, according to Miss Hass are: 1. To be of service to all people interested in the field of recreation - providing speakers, organizing panels, and conducting discussions in all the major areas of recreation; 2. To initiate campus community wide recreational activities; 3. To ignite fund raising programs to increase the probability of club trips; and 4. To conduct exchange programs with the nine other Recreation Clubs in the New England area.

Latest developments of the Club include "Meetings to be held the first and third Tuesday of every month; dues established at $2.50 per year; and chairmen for programs, refreshment, and publicity committees designated," said Miss Hass.

The next three meetings will concentrate on revising the old constitution and electing a new club advisor.

As for the first function of the revived Club: "To enter and win the Halloween Window Painting Contest. The greatest accomplishment thus far is that we've obtained an official Club mail box #620!"

Miniskirts Upset Russia

MOSCOW (AP) - Russia's Miniskirt war rages on, and enemies of the upper-thigh exposure Wednesday proposed everything from fines to purge-like methods. The minis had their defenders, too.

Writing to a Soviet newspaper, one man likened miniskirts--minlyubka in Russian-- to a class enemy that must be wiped out, the way rich landowners were liquidated by the Communist regime.

Literaturnaya Gazeta-Literary Gazette- said other letters it received in the controversy "seriously proposed leveling a fine for appearance in a miniskirt, like the fine for hooliganism."

This would mean a fine of up to $33.33 for wearing minis.

Rejecting such proposals, writer A. Raskin said Russians were letting themselves get too excited. He defended men who admire miniskirts and the few daring Russian women who wear them.

As to fines, he reminded miniskirt opponents of public opposition earlier when police at southern Soviet resorts arrested and fined vacationers for "overly exposed fashions."

Raskin said he himself thought minis were "immodest and unesthetic" but he saw a worse threat in the extremist measures proposed by its opponents.

"More dangerous than naked knees," he said, "are the people who demand administrative measures, fines, defamation, and almost pillory, for those who wear a 'mini' "

After giving opponents a hearing, Raskin let miniskirt admirers speak.

An engineer from the Baltic port of Riga said opponents of the style were the same kind of prudes "who put paper skirts and not mini ones on old statues."

Dr. William W. Rice awards a $500 scholarship to UMass student Paul Diperri on behalf of the New England Kiln Drying Association.

University Junior Receives Wood Science Scholarship

Paul J. Diperri, a junior in the wood science and technology program at the University of Massachusetts, has been awarded the $500 J. Harry Rich Memorial Scholarship for 1969 by the New England Kiln Drying Association.

The scholarship, founded in memory of a long-time faculty member at UMass, is awarded each year to a student studying wood technology at a New England or New York institution. The recipient must be enrolled in either a two-year or four-year program and indicate an interest in working in the field of wood drying.

Dr. William W. Rice, associate professor of wood science at U-Mass and executive secretary of NEKDA, presented the award at the recent fall meeting.

Diperri, a native of Fitchburg, plans to enter the wood products industry in either the field of production management or product development.

Among speakers at the technical sessions at the fall meeting were Dr. R. Bruce Hoadley of the UMass wood science department. Dr. Harold B. Gatslick, professor of forestry at UMass led the discussion in the Problem Clinic, a regular feature of NEKDA meetings.

At the association's business meeting, Dr. Gatslick was elected treasurer and Dr. Rice was elected executive secretary.

Talented Writer Hosts WFCR Radio Show

He is the winner of PLAYBOY magazine's humor-fiction award, the author of a best selling novel, playwright, an actor, a television host, teacher, and, according to the New York Times, "one of the great raconteurs in the history of radio."

His name is Jean Shepherd, and his radio show is now heard weeknights at 11:00 p.m. on WFCR, Five College Radio, in Amherst.

"Inside Jean Shepherd" is a reflection of all the talents - as writer, satirist, philosopher, showman - which have endeared Shepherd to his New York radio audience for years.

A 40 minute monologue, his show changes direction whenever Shepherd gets a brainstorm. Take, for example, the time he spoke on the phone with a Baltimore Orioles' fan on the eve of the World Series. After defending the honor of his heroes, the Mets, he abruptly hung up, and launched into a diatribe on the benefits of all-pidgeon warfare (no people would be killed).

Working with a handful of notes, and using "dead air the way a writer uses a blank paper," Shepherd is one of radio's few personalities who can claim that his audience really listens to him.

There was the time when he made up the title of a book, "I Libertine" and raved about it on the air for a couple of days. In less than a week, bookstores throughout his listening area were besieged by requests for the book. And while frantic clerks called bewildered publishers, a book which did not exist made the New York Times best seller list.

The younger segment of his audience is equally obedient. Several weeks ago, Shepherd advised his young listeners to place small notes in places where they'd be seen, saying simply: "Flick Lives." (Flick is a character from IN GOD WE TRUST, EVERY-ONE ELSE PAYS, a Shepherd novel which made the best seller list legitimately).

One New Jersey man found "Flick Lives" on a postage-stamp size piece of paper in the inside of his freezer. Others turned up in supermarkets and stores, on bus doors and on telephone poles.

"A product of the American midwest," a fact which he "never tries to eradicate," Shepherd began his career as a stage and television actor. He has taught at New York University, and has written a number of magazine articles, in addition to two novels.

"Jean Shepherd has a lot more to offer than any other radio personality I know," one New York critic has said. Jean Shepherd is a lot more than a radio personality. He is talent, available now, to listeners of WFCR, 88.5 fm, weekday nights at 11:00 p.m.

Philadelphia Hospital Treats 'Total Child"

"The child with a handicap is first a child whose basic needs are those of a child," said Dr. Peter W. Vanace, chief of pediatric services at Moss Rehabilitation Hospital.

"The opportunity to meet, study and play with other children is a critical part of the normal growth and development of any child."

The Moss program hospitalizes the most critically ill, keeps other handicapped children in a "9-5" day care regimen at the hospital and brings back other children who have been discharged, for check-ups and training.

"Education and recreation are not neglected," Vanace says. "We don't want the child to fall behind. This can be as damaging psychologically as his chronic, crippling illness."

A retired public school principal has scheduled an average of four hours a day of teacher instruction to children in beds or wheelchairs in specially outfitted classrooms.

Currently, the hospital is using 12 of its 160 rooms for the program, but Vanace hopes expansion will eventually require a separate building.

A hospital team of physician, psychologist, therapist, social worker and teacher is working with 25 children. Some have lost one or more limbs. Others suffer from arthritis, cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy and other crippling illnesses.

Most of the hospitalized children will stay two months, although some may have to stay up to six months.

Dr. Naegele Appointed To Study Environment

Dr. John A. Naegele, head of the UMass department of environmental sciences in Waltham, has been appointed by the Agricultural Research Institute of the National Academy of Sciences to a special committee to study "Agriculture in Relation to the Quality of the Environment." The appointment was announced by Dr. A. A. Spielman, dean of the UMass College of Agriculture.

Since February of this year, Dr. Naegele has been serving on an Ad Hoc Advisory Committee to the Division of Air Pollution and Radiological Health, Massachusetts Department of Public Health, in the preparation of proposed "Ambient Air Quality Standards for Particulates and Oxides of Sulfur". This committee was appointed by Dr. Alfred L. Frechette, Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

are your contact lenses more work than they're worth?

If you're tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It's Lensine the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—preparing, cleaning, and soaking. ■ Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your contacts coats and lubricates the lens surface making it smoother and non-irritating. Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. ■ Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic making it ideal for storage of your lenses between wearing periods. And you get a removable storage case on the bottom of every bottle, a Lensine exclusive for proper lens hygiene. ■ It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and could seriously endanger vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. ■ Caring for contact lenses can be as convenient as wearing them with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Yan. Conf. Crown at Stake as UMass Hosts Vermont

Catamounts Top All Offensive Depts, Victors over Northeastern, URI, UNH

Paced by the top running back, quarterback and receiver in the Yankee Conference in the persons of Bob Rodger, Fran Peterson and Gene Monahan, the University of Vermont will be out to prevent UMass from winning the Conference football championship at Alumni Stadium on Saturday. Game time is 1:30.

The Catamounts bring with them a 2-1 Conference mark which puts them in second place behind the 3-0 Redmen. A victory by Vermont will keep alive their Beangot hopes while a loss will surrender the title to UMass.

UVM's big three on offense should pose considerable problems for the Redman defense. Sophomore Rodger, a 6'-190 package of power, has gained 720 yards this year which is 221 yards more than his nearest Yan-Con rival, U-Conn's Vinny Clements.

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Asst. Sports Editor

He has averaged six yards a carry and wears the same No. 31 on his football jersey that former Catamount great Bob Mitchell made famous two years ago. Rodger's seven touchdowns make him the leading Conference scorer.

Senior quarterback Fran Peterson, 6'2-195, is the master of a fine aerial attack. He has a fine trio of receivers and has used their abilities to the tune of 78 completed passes in 127 attempts for a .614 percentage and eight touchdowns.

Split end Monahan, a 5'11-170 junior, has been on the receiving end of 41 of Peterson's tosses which have earned him 463 yards and 5 TD's. A versatile athlete, he is also a member of the Vermont basketball squad.

Complimenting Monahan at the other end slot is 5'11-210 Harry Doria, a senior who has caught 17 passes, fourth best in the Conference. UVM's next best receiver is its fullback Pete Clifford, a 5'10-193 senior. He has come through with 14 catches and his performance as a running back has prevented opponents from keying on Rodger. Averaging 5.1 yards a carry for 361 yards, Clifford ranks fourth in the league.

Rounding out the Catamount backfield is senior halfback Harry Canning, 6'3-205. After playing defensive end for a year and a half, he started at halfback against Middlebury last year and piled up 292 yards rushing for a school record.

The tackles in the offensive line are soph Gay Reed, 6'-220, and big Bob Lynch, a 6'6-275 junior who wears a size 16 1/2 shoe. At the guard positions are junior Dan DiRocco, 6'-210, and senior Larry Kelly, 6'-215. Both are steady performers. In the middle of the line is 6'2-230 Bob Stearns, a junior center.

On defense the Catamounts do a lot of switching off and maneuvering from position to position. For example, Ron Gargano, a 6'-215 senior, plays at linebacker but lines up as a third defensive tackle. He is characterized as a "flip-flop tackle".

Vermont also employs a "flip-flop line backer", who is 6'1-205 soph Kevin Lynch, and a "flip-flop linebacker, defensive halfback" who is 6'-190 Fran Prondecki, also a sophomore. Basically both of these guys have the responsibilities of stopping the run or the pass, depending upon the situation.

The members of the UVM front four neither flip nor flop but play things by the book. The defensive ends are 6'2-192 Tom McLaughlin, a junior, and 6'1-200 John Wojciechowski, a senior. Wojciechowski's brother, Peter, is a sophomore reserve guard for the Redmen. The tackle spots are manned by Larry Kull, a 5'11-215 soph, and Garry Elliot, a 6'2-253 junior. Elliot is considered by many to be Vermont's best football player.

The lone stationary linebacker is sophomore John Pelcher, 5'11-185. In the defensive backfield are two veterans, 6'-175 junior Bob Wilkinson and 5'10-165 senior Frank Mazanec, and one sophomore, 5'7-155 Paul Walker. Mazanec is the team captain, the first defensive halfback ever to be chosen as Catamount leader. Wilkinson is also a wing on the UVM hockey team.

Walker doubles as placekicker and has converted 11 out of 12 extra points this year, placing him second in the Conference behind UMass' Dennis Gagnon.

Vermont has an overall record of 3-3. It has taken the likes of Northeastern, 39-31, Rhode Island 41-14, and New Hampshire, 27-7. Losses have come at the hands of UConn., 26-6, BU, 27-7,and Wilkes, 17-7. Saturday the Catamounts will be trying to snap a ten-game winning streak of the Redmen that dates back to 1951 when they last beat UMass

FRANK MAZANEC (left), team captain and standout defensive back, will provide a tough test for Redman aerial attacks this Saturday. Although the Catamounts are leading the league in most areas, they will be playing under the jinx of a ten game winning streak which UMass has held since 1951. (MDC photo by John Kelly)

Booters Edged by Worcester Tech, 2-1
Yan. Conf. Hopes on Line Sat. vs UVM

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

John Best's third period goal broke a 1-1 tie and gave Worcester Tech a 2-1 victory over the UMass soccer team on Tuesday afternoon. The goal ruined another come-from-behind bid from the Redmen. Sophomore Lindo Alves had tied the game for UMass moments earlier and it looked like the Redmen might pull out a win. However injuries and a few bad breaks foiled their attempt.

The game was very rough with a lot of contact. Al Spezeski scored the game's only other goal in the first period and the Redmen had to play catch-up the rest of the way. In the second period, Duane Brown was ejected from the game for colliding with the WPI goalie. Co-captain Dick Matuszczak made an effort to play with a broken nose but had to be removed at the half. These settacks, coupled with playing on a smaller field, upset the Redmen attack. UMass outshot the Engineers 11-7, but they couldn't get theball in the net.

The loss put the Redmen at 4-3 on the season and WPI advanced to 7-2. The Redmen remain at 2-1 in the conference but this will change one way or the other on Saturday when Yankee Conference powerhouse Vermont comes to Amherst.

The Catamounts have won five straight YC soccer titles and are currently ranked sixth in N.E. Over that five year span, they have ference opponents. They are currently 7-1 on the season and with a 4-0 YC record. They have clinched at least a tie for the conference title.

UMass is the only team which still has a chance to catch Vermont and it will take a monumental effort. The visitors will feature an all senior team which has been together for three years. All-conference standouts Mike Sullivan and Bob Green are the leading scorers. Vermont's only loss came at the hands of Bridgeport, Redman Coach Peter Broaca is very concerned with the rash of injuries that have hit his team. Along with Matuszczak, Augie Calheno, Alves, Dick McCarron, Joe Ciernawski and Marc Cantor will all be sub-par for the game.

"If we were healthy we would be all right for the game, but the injuries are going to make it that much harder to win," said Broaca. "The kids have given a great effort and have played hard all year," he continued. "I have been real pleased with the way the team has played."

A win on Saturday would almost clinch a tie for the title for the Redmen with only UNH left to play and if they are right on their game, an upset could be in the making.

Sarno, DeFlavio Receive Awards at 'M' Club Luncheon

It's getting to be monotonous for Ed Sarno to keep winning Varsity 'M' Club awards for being the outstanding offensive player. The senior co-captain was chosen by his coaches for the third week, for his 77 yard, one touchdown performance against Connecticut.

Sarno joined sophomore defensive tackle Bill DeFlavio, who was a shoo-in for his superb performance against the Huskies. DeFlavio who was the Yankee Conference defensive player of the week, made nine tackles, trapping UConn quarterbacks four times, while joining the rest of the Redmen defense in holding the vaunted UConn rushing attack to 37 total yards.

Assistant Coach Dave Kelley was not too encouraging while talking about the Vermont offense which tests the Redmen in a showdown battle Saturday that could mean a conference title for UMass. Kelley termed the Catamounts, "a team that is capable of scoring 40 points against anyone. They have a habit of getting up for big games, and they'll be a lot of trouble."

Head coach Vic Fusia also had somethings to say about the Vermont attack. Fusia diagrammed the vaunted wishbone 'T' used by Vermont, and made famous by Texas and the University of Houston. The coach expects Vermont to use the triple option, employing the running of sophomore standout Bob Rodger, and the passing of quarterback Fran Peterson.

Fusia indicated the game could be a high scoring affair, and stated that the Redmen will have to score well to win.

Bowling Notes

A ten-pin intercollegiate bowling team is being formed at UMass. The team will be determined by a no handicap roll-off on Friday, October 31st., from 4:30-10:00 p.m. at Boyden Lanes. The team operates on a club basis and is sponsored by RSO, therefore freshmen are eligible. Team status does not interfere with intramural eligibility. The top twelve scorers, based on total pinfall for six strings will be on the team, with six members actively participating in each tournament.

The UMass team is entered in the Tri-State League, comprised of teams from Mass., R.I., and Conn. The league sponsors seven tournaments, all no handicap, with three string singles events, doubles events, and team events. There are also twelve head to head matches; seven within the tournament structure and five outside matches. High total pinfall determines all winners.

Each bowler must pay for his six strings ($2.10) in the roll-off only.

Members of the Student Personnel staff last night asked Student Senate leaders to meet with them to discuss Wednesday night's Senate decision to challenge the Board of Trustee's power to regulate student's social lives.

In an open letter to the Student Senate, the staff members agreed with the principle of student self-determination, but opposed the "confrontation position" of the Senate.

The Student Senate voted unanimously Wednesday night to assume the power of regulation 24 hour open houses in dormitories without required approval of the Trustees.

On Sept. 22, the Board voted to support the principle of student self-government in the open house question, but withheld granting permission until a workable security system could be formulated and presented to them at their next meeting, which is in two weeks.

The letter to the Senate said: It is essential that dialogue continue with students regarding the principle of self-determination of social regulations for undergraduate students. However, many legal and practical questions still must be faced and answered.

Since the Student Senate has reaffirmed its willingness to accept "advice and assistance of the Student Personnel Services" and since the Student Personnel Services staff are eager to discuss the issue with students, we state the following:

The Area Coordinators staff and the Student Activities staff endorse the principle that students should have primary responsibility for their own social regulations. We must state that we do not agree with the recent method or means employed by the Student Senate for attaining this principle, the position in which the Student Senate may place the University community, or the confrontation position that the Senate has taken.

We propose that we and the Senate begin discussions immediately to resolve the issue with the hope of attaining the mutually sought principle.

Area Coordinators Staff: Paul W. Brubacker, Rene Carew, Sue Garson, Bennie E. McDonald, John A. Messenger, John D. Robinson, Donald Tepper, Thomas H. Trotman, Mike West.

Student Activities Staff: Armand H. Demers, Lois M. Frey, Sheila A. McRevey, James P. Riley, Gerald Scanlon.

Area Governments Move Against Senate Action

By RICHARD C. HANSON

Senate resolution 306 concerning Open Housing received stiff criticism from the Central and Northeast Area Governments in the form of resolutions passed last night in special sessions held by both areas.

The Northeast resolution offered criticism of the "methods or means of attaining dorm autonomy, as proposed by the Student Senate" in resolution S306. The Northeast Congress members feel that the Student Senate has placed the "University community in a confrontation status with both the Board of Trustees and the University Administration." They further "recommend that the Houses within the Northeast Area suspend social action until the forthcoming meeting of the Board of Trustees."

The Central Area Council passed a similar resolution recommending the "delay" of social legislation concerning open house, pending the outcome of the next meeting of the trustees." The Central Area Council members further recommended that "every House Council conduct a referendum of house residents concerning the Student Senate action of Oct. 29."

There was great concern over the reaction of the Board of Trustees to the Senate action. Even the more liberal members of the Board were said to be "angry" over recent events concerning open house and other "experiments" on campus. As one member of the Central Area Council said, "The Senate is going to have to come up with some damn good rhetoric."

Kopechne Inquest Closed to Press

BOSTON (AP) - The long-delayed inquest into Mary Jo Kopechne's death must be held in secret, with the press and public barred, the Massachusetts Supreme Court rules Thursday.

The court also ruled that witnesses at the inquest - including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in whose car Miss Kopechne died - may be accompanied and advised by counsel, but it denied a request from Kennedy's lawyers that they be given the privilege of cross-examination.

The court also denied a request from Kennedy's lawyers that Edgartown District Court Judge James A. Boyle be disqualified from presiding at the proceeding.

The decision leaves to Boyle the matter of rescheduling the inquest. It was to have started Sept. 3 in Edgartown, but was postponed Sept. 2 when Kennedy's lawyers took their requests to the state Supreme Court.

Reached at his home on Martha's Vineyard, Boyle said he would have no comment on the decision until he has time to read it fully.

He added that he would set a new date for the inquest only after his study of the decision is complete.

Boyle must issue a report after the inquest in which he determines the legal - as opposed to the medical - cause of death. The report may or may not lead to further legal action.

Kennedy was flying from Washington to Boston when the state Supreme Court's decision was announced.

He talked briefly with newsmen upon his arrival here, saying he thought it would be "improper for me to comment before I have had a chance to see the decision."

Kennedy's car plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island, off the Massachusetts coast, July 18. Although the senator escaped relatively unharmed, Miss Kopechne was trapped inside.

A medical examiner ruled her death an accidental drowning. The body was buried in Pennsylvania without an autopsy.

Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis, in whose jurisdiction the accident occurred, currently is seeking to have Judge Bernard C. Brominski in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., authorize exhumation of the body for an autopsy. The judge has not yet issued a ruling.

Dinis, reached at his home in New Bedford, said he would have no comment on the Massachusetts high court's decision.

Similarly, Edward B. Hanify, Kennedy's chief attorney, declined to comment on the ruling.

Chicago 8 Trial Disrupted

By F. RICHARD CICCONE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Black Panther leader Bobby G. Seale, strapped to a chair and gagged for a second day, overcame these restraints Thursday and twice interrupted his trial.

Seale, one of eight men being tried on charges of conspiring to incite rioting during last year's Democratic National Convention, once slipped off his gag and shouted obscenities at Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

The second time he mumbled muffled sounds through the tightly wound cloth while the judge was addressing the U.S. District Court Jury.

The first interruption was quelled by U.S. marshals who immediately pinned Seale and dragged him to an adjacent room. Jerry Rubin, a codefendant, shouted: "The marshal just hit Bobby in the mouth with his elbow."

Seale screamed that the marshals were kicking him and he called the judge a "rotten lowlife, lying fascist dog." Newsmen sitting less than a foot from Seale said they did not see any blows struck.

William M. Kunstler, a defense lawyer, said during the ruckus: "Your Honor, when are we going to stop this medieval torture . . . I am utterly ashamed at this moment to be an American lawyer."

"You should be," Judge Hoffman replied.

After a recess, Leonard I. Weinglass, another defense lawyer, asked the judge to poll the jury of 10 women and 2 men to determine if the disturbances affected them.

Thomas A. Foran, U.S. district attorney, called Weinglass' motion "gross misconduct." Weinglass began a reply and in the middle of his argument, Richard M. Schultz, an assistant to Foran, leaped up and began yelling at Weinglass.

Throughout the arguments, Seale continued his muffled shouts.

Judge Hoffman denied the motion to poll the jurors because he said the form of the motion was bad. Weinglass asked if he could rephrase the motion. "No," Judge Hoffman said.

Judge Hoffman was instructing members to disregard the incidents in the courtroom, but Seale continued shouting through the gag. A marshal placed his hand over Seale's face and he was again taken out of the room. His gag again came off and he shouted as he was carried through the door, "He's the judge a liar!"

Simultaneously, Rennard C. 'Rennie' Davis, a codefendant, stood and told the jurors that while they were out of the courtroom the marshals had struck Seale.

Judge Hoffman then suggested a recess until the afternoon session but the prosecution asked to continue. Seale was returned to the courtroom, this time so gagged that he could not move his lower jaw.

The judge then ordered a recess for the remainder of the morning session, about an hour earlier than usual. "There are aspects of this case I want to consider before I resume this trial," he said.

Two policemen testified briefly during the afternoon session of the court. After the jury was dismissed for the day Seale began a muffled argument with the judge.

Judge Hoffman said, "Time is running out, Mr. Seale. If you persist in these disruptions, the court will deal appropriately with you." He did not elaborate.

Train Bill Declared Void

Because of an error in violation of the Financial Policy Booklet, the Student Senate had to declare its passage of a bill to provide $10,000 for a train to transport students to the march on Washington during the November Moratorium, as void.

The booklet says that all appropriations over $25 have to go through the Finance Committee, or the Finance Committee of the Whole (entire Senate) or the Senate must have a two-thirds vote to change this procedure. None of these three moves were made, thus making the action invalid.

A reliable source in the Senate says that President Bruce Balboni will bring the bill up for discussion again next Wednesday at the Senate Meeting after the bill has gone through the proper channels.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

PARIS (AP) - The United States proposed yesterday that the Vietnam peace talks be restricted to the four principal delegates and a few advisers in a new closed-session attempt to break the deadlock. Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the bid at the 40th session of the talks.

Mrs. Delee Speaks Sat.

In Dorchester County South Carolina, 27 Indians and Black parents face jail sentences because of their refusal to accept what they term the injustices of a corrupt educational and political system which they say sought to deny their children the right of equal educational opportunity. The people in Dorchester involved in the fight against the educational institutions of that county see their struggle as a basic struggle for justice and human rights. To them education means meeting the qualifications necessary for a job. A job means, survival, clothes on their backs; food in their stomachs; a roof over their heads. Victoria Delee, mother of five, black, uneducated and committed to the struggle, puts it this way, "God ain't dead and we move on someway, somehow."

The supreme court decision stated that all District 3 schools in Dorchester County present plans for total desegregation to be completed by 1971. The school officials enacted a "freedom of choice plan" which supposedly allowed parents to send their children to the school of their choice. Blacks in the county who filed for transfer met little resistance, but when the Indians filed for transfer under the same decision, they were rejected. Finally giving in to pressure from both the Indian and Black Communities, they agreed to allow the Indians to enter predominantly white schools. Indian parents with Black supporters were arrested for trespassing while trying to register their children in a white school. The Black Community raised enough bail to release those under arrest.

After more pressure was brought on the school officials, their school again agreed to open the schools to Indian children. When the indian and black parents arrived on the school yard on Monday, they were again jailed. They were released on bail the following Wednesday. That night during a meeting to discuss further action, 27 people were arrested for disturbing the peace.

The struggle in Dorchester has been long and hard. The Black and Indians live in poverty. The county itself is 80% Black with an indian population of approximately 500, both of which live on incomes below the subsistance level. In the Indian community there is only a grade school. Not being allowed to enter the predominantly white school and with no political support, the Indian community receives no education beyond the 8th grade. The support they have been getting is from Mrs. Delee and the Black community. This support is being exhausted by the continuous arrests, the latest has been the arrest of all black students in the high school. Some were arrested Oct. 30 because they refused to allow one of their number to be arrested for talking back to a teacher. Support is needed immediately. Funds are needed by Tues. Nov. 4th or 27 parents will go to jail for seeking to fulfill a basic right. Give money to Mrs. Victoria Delee, Rts. 2 Box 142, Ridgeville, S. C. Phone 803-873-3390. In Amherst call 253-7283.

Mrs. Delee will be on campus this Friday thru Sunday in order to raise needed funds. She will be on campus at night in Mills House Coffee House; a press conference will be at 1:00 p.m. Saturday in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union; and a speech will be given Sat. night at 8:00 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Auditorium. Also at the Union, 7:30 Friday.

Vassar Blacks Occupy Building

By LINDA LEBSACK
Associated Press Writer

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) - Negro girls from Vassar College's Afro-American Society, aided by Negro male students, occupied a portion of Main Building early Thursday.

They took over the administration section of the U-shaped building on the rolling, treelined campus and nailed the doors shut. The two wings which house dormitories were not affected.

"We have stopped the school," said a spokesman for the society, which claims to represent more than half of the 59 Negroes attending the 1,600-student college.

It was not immediately known how many girls took part in the seizure or how manymale students helped them. The occupied section includes a cafeteria, the school post office, telephone switchboard and administrative offices.

Most classes were held as usual, but the seizure curtailed food service in the cafeteria, cut off mail delivery and disrupted telephone communications.

Vassar's faculty met in the afternoon with school President Alan Simpson to discuss what is to be done about the takeover.

The demonstration began at 3:25 a.m. when the girls walked through the front door of the building and asked the night watchman and switchboard operator to leave.

The doors were nailed shut and corridor entrances also were locked. A spokesman for the group said the building would be held until the college met their demands.

The girls said they wanted an all-black dormitory and a black studies program leading to a degree.

Vassar officials said one floor of Kendrick House on campus is already almost all black.

A black studies program was instituted last year on a pass or fail basis. It's an experimental program and does not offer a degree.

College officials notified the Dutchess County Sheriff's Department of the occupation, but made no request for police help.

Vassar, a liberal arts college, was founded in 1861 by British-born brewer Matthew Vassar. It was for females only until this year when a small group of males was admitted.

A bright idea comes to Art Cohen, news director of WFCR (88.5 FM), as the station prepares to launch its November Fund Drive Saturday. Planned festivities include auctions, old timey radio and pledge-ins.

Paris Peace Talks May Close Door

By MORRIS W. ROSENBERG
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) - The United States proposed Thursday that the Vietnam peace talks be restricted to the four principal delegates and a few advisors in a new closed-sessions attempt to break the deadlock.

Hanoi and the Viet Cong turned down the bid at the 40th session of the talks. Both sides agreed that no progress has been made in the Paris discussions and each blamed the other for the failure.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, chief of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government - PRG- delegation, immediately denounced the Lodge proposal as a "maneuver" to avoid direct talks with the PRG, to "legalize" the Saigon regine, and to "conceal U. S. machinations to continue and intensify the war of aggression."

She said she was ready for private talks with the U. S. delegation "today or tomorrow" on the basis of the PRG's 10-point program. That calls for the unconditional withdrawal of all U. S. and other foreign allied troops.

Defense Dept. Cancels High Cost Jet Bomber

By DALE BURGESS
Associated Press Writer

GRISSOM AIR FORCE BASE, Ind. (AP) - The B58 Hustler, one of the mightiest and most expensive combat planes ever built, is being taken out of service by the Air Force without ever having dropped a bomb in anger.

The 86 planes are being pulled from the Strategic Air Command's service effective Jan. 31 under Defense Department orders announced Wednesday.

The 305th Bomb Wing at Grissom and the 43rd Bomb Wing at Little Rock Air Foce Base in Arkansas each have 43 of the sleek, supersonic bombers.

The Hustlers are nine years old but still are the fastest bombers in the non-Communist world, with admitted speeds of more than 1,300 miles an hour. SAC used to keep 40 per cent of them in the air at all times. With improved alert systems, SAC decided about five years ago to shift to a ground readiness plan. At the B58 bases, about 40 per cent of crews, ground personnel and security forces are dressed and ready to go at all times.

A Grissom spokesman said a B58 could be in the air within 15 minutes of an emergency call.

The Hustler, much of its internal gear still highly classified, is a compact mass of offensive and defensive equipment.

It carries more fuel than a railroad tank car can hold. Its four jet engines turn out more power than 34 diesel locomotives.

The Hustler repeatedly has broken world speed and payload records, including an 8,028-mile flight from Tokyo to London in eight hours and 35 minutes in 1963.

The B58 can take off westward from New York at sunrise and beat the sun to Los Angeles by an hour and a half.

It carries a crew of only three but the mortality rate, even in peaceful flights, has been high. Since Grissom got its first Hustler in 1961, B58s have been involved in 12 accidents in which 19 airmen were killed. However, its ejection system has been improved in recent years and nobody was injured in two crashes last April near Lincoln, Neb., and Danville, Ill.

The 305th will be converted into a refueling wing, when the B58s leave for storage at another base, probably Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Arizona.

Viet Leader Wants Peace

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) - Sen. Tran Van Don, who as a general led the coup that toppled the Diem regime in 1963, called yesterday for South Vietnam to adopt a neutralist foreign policy.

He also advocated free political competition with the Viet Cong at home as a way of ending "the current fratricidal war.

"We must put an end to this naive complacency and this shameful reliance on foreign powers," Don said in assailing the policies of President Nguyen Van Thieu's government.

QUINTET PLAYS AT BOWKER NOV. 9

The members of the Philadelphia Woodwind Quartet which will present the second event of the Chamber Music Series, offer a widely ranging program of music. They will play at Bowker Auditorium, Sunday, November 9 at 3 p.m.

The Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet will make one of its infrequent concert appearances Sunday afternoon, November 8, when it appears in Bowker Auditorium at 3 p.m. at the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts.

Appearing under the auspices of the UMass Fine Arts Council's Concert Association, this distinguished group of first-desk Philadelphia Orchestra men will offer a program ranging from works by Mozart and Rossini to Ingolf Dahl and Jacques Ivert.

This concert marks the second event of this year's Chamber Music Series and brings to the attention of local music lovers one of the truly select ensembles in the world today. All of the members of the Quintet occupy principal chairs of the Philadelphia Orchestra and, as such, are involved in very busy careers as performing artists and as faculty members at the famed Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Realizing the need to expose more people to the beauty of chamber music for wind instruments, the five principal wind players of the Philadelphia Orchestra formed the Quintet in 1950. Since this time they have appeared in concerts throughout this country and abroad and have made many recordings for Columbia Records.

Reserved tickets to the Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet's concert Sunday, November 9, are now available from the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, Telephone 545-0202. Persons who purchased single tickets to the New England String Quartet concert are reminded that they may receive full credit toward a season subscription to the Chamber Music Series by contacting the Council box office now.

Poetry Book Stimulating

DECADE: A Collection of Poems from the First Ten Years of The Wesleyan Poetry Program. Selected by Norman Holmes Pearson. Wesleyan University Press.

In these days of tension and unrest, when so many books are only disguised ideologies and so many writers ebb and rise with the political tide, a book like DECADE is an uncommon example of a genre that appears to be dying: the pleasurable poem. Artistically selected by Norman Holmes Pearson, this anthology of poems by 33 contemporary poets is thoroughly enjoyable and stimulating without being overspecialized in a particular style or message.

Included among the featured poets is UMass instructor Robert Bagg. "Soft Answers" and "Death at Pocono Lake Preserve" are the two poems selected from his book "Madonna of the Cello."

Theatre Director Plans Workshop

NORTHAMPTON - The director of New York's La Mama Theatre Troupe, Ed Setrakian, will work with the Smith College Theatre and Speech Department as artistic director for its Playwright Workshop productions.

The Nov. 17 - Dec. 5 intensive workshop will be under the direction of William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker." It will produce performances of scripts authored by Five College area playwrights. While a small company of visiting professional actors rehearses the scripts, they will be discussed by professional, currently active playwrights.

Each play may be given in two contrasting productions so that the playwright and his audience can experience the various viable approaches to a written script once it reaches the stage. Workshop events will be open to the public.

Setrakian's productions with La Mama include Leonard Melfi's "Stimulation," which won for its author the New York Times citation as Best Off-Off-Broadway play of the year; Tom Murrin's "Hung", Mary Mitchell's "Enactment," Melfi's "Having in the Bathroom," and Rochelle Owens' "Homo" and "The Queen of Greece."

Southwest Assembly To Present New Folk Nov. 5, in D.C.

Whether it's concerts on campus, Sun Valley after the ski tows close, the Daytone beach scene during spring break, or a free speech platform during riots, The New Folk with their smooth, vibrating sounds are grooving with hundreds of thousands on the campus scene.

In a day when the groups are many and the sounds easy to copy, The New Folk are a new, unique sound and message. On their fourth campus circuit tour, they do everything from heavy to contemporary, Brazilian, soul, jazz and folk-rock.

The New Folk, a group of five guys and three girls, have toured college and university campuses and leading military bases, traveling 75,000 miles last year. They excited millions through personal appearances, TV, and their third album "Born Yesterday". Scheduled to cut a single this December, they will tour east of the Mississippi most of the year. They have concerts scheduled at such schools as Penn State, Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, Ohio State, University of Michigan, and the University of Wisconsin.

The New Folk sing under the sponsorship of what has been called one of the most dynamic and penetrating student movements of this generation - Campus Crusade for Christ International. Active on hundreds of American campuses and in more than half of the major countries of the world, this movement is highly regarded by leaders in all areas of life for its effectiveness in presenting Christ as a lasting solution to the needs of the world.

This group of students and professionals have come together with the specific purpose of communicating their solution to the questions many students are asking today - the solution found in God's love and forgiveness. Each night they talk with students about the ideas presented in the concert.

As one midwestern college student confessed last year, "I hate the establishment, and, as a member of a radical student group, had committed myself to destroying the American system. I was ready to kill and be killed to further this cause. Then I heard The New Folk sing. My life changed completely. Hatred turned to love as I committed my life to Christ. Now I want to spend the rest of my life serving God."

According to the group emcee, "Students are searching for identity. In their search, some turn to sex, some to drugs, others to religion. I've found that none of these are the answer. Christ is the only one who can give meaning in life, instead of escape from life." The New Folk carry the action with them - that's their bag. Hear them and judge for yourself. Performing in Southwest on Nov. 5, 1969 at 8:00 p.m. in DC #7, sponsored by the southwest Assembly.

Black College Administrators Hold Convention in Wash.

By BILL SIEVERT College Press Service

WASHINGTON (CPS) - While almost 2,000 white college presidents and top administrators were studying "The Campus and Racial Crisis", 111 black college presidents were forming their own structure to deal with crises particular to their campuses.

All of the administrators were in Washington October 8-10 for the annual meeting of the American Council of Education (ACE).

The black presidents revealed plans during the meeting for their new group which will be called "The Organization of Black Colleges" until a permanent name is decided upon.

The organization is not intended to be divorced from white schools or from the total educational picture, according to Vivian Henderson, president of Atlanta's Clark College and chairman of the new group. Member presidents will retain their membership in the ACE.

"We are committed to the immediate goal of racial integration in American life," said President Martin Jenkins of Morgan State College.

Henderson said the primary goal of the group is to influence legislation at all levels of government, particularly to gain a greater share of the resources set aside for higher education for predominantly black colleges.

"We're in a position of reacting to legislation rather than influencing its input. We just don't believe the government can ignore any longer the counseling, insight, advice, and long experience we as black educators have developed," Henderson said. "While we do not believe there is anything racially exclusive about certain aspects of the educational process, we know we have developed certain understandings and insights that a person cannot develop from afar."

"The whole spectrum of higher education is not in the best state. The small colleges have more problems than the large universities. And the small black colleges are having even a greater (financial) crisis," Henderson said.

In a separate session President Herman R. Branson, from Ohio's black Central State College, called for "tithing" from white colleges to black colleges. "Maybe the two H's in higher education, Harvard and Howard, can get together. Harvard could give Howard one-tenth of its gifts."

Branson noted that Harvard University can get more financial gifts annually than the entire United Negro College Fund.

"The need is great; the neglect is even greater," Branson said. "Families that make less than $8,000 a year can't send a child to college."

The number of drop-outs at Central State last year equaled the total drop-out figure at Harvard, Brandeis, MIT, and the main campus of the University of Virginia, he said. "Most of those at Central State dropped out for financial reasons."

Jenkins, speaking with Henderson, said, "If thenation is to maintain its sanity, these institutions (black colleges) are going to have to be used as an essential and important national resource."

The black presidents maintained that while their colleges as well as white colleges must and are becoming integrated, there always will be a role for their colleges to help educate Americans. Their colleges will not die with integrated education, they said.

At the moment, they said, their colleges are extremely vital to the education of blacks. Nearly half of the black students in college are at predominantly black institutions while most of the predominantly white colleges are less than two per cent black.

Alexander Astin, director of the Office of Research of the American Council on Education, said it does no good for schools to fight over which one gets the most successful black students, because fighting for the cream of the crop does not increase the base number of black students getting a college education.

"Our whole concept of admissions, random selection from all those in the community who want to attend a college, is the only democratic way to give all groups an equal chance at education. Admissions criteria should be abandoned, he said. Astin had previously favored a black quota system to assure that at least a certain number of blacks would be admitted.

Senate Represents You

At meetings of the Central Area Council both last week and Tuesday night, it became evident that Senate's backing of 24 hour open house, in direct violation of the proposal passed by the Board of Trustees, has become more than a breach of faith.

In effect, the Board passed a resolution which supported the idea of 24 hour open house through dorm autonomy, but reserved final decision until security measures were presented to the Board by the Senate in November. One of the reasons final decision was not issued then and there in September was the failure of President Balboni, Vice-President Olken, and Secretary Beharry to keep personal views and feelings out of the meeting. Cindy Olken admitted that she believed that corridor autonomy was not feasible in her opinion instead of backing the original Senate proposal all the way. Pat Beharry also failed when she admitted that, as a dorm president, she was disturbed as to how security was to be handled in the event of 24 hour open house. The matter should have been settled then and there with no hang ups, but the proposal lacked the strong support and positive arguing of its Senate representatives. The Senate's representatives failed because they let personal views obstruct their personal responsibilities.

Right now the Board is of the understanding that we are operating under last year's open house policy. The good faith of the Board has been violated by the Student Senate by the Senate's acts. Social Regulation policies have been taken over completely by the Student Senate who have given dorms which have brought security measures before the Senate, 24 hour open house. This act BYPASSES the BOARD OF TRUSTEES. Civil disobedience in the Southwest (which passed 24 hour open house in some cases before they passed security measures) and in the Northeast is being backed by the Senate.

When Balboni, Olken, and Beharry agreed to return with the Trustees decision to the Student Senate, the Senate decided to turn around and make the decision on its own. Now the issue on 24 hour open house becomes a confrontation in which the Senate hopes to gain "Final say over all social and judicial measures" as one area senator put it. The Board is not to be consulted on such issues if the Senate wins their struggle for power with the board. The power struggle may enrage the Board to such an extent that all dorms will lose their open house regardless of how they stand on the issue.

The Senate is using the 24 hour dorm autonomy issue to make a play for power from the Board. All dorms want open housing extended, and in this matter and in this matter only they support the Senate. By using confrontation measures, the Senate wants to gain final say in all social and disciplinary measures by forcing the Board to give them this power. The Senate is disregarding all communication and cooperation it has had with the Board and is alienating the Board from the entire student body. The Board will probably retaliate - it is unlikely that they should bow down to the Senate and give them power in return for breaches of faith.

How does your dorm stand? Are your Senators representing the true feelings of the dorm? Would you have voted to have the Senate give dorms the authority to authorize 24 hour open house if you had known that it was in direct violation of a measure passed by the Board of Trustees and might result in the loss of all open house for the entire campus?

The Central Area Council has voted to recommend to all dorms of the Central Area that they go by last year's Open House Policy for the next three years. Security measures should be taken and no visitors should leave the lobbies without a member of the house. In this way the Central Area will not be a part of the civil disobedience or the Student Senate violations. Then, 24 hour open house will come, legitimately and without a hassle once security measures pass the Board. The Senate is struggling to fight a battle which might result in a disasterous breakdown in communication between the students and Trustees. The Orchard Hill area government on Tuesday night recommended that no dorm vote for 24 hour open house.

The Senate failed initially when their representatives failed to come on strong for the proposal. Now they are copping out by saying they weren't representing the Senate when they agreed to take the measure passed by the Board back to the Senate to work out security measures. How did the Board know you weren't representing the Senate? Bruce, Cindy, and Pat - you are their ELECTED REPRESENTATIVES. The measure could have been passed as written by the Senate if you had not allowed personal doubts about the proposal to become an issue and had stood behind the proposal as you were supposed to do.

The Central Area Council does not and will not support the power play made by the Senate. Do they represent you? The Council members have attended the Senate meeting; they will be reporting back to their house governments by the end of the week. Let your Council members know you stand behind them. Tell your Senators if you do not want them to support the breach of faith with the Board. Help student government represent you.

SDS - Fun!

To the Editor:

Once again, SDS has opened their mouths to reveal an unsurprising bare interior by picketing in support of striking workers at General Electric.

For twenty years, General Electric has followed a policy of Boulwarism -- researching their workers needs, anticipating their demands, and presenting a "take it or leave it" package at the bargaining table. This no-compromise position has been declared illegal by the United States Court of Appeals. The company, however, is still persisting in its unjust and illegal policy; I can grant SDS this much.

But the SDS has neglected to look at the other side. The "oppressed" workers, according to the New York Times, are currently averaging $3.25/hour plus benefits. General Electric has offered them a 20¢/hour increase plus 5¢-25¢/ hour increase fo. skilled workers. The unions want a 90¢/hour increase plus a 50¢/ hour boost for highly skilled workers.

SDS wants to establish links with the proletariat, except it has never occured to them that the proletariat wants nothing to do with them. Last summer, SDSers joined a union picket line at Chrysler's Sterling Heights plant. Rather than welcoming them, the workers politely (and sometimes impolitely) ignored them.

One of the two striking unions, the International Union of Electrical Wrokers, is affiliated with the AFL-CIO. The reader may recall that this is the same AFL-CIO that three thousand black workers demonstrated against in Chicago last month because of discrimination in the unions. The other striking union is the United Electrical Workers. Although independent, it has close ties with the highly Wallace-veering Auto Workers and the crime-ridden Teamsters.

SDS advocates freedom, yet in Schenectady, N.Y. those non-union and salaried employees who wished to work were physically threatened by the strikers, and finally refused admittance by the police for their own protection.

I think the SDS ought to look up in their dictionary what "hypocrisy" means. In fact, I think that it might not be a bad idea for everyone on this campus, left, right and middle, to do so.

DON GLICKSTEIN

Thanks, Really

To the Editor:

I would like to address myself to those people responsible for the violent act during Tuesday's lecture with Dr. Allen Cohen. Thankyou, I learned more from your action than from hours of intellectualizing and "proselytizing". Actually, I felt a very similar reaction to the ending of "Easy Rider". Tuesday night's drama was more intense, however, since I was present. The wonderful feeling of love expressed by Dr. Cohen, the Heartbreaking attempt at humiliation, and the love that followed really taught me a great deal.

I, too, used to be an intellectual cynic but at least I knew enough to let others enjoy the beauty that I could not find. And I also beseech you--listen to your heart and emotions. It is more satisfying then constant and destructive intellectual masturbation.

MARTHA O'NEIL

For a Price

To the editor:

Come one, come all - a goal to live for! For the mere price of $35 - you, yes, even you can be the proud owner of a brand-new permanent level of consciousness. (Permanent level, maybe but why did the lecturer say students return to the teachers if they loose touch?)

We were attracted to the open lecture on transcendental meditation because the idea is appealing, namely, that peace and thorough enjoyment of life we would like and believe it a popular desire. It was stated that through transcendental meditation there is the distinct possibility of achieveing not only world peace, but in general, that it serves as a "panacea" for all problems, personal and public. The lecturer spoke of one man giving up drinking because his wife took the course and relieved tensions around her. (Wow.)

We wondered how anyone could peddle such a simple solution to all major and minor problems. The course is instructed for the fee of $35- for students (a bargain) and $65-for working adults. (They call the fee a "donation" - confusion of definition perhaps?) Also, if it is such a simple solution why not benevolently offer it freely to all interested persons without the monetary involvement? It would seem like such a beautiful idea to volunteer one's time to such a worthy cause- not making it appear a vocation-like job. (Disciple or employee?)

While tensions were being considered we both thought of the Blacks' present tensions. We looked around and noted the absence of Black students. We wondered if perhaps the Black students on this campus were not interested enough in expanding their minds to show up- or were they not present because of the so called "donation" requirement for the course? When asked if it would be a good idea to recruit interested Blacks and possibly offer the course to them making them exempt from the "donation" the reply was they we should not worry about others but to consider ourselves first. Does this not undermine the goal of world harmony?

The lecturer then added in words like: You'd be surprised, but the ones who complain the most about the money are the ones who can afford it best. (WE were very interested but cannot afford it.)

On leaving the lecture a favorite story by James Thurber came to mind. The famous "medicine-show-man," Doc Marlowe suddenly became vivid.

Moratorium

To the editor:

What is the moratorium concept? It seems that people concerned about wars and dying men have lost sight of their original goals and are now using the moratorium issue to further excite emotionalism, and widen the communications rift between the establishment and the antis. The October moratorium was used as an excuse to take pot shots at our lame duck president because he did not shut down the University (I am Lederle (Yellow) etc.

It seems to us that priorities have been forgotten. What sacrifice are we making to demonstrate our opposition to the war if we don't have the opportunity to cut our classes? How much more effective would our moratorium be if the scene included 1,000 classrooms populated only by lonely professors? In addition this is a public institution and strange as it may seem to some of us, there are people here who are not opposed to the war and should have the right to attend classes if they so desire.

And now the latest misunderstanding of the meaning of moratorium has become evident in the halls of our hallowed Senate Chambers. The Senate has no right to allocate $10,000 of the Student's money to the moratorium. If a student wishes to attend the moratorium rites in Washington, it is incumbent upon him to supply individual incentive and transportation arrangements just as it was incumbent upon them to make the decision to voice his opposition. No sacrifice or personal hardship is implicit in providing mass assistance for a gay lark to D.C.

We protest this lack of understanding on the part of our Senate. We protest the misuse of student taxes to support individual conscience. We label this act as heinous as the U.S. Government's use of our taxes to pay for war. Let's get our priorities back in perspective.

FROM OUR SIDE

Cooperation

"We have always tried to cooperate with the courts and abide by the law of the land - but when they ask you to do the impossible, that's another question." So states Ikie Ethridge, Superintendent of the school system, Lauderdale County, Miss.

Yes, in the fifteen years between the original desegration order in 1955 and the present there has been much cooperation between the courts and the school systems. But who has been cooperating with whom?

Look at the city or town that you were born in. How much does it resemble the town of fifteen years ago? How many new schools have been built? How much has the population grown? Great change has accompanied the past fifteen years. The advances in science and technology have been phenomenal. Yet, in many Southern states there has been nothing more than token advances made in school desegregation. In fact, in a summary of the situation in 1,129 school districts in nine Southern states, the Justice Department states that 631 districts would have integrated systems in the school year 1971-1972. Imagine that, a little better than 50% integration in only seventeen years! Now is there any question as to who has bee n doing the cooperating?

Then it happened. Wednesday the Supreme Court handed a decision refusing to allow the delaying tactics to continue any longer. Thirty Mississippi school districts were refused a reprieve granting them three more months to come up with new excuses.

And, oh was it a sad day in the South. Education leaders were "shocked", "surprised", and "dismayed". Representative "Sonny" Mongomery lamented the order that "will result in the destruction of a quality educational system in our state."

Hey fellas, want to borrow a dime so that you can call someone who give a shit?

In Reply

I too condemn the 4% and higher unemployment figure the Nixon administration views as acceptable. Certainly it is anything but 'acceptable' to the handicapped, those with fixed incomes, and all manual laborers. I say all, since it is not only the non-unionized and semi or unskilled laborers who lose their jobs, but also the skilled and unionized workers. In our society an increase in unemployment is felt by all working men. The unions are powerless to prevent their membership from being 'laid off' when the demand for their services falls below the current level supplied.

Mr. Baskin speaks of "... the greedy demands of unions in the past four years ..." citing an example of a proposed $9.50 per hour wage with a thirty two hour week; implying that this is a typical demand. It is far from typical. A union can only achieve a wage even approximating this level without concurrently increasing unemployment among its membership if two criteria are met: The membership of the union must comprise a very small percent of the factors (say 10% or less), both labor and material, used in producing the good or service. Then even an extreme wage increase, i.e. 10-15%, could be passed on to the consumer as is 1-1/2% increase, were businesses content to maintain the level of profits extant before the wage increase. Mr. Baskin again erroneously states that "prices rise to meet wage increases..." Prices usually rise between 4 and 10 times the amount necessary to compensate for wage increases. If the wage settlement alone amounted to a price increase to the consumer of 10%, the demand for the commodity would decrease, less would be supplied (after the existing stock was depleted), there would be no need for the factors of production (i.e. labor) and unemployment would follow. Secondly, the demand curve for the commodity must be highly inelastic: it must be impossible for technological advances (automation) to replace those workers.

Mr. Baskin further says that, "Profits are the result of technological advances and new business methods pioneered by college graduates . . ." As indicated above, technological advances could lower the wage of the unions whose demand curves are inelastic: automation decreases demand, decreases labor, causing a lower equilibrium price (wage). Have we lessened the price to the consumer? Probably not appreciably, rather, we have increased unemployment, decreased wages of workers, and given the money to "pioneering college graduates." I do not believe, as does Mr. Baskin, that there is anything inherently wrong in a society where plumbers earn more than teachers. I feel that a garbage collector is entitled to live as well as a head key-punch operator. Wages are determined by demand. In fact, our society would gain a great deal if more profits were redistributed and everyone guaranteed a more equitable livelihood.

Mr. Baskin makes another blanket statement saying, "The unions' tight entrance requirements and membership qualifications serve to exclude Blacks." This is undoubtedly true in some unions, particularly craft unions. The industrial workers of the AFL-CIO however, don't hold to this stereotype, and this is by far the largest segment of labor unions. The largest ten unions in our country have less than eight millions, a very small amount of the work force; one needn't be unionized if he feels that he would reap negative benefits by such association.

Despite your rantings, Mr. Baskin, I believe you are sincerely concerned with rising inflation. I suggest, therefore, instead of worrying about wages which have risen by 33% in recent years, you worry about corporate profits which have risen over 100%.

Ingratitude

To the editor:

I was shocked! Here for nearly two months and no demonstrations, no picketing. Yes, there was the Moratorium, but that doesn't count. It was a cause that many could identify with, it definately wasn't an SDS run thing, I could understand it. Everybody knows that SDS demonstrations are always over the heads of the average students. If this isn't so, then explain to me why nobody else ever participates. There can be no other reason - we're just too dumb to understand what they're all about.

You can't describe my relief Thursday morning when I saw it, "SDS Plans to Picket in Support of GE", and it might even be a "major protest". My first trip in the vicinity of Whitmore, left me shocked. Where were the limosines? Surely GE must have received notice of the picketing. Surely with three presidents they could have sent one to drink of the wisdom of SDS and share it with the others.

Then I had it. The ingratitude of those slobs! Didn't they know that SDS was helping them, and uninvited at that. A racist union (all unions are) - that's thanks for you. NOT ONE DAMN WORKER WAS THERE.

JAKE KONOLY

Finally Mr. Baskin states, "It is not union men's sons who die in Asia; they are protected from the draft as essential workers." WHAT? I'm a student, a union man's son, and a union man myself; I'm sweating the draft as much as anyone who doesn't want to die in Asia. To the contention that some union men are deferred because they are essentially occupied while graduate students are not, I simply call attention to those who enter medical or dental schools, and that graduate students in general can obtain duty away from the front line by informing the government of their field of expertise prior to induction. Union men have no such 'safe duty' guarantees.

An Open Letter to William E. Aubin, Realtor:

NO . . . Mr. Aubin

(1) I cannot accept your check of 52.68 in return for my 300.00 dollar deposit on my former apartment at #8 Webster Court, Echo Hill.

(2) I cannot accept your deduction of 56.00 dollars for "cleaning the apartment - 14 hours at 4.00 per hour" since the apartment was cleaned at my request by the Office and Home Maintenance Co. on the day after I vacated (Aug. 29, 1969) at the cost to me of 41.00 dollars.

(3) I cannot accept your deduction of '1.32 for stove cleaner" since the stove was professionally cleaned by the above company on August 29, 1969.

(4) I cannot accept your deduction of "90.00 dollars for refinishing floors of complete apartment" after three years of normal wear and tear especially since both bedrooms and the living-room were carpeted - and the Office and Home Maintenance Co. cleaned, waxed and buffed all the floors on August 29, 1969.

(5) I cannot accept your non-return of my 100.00 dollar security deposit which you required and I paid for my dog on Aug. 4, 1966.

Mr. Aubin, I have patiently waited 7 weeks for the return of my deposits. You have a responsibility to honor your obligations, to me, as a former tenant, and to the many families now living in your apartments as well as those who may do so in the future.

I expect and fully intend to have my 300.00 dollar deposit returned to me in full. The next move is yours.

Dartmouth Tops Poll UMass Climbs to Fourth

The voters in The Associated Press weekly New England college football poll are sure Dartmouth is No. 1, and they're pretty well agreed on the rest of the Top Ten, but there's plenty of disagreement on the order in which those other nine teams should be listed.

The Big Green was picked on top this week for the third straight time, and unanimously for the second week in a row, after hiking its perfect record to 5-0 with a 24-10 victory over Harvard.

After that, however, it took some careful mathematics to determine the rest of the standings.

Yale, 4-1, a 17-0 conqueror of Cornell last Saturday, wound up No. 2 and thus set the stage for a showdown for Saturday when Dartmouth invades the Bowl at New Haven for the game which may also decide the Ivy League title.

Boston University was right on the Elis' heels, however, losing out for second place by a point total of only 144-141 on the basis of 10 points for a first place vote, 9 for second, etc. The Terriers' support came in the wake of a 20-7 victory over Maine which hiked their season record to 5-1.

The battle for fourth place was equally close, with Boston College edging UMass by another three points, 123-120.

Harvard was definitely No. 6, with 91 points, but then there were a few more close votes, with Tufts taking seventh place over Connecticut by just one point, 52-51, and Vermont and Wesleyan tying for 9th place at 21 points apiece.

Student Help Crew Club Seeks

In need of securing a few items essential to its upcoming winter program, the UMass crew club is asking for student help. Coach Mike Faherty is looking for bicycles of any shape, color or size.

Bikes will be stored indoors and will be properly maintained and used by oarsmen to keep their legs in shape. Persons wanting to rent their bikes should get in contact with the crew office in Boyden 211.

A few particularly "tight" oarsmen are looking for an instructor of modern dance to help them loosen up their torsos. Anybody (preferably female) interested in helping the crew club in this area is urged to contact the crew office.

Frosh coach Larry Dean is looking for more able bodies. While the efforts thus far have concentrated on big men to pull the oars, Dean now needs coxswains who are less than 130 pounds to give commands. The frosh now have two boatloads of men but more are wanted. Anyone 6' tall and 170 pounds and interested in rowing should leave his name in Boyden 211.

No experience is necessary. Complete instruction in technique and on the water training will be given to everyone.

Undefeated Grid Frosh Play BC Tonite

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Coach David Kelley's Little Redmen put their undefeated record against the Eaglets from Boston College tonight here at Cladchuk Memorial Coliseum. Kickoff is at 7 p.m.

The Little Redmen have defeated the BU Pups, 24-13, and the Rhode Island Rams, 47-26. Meanwhile the Eaglets defeated the Harvard frosh, 29-12, and the Holy Cross frosh, 14-0.

This game will be the highlight of the UMass schedule. Boston College has a major league recruiting policy annually giving between 30 and 35 scholarships. UMass on the other hand, is limited by the Formula 20 Plan of the Yankee Conference and usually gives out 12 to 15 scholarships a year.

Head coach Vic Fusia has made excellent use of his limited amount of scholarships, as indicated by last years undefeated freshman team and the play so far of this years squad. Kelley indicated, "Only a complete team effort can result in victory. Without it, Boston College will just be to powerful for us."

The Eaglets use a 6-2-3 defense which is extremely difficult to run against. Last week they held Holy Cross to only 45 yards rushing. The Little Redman strength has been the running attacks led by halfbacks Ray Bouchard, Kevin Filley, and fullback Tiff Rockwell.

The the runners can't be productive and effective without an excellent performance by the offensive line. Earlier in the year, the line was extremely suspect, but in the second half of last week's game against the URI team, they literally opened up highways. Kelley will start the same five this week with expectations that they can continue to excel. The five starters are center Joe Grasso, guards Jim Queeny and Vic Moreno and tackles Dennis Cunningham and Tom Muller.

The Little Redman offense will be bolstered by the return of split end and punt returner Steve Shubert. With Bill Daenz, Shubert, Filley, Rockwell, Tim Edwards and Bouchard, the Eaglets will really need wings if they expect to catch the fleet frosh.

The other offense starters are tight end Doug Winslow and quarterback Brian Murray. Len Mutuza is also expected to see considerable action at quarterback and defensive safety.

Boston College players to watch are offensive stars Steve Macencki, 6'1 - 205, who plays tailback and Tom Hudson, 6'2-210 at fullback. On defense, tackle Joe Wappel and 6'3-215 linebacker Bruce Delutis are standouts. Also starting for the Eaglets will be Chet Gladchuk Jr. at tight end.

A win by UMass may very well send the Little Redmen to another undefeated season. UMass won last year, 23-16.

Booters Get Set for Vermont

In contrast to the Vermont football team's effort to prevent UMass from winning the Yankee Conference grid crown on Saturday afternoon, the Redmen soccer squad will try to stop their Catamount counterparts from taking the soccer crown in the Saturday morning tilt at 10:30.

Very simply, a UVM victory gives it the title outright. A UMass upset could result in a tie for the title between the two teams should the Redmen also defeat New Hampshire on November 15.

Vermont first fielded a soccer team in 1964 and since that time has posted a 24-4 record against Conference opponents. UMass has been responsible for two of the losses.

The Redmen defeated the Catamounts, 4-2, in '64 and shocked them, 2-1, in 1965. The latter victory forced UVM to settle for a three-way tie for the Conference title with UMass and UConn.

Vermont is in quest of their fifth straight championship and since '66 have shut out the Redmen three times, 1-0, 3-0, and 2-0.

Center forward Mike Sullivan and wing Bob Greene will lead the Catamount offense into the key tussle. Sullivan has tucked away five goals and has been credited with two assists, while Greene has registered four goals and four assists.

Injuries on behalf of the Redmen could be a deciding factor in Saturday's fray. Rick Matuszczak Augie Calheno, Lindo Alves, Dick McGarron, Joe Ciernawski and Marc Cantor are among those hampered with hurts.

BRING ON VERMONT - That's the sentiment of soccer coach Peter Broaca (center) and his co-captains, Rick Matuszczak and Dick Meyer.

Men's and women's recreational run, usually held on Sunday at W.O.P.E. at 5:30, has been switched to 4:45 due to the loss of daylight saving time.

A Lot on the Line As UMass-UVM Clash

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

There'll be a lot on the line when the two top teams in the Yankee conference lock horns at Alumni Stadium tomorrow at 1:30. The Redmen can clinch their fifth Conference title in seven years; the Catamounts can gain their biggest football victory in the school history, and it will be the last home appearance for 20 UMass seniors.

It really shouldn't be the last Alumni Stadium game for UMass, as they were scheduled to play ill-fated Holy Cross next week. But now the seniors will be forced to close out their career against a tough Vermont eleven.

It was this senior group that knew both the pleasure of a Conference crown and the depths of the worst UMass football season in a decade. A win tomorrow could be their biggest in their three year varsity careers.

The list of seniors are, co-captains Tom York and Ed Sarno, Tim Adams, Ken Hughes, Jerry Grasso, Larry Fortunoff, Craig Lovell, Steve Rogers, Dennis Gray, John Dubzinski, John MacLean, Bruce Fulton, Mike Cooney, Dick Donlin, Andy Guarino, Steve Parnell, Jim Long, John Decembrele, Paul Toner and Jim Kelliher.

Vic Fusia, fresh from recovering from one of his biggest wins, takes his charges back into the fire again. And the coach does not shun the importance of this big one. "We have a chance tomorrow to pick up the whole cake. We got a big piece of it last week, and if we are the team I think we are, we can get the rest of it against Vermont."

Fusia sees similarities in this Vermont team and the UConn team of last week. "You just change the names around in certain positions and they are the same. I'm referring to such people as halfback Bob Rodger, quarterback Fran Peterson, ends Gene Monahan and Jim Doria."

The coach has not been surprised that the Redmen are a game away from a title clinching. "I knew that we would be a respectable team. And we have turned out that way."

A stern UMass defense has to take much of the credit for the UMass surge of the last few weeks, and they'll have a big test again this week. The Catamounts lead in five offensive categories in the Conference, and can score against anyone.

The UMass offense again will alternate quarterbacks, Tim Adams, and Ken Hughes, while employing a host of backfield personnel.

A last look at the Redmen for the local fans. And a title coronation should be on tap.

RON WAYNE (r) will battle JOHN VITALE (1) in Saturday's Yan-Con Championship meet. Behind them is UConn's Rick Spurling.

X-Country Meet Held Here

UMass-UConn Highlight Yan-Con Run

The Yankee Conference cross country meet to be held here Saturday will virtually be a dual meet between UMass and UConn with the Huskies held as a definite favorite on the basis of an earlier meet in which they placed four men ahead of Redman first man Ron Wayne.

Forty-two runners from the six Yankee Conference schools will participate; the entries are restricted to the top seven from each team. Representing the Redmen in the first Conference meet to be held in six years on their home course will be Wayne, Leo Duart, Tom Derderian, Larry Paulson, Dave Evans, Don Dunsky and Bruce Blackburn.

Wayne won the Conference title last year defeating UConn's John Vitale; they will face each other again this year with the outcome being anyone's guess. In the earlier meet in which Wayne lost to the Connecticut runners, the conference champion was running far below par.

Vitale is backed by three returning veterans of last year's New England and Conference Championship team, Dick Spurling, Steve Flanagan and last year's 8th place IC4A finisher Craig McColl. These four men form a strong nucleus; however, they lack a fifth man.

Coach O'Brien sees this lack as their Achilles Heel. He says Wayne must repeat last year's win and of juniors Duart, Derderian and Paulson, two must finish in front of UConn's third and fourth runners and UMass' next three men must finish in front of their fifth man. Also runners from the other schools must help displace UConn's fifth man. These seem like rather tall demands for a team which lost to the team it plans to beat and it would be except for last week's victory at Holy Cross.

Says Coach O'Brien, the Holy Cross meet and the week after, "We have seemed to shake the mid-season injuries common to the rigors of distance training. Ron Wayne has completely recovered from an ankle sprain and since has only been beaten by Art Dulong." Coach O'Brien continued, "Dave Evans is again taking aim on the top five after a muscle pull. Over this three week period after the UConn meet Derderian, Duart and Paulson have been the most consistent performers."

Often overshadowed by the battle between the top runners has been the work of fifth man Blackburn. The coach says of Blackburn, "He has been the most consistent and aggressive sophomore and his fine race against Holy Cross reduced the five man split to 56 seconds."

About the whole team, O'Brien says, "This is a hard working group of runners and they have improved more than any group I've ever coached." He says that they have learned one thing very well; that regardless of the opponent's reputation, past results or personal feelings, they are prepared to run every step of the way to the best of their ability. This is what we finally put together at Holy Cross and this is how we will run Saturday.

In last year's race, Duart placed fifth and Derderian tenth. Both are expected to finish with the leaders after the race starts Saturday morning at 11:00 in the field beside W.O.P.E.

Frosh Booters Top Trinity With Rally

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

Overcoming what coach David Jekanoski termed a "very sluggish" first half, the UMass freshman booters staged a third quarter rally to beat Trinity College 3-1 Wednesday.

Halfbacks Vin Grandonico, Paul Gibavic, and Ed Doherty all played key roles in what turned out to be "the best played quarter we've had all year". UMass scored twice in that decisive third period to pull away from a very touch Trinity squad - "the toughest team we've played all year."

Defensively, the Little Redmen played well throughout, particularly defensemen Steve Weiner, Todd Buck, Dave Zandon and Dave Ouillette.

Perhaps the most outstanding performance, however, came from goalie John Kiah. He was exceptionally quick through the whole game and came up with some incredible saves. Kiah was subbing for the injured first-string goalie, Bill Leary, who is out for the season with a bruised elbow. According to Jekanoski, Kiah was brought under similar pressure earlier in the season in a scrimmage against Amherst and labeled both his performances as "unbelievable."

Scoring for the freshmen were Vin Grandonico, Jeff Hague and Tom Texeira. Bill Davidson had assists on two goals.

UMass Takes Yankee Conference With 48-7 Victory over Vermont

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

In what has to be termed a complete team effort, UMass routed Vermont, 48-7, at Alumni Stadium on Saturday to regain the Yankee Conference football championship climaxing a return to grid prominence after a season of despair.

Once again the defensive unit played magnificently. The Catamounts came into the fray with the leading runner, passer and receiver in the Conference. Bob Rodger, the best running back, had to carry the ball 21 times in order to pick up 66 yards.

Quarterback Fran Peterson hit on six of 12 passes for a scant 26 yards while his favorite receiver Gene Monahan, who had had 41 catches, latched on to only two tosses for zero yards. To repeat, the defensive unit played magnificently.

On offense, the Redmen were the best they have been since they punished Maine, 49-7, in the season's opener. In a fine show of balance, they grounded out 278 yards and passed for an additional 207 yards for a total count of 485 yards and 28 first downs. UMass had possession of the ball 12 times and scored touchdowns on seven of those occasions.

The offense was led, in succession, by the quarterbacking trio Ken Hughes, Tim Adams and Mike Marchev. They combined for 12 completed passes in 18 attempts. Adams led the offense to three touchdowns while Hughes and Marchev each brought it in for two scores.

Hughes was the starter and directed the attack to its first two scores on the first two occasions that UMass had the pigskin. The initial drive was 57 yards long and was convered in eight running plays.

With Pat Scavone, Ed Sarno, Jerry Grasso and Hughes gaining 18, 15, 12 and three yards respectively, the ball was advanced to the Vermont nine yard stripe, first and goal to go.

A fancy handoff to Sarno sent the senior co-captain up the middle where he cut once to the right and then to the left and went in for the first six points standing up. Dennis Gagnon added the extra point and the Redmen led, 7-0, six minutes and 46 seconds into the game.

Three plays and a punt by the Catamounts gave UMass the ball again on its own 18 yard line. Hughes took the ball on the first

Senate Pres Explains Open House Problems

By BRUCE BALBONI
Senate President
Special to MDC

There is much confusion and misunderstanding surrounding the oepn house controversy. First of all, in reply to the reprint in the Collegian from the Central Area Voice entitled "Senate Represents You", I must say that the author has many misstatements in the article. The Senate officers went to that meeting on September 22, 1969 with the Student Senate's open house policy which called for dormitory self-determination. A member of the Board raised the point about corridor autonomy and asked for our opinion on the matter. Is anyone suggesting that we should have lied to the Board? They were unwilling to accept the proposal with that provision. There is no truth to the statement that our views colored theirs, for while we expressed reservations over corridor autonomy, the entire policy was put forth to the Board and was pushed for. The original policy said that a corridor may declare itself autonomous. The Senate has since felt that security would be too difficult to achieve so it has changed the policy to read the House Government may declare a corridor autonomous.

That editorial also states that "the Board is of the understanding that we are operating under last year's open house policy." Last year's policy expired at the end of May 1969 and the Board knows that. No statement has been made as to what policy we are under this year and this is where the Senate has tried to act responsibly, for in the absence of a realistic policy, wholesale violations of last year's policy were happening. The Senate, therefore, passed the following. All dorms currently or which in the future come under a policy of self-determination must submit to the Student Matters Committee a plan for dorm security. No dorm shall be allowed to operate under a policy of self-determination unless the proposed security plan is approved by Student Matters. The Senate shall review these plans after the blanket residence hall security plan has been duly implemented.

There was no breach of faith with the Board of Trustees simply because the Senate officers CANNOT enter into agreements with the Board. The Trustee action of September 22 approving dorm self-determination in principle, awaiting security plans, was just that, Trustee action. At the time this decision seemed reasonable. It was only after many individual students and several dorms implemented the policy of dormitory self-determination, that the Senate acted. Was the Student Senate, the representative voice of the entire student body, to act as the agent and enforcer of Trustee action?---No! The Senate found itself between the Trustees and students, and therefore had no choice. We are for students, not for Trustees. It is also a childish deception to talk of support of the Student Senate in this matter. The Student Senate is supporting the student body. The editorial is filled with statements of opinion. The Senate is not "disregarding all communications and cooperation with the Board." At no time was this said or implied. We are still going to the Board with these and other proposals.

The Senate officers represent the Senate, not the Board of Trustees.

The area governments have gone beyond their jurisdiction in the matter of open house. The Northeast Area Congress said "The Senate, we feel, is also potentially trying to dictate to the areas how we should perform in social matters." First of all, the Senate has said nothing to the area for there is no need to...This is a matter for the dorms. That statement should read that the areas are trying to dictate to the dorms how they should perform in social matters. The Senate has gone down the line in favor of decentralization of government. The areas are attempting to block this with regard to open house. The area governments seem to be expressing an obligation to the Board of Trustees and many students are angered to think that this support of the Board by the areas governments is the result of pressure from the area coordinators who seem to have a great deal to say about what the area government says.

Aside from the fact that the area governments have no direct relationship in this matter, their resolutions are totally unrealistic and unenforcible. They are attempting to say the right thing, to appease angry administrators and Board members all the while

Founder of Liberation News Commits Suicide in Montaque

The death of Marshall E. Bloom, 26, of Montague Center, was declared a suicide yesterday by Leverett Henry Bys, medical examiner. Bloom was found dead in his car in Leverett Friday, a vaccum cleaner hose attached to the exhaust pipe and run to a vent in the car.

Bloom was a 1966 graduate of Amherst College, and was editor of the AMHERST STUDENT, the student newspaper.

After a year at the Long School of Economics he returned to the U. S. in 1967 to assume the directorship of the U.S. Student Press Association, but was ousted after a short period because of differences in political orientation within the organization.

It was then that he and Ray Mungo, former editor of the controversial Boston University NEWS formed the Liberation News Service (LNS). After an internal split in 1968, Bloom and his part of the organization moved to Montague from New York City.

SDS Members Offer to Join Gen. Electric Picket Lines

(AP) - Spokesmen for the International Union of Electrical Workers said yesterday night that they "have no intention of abandoning our picket lines" at General Electric plants across New England.

"There have been threats of outside organizations coming to picket the plants," one spokesman said.

"We would prefer it not to happen, but if other organizations want to picket General Electric, they should do it individually," he said, rather than attempt to join union picket lines.

Offers by the Students for a Democratic Society to join union picket lines earlier had been denounced by Local 201 President Edward McMahon, who threatened to order picketing stopped at the Lynn, Mass. plant if SDS members showed up.

However, IUE organizers on assignment in New England from Washington said if SDS picketers were peaceful, they would be accepted.

John Shambo, chief negotiator for the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, AFL-CIO scheduled a news conference in Boston at 11 a.m. today.

He was then to "review" picket lines in Lynn and Fitchburg, according to a union spokesman.

The strike, which has idled about 40,000 New England workers, began last night at midnight.

Alumni Affairs Director Dies

Wesley M. Honey, class of '61 and Director of Alumni Affairs at UMass since 1963, died suddenly in Amherst yesterday morning. Funeral services will be held in Amherst Tuesday.

A memorial fund is being established for Honey's wife and children, and contributions are being accepted at the University's alumni office.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

TUNIS (AP) - More than 600 young demonstrators attacked the British Embassy in the Libyan capital of Tripoli yesterday on the 52nd anniversary of the Balfour Declaration, which promised a Jewish national home in Palestine.

Reports said the rioters wrecked two embassy cars and damaged three others and ripped the embassy plaque off the front of the building.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The Lebanese army and Palestinian guerrillas, who have been fighting each other in bloody battles for the past two weeks, agreed on a cease-fire beginning at midnight local time - 5 p.m. EST Sunday - according to Arab radio broadcasts.

Beirut radio and Radio Cairo said the agreement was reached by Al Fatah leader Yasir Arafat and Gen. Emile Bustani, commander-in-chief of the Lebanese army. The broadcasts said they also agreed to continue talks for complete settlement.

LAGOS (AP) - Nigeria claimed Sunday "another gun-running rebel plane on an illegal flight" was destroyed at Biafra's Uli airstrip. A few hours earlier, the Norwegian radio reported that federal Nigerian planes bombed a Norwegian plane at the Uli airstrip Saturday night while it was unloading supplies for starving Biafran civilians.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, asserted Sunday the Selective Service system has been used to punish young men who protest against the Vietnam war and against the draft itself. And he suggested some of those so punished may be guilty of no illegal acts. "Respect for military service can hardly be enhanced if those who protest the system are the first people chosen to fight for our country," Kennedy said.

UMass Students Complete Study on Indian Poverty

Three UMass students concerned with the problems of poverty-ridden American Indians in South Carolina have returned to the campus after a five-day tour of the area.

They brought back with them a strong commitment to help the community of 500 Indians improve their educational facilities and opportunities.

They have also arranged a speaking program in the Amherst area this weekend featuring Mrs. Victoria Delee, a Negro woman who has been a leader in the Indians quest for better schools for their children.

One of the UMass students who went to Dorchester County, S.C. to get a first hand look at conditions there was Miss Nancy Lazare of Chicago, a doctorate candidate in the school of education.

Miss Lazare said she and two undergraduate students, Steven Moore of South Carolina and Robert Davidson of Worcester, flew to South Carolina last Friday and returned to Amherst Wednesday.

Motivated by a desire for equal justice for all American citizens, the trio visited Ridgeville, S.C., "where the blacks are poor and the Indians are poorer."

Miss Lazare said Mrs. Delee will come to Amherst today to meet with local clergymen at the First Church in Amherst at 2. She will attend a private coffee hour tonight on campus, hold a press conference in the Student Union Saturday at 1 p.m. and will address an audience Saturday night at the UMass cage. She will also speak in a number of area churches Sunday before going back to South Carolina.

Miss Lazare said Mrs. Delee is a black mother of five who has been a leader in encouraging voter registration of black people in her hometown the past year. During this period, her home has been bombed, Miss Lazare said.

TO WHITE SCHOOLS

Recently, however, Mrs. Delee's attention has been focused on the problems of Indians living in the area.

Dissatisfied with the schools provided for Indian children, the parents decided to boycott the Indian schools and sent their children to white schools in the area, according to Miss Lazare.

Local officials resisted the integration attempt, and during confrontations in the past two weeks, 27 Indian parents and Mrs. Delee were arrested.

It is hoped that money can be raised here this weekend to help pay bail fees, which total $1700.

Recently, the Indian community set up an independent "Freedom School" as an alternative to what they considered an inadequate school provided by the local community.

LACKING CREDENTIALS

Miss Lazare said the UMass group stayed with Mrs. Delee while they were in South Carolina. They visited the Indian community and the Indian schools. She said teachers in the Indian schools lack proper educational credentials and some teachers have never finished high school.

"The Indians live an artistic and very beautiful life," Miss Lazare said. The men are skilled craftsmen, carpenter, mechanics, but they cannot get jobs because local regulations say they must pass strict literacy tests first."

She said the Indian community is angry and strongly determined to resist the social life and educational facilities to which they have been limited.

"The Freedom School lacks facilities, but there is a spirit there, the children are proud to be Indians. They are singing now, instead of crying," she said.

In addition to raising money this weekend, Miss Lazare said she hopes to encourage individuals in the UMass community to support and offer assistance to the the freedom school.

knowing that individual students will continue to violate last year's policy. That policy was being violated last year because even then it was seen as a farce. Why should students continue the farce when the original agreement was to have expired in May 1969? There has been a breakdown in communications between the area governments and the Senate. Hopefully we will get together to work out problems over this matter as well as financial policy. The Student Senate has set up a coherent, responsible and broad policy for the dorms. We are not saying do as you please. We have a policy... the Board and the area governments do not.

Many students also fail to see the broader question at stake here ----the right of the individual or the dorm to determine their own life style. The Senate passed a bill saying "Move that the Board of Trustees recognize the authority of the Student Government Association to set all social regulations pertaining to student life at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst." The Senate has implied that this has been our right for a long time now. Those who say the Senate has put the campus in a confrontation position are incorrect. The Senate has been the only group on campus that has been honest on the open house question. The Board must know that if they pass a different open house proposal or if they pass different regulations (other than the Senate's) concerning alcoholic beverages & curfews that they (the Board or the administration) are going to have to inforce them. We simply will not enforce social regulations handed down to us and neither will the student courts. Why is this considered a threat or a confrontation position? It is the truth and we can work cooperatively from this basis. The Student Senate is willing to have the administration participate in an advisory capacity in setting the social regulations for the campus. Also when we say that the student government will set the rules this does not mean no rules. I believe we have demonstrated our responsible intentions in this area very well during this open house controversy.

I believe the Board will realize the delicacy of the open house problem and understand the circumstances which have brought about the present situation. However, the Senate's position is clear. In asking the Board to recognize our authority to set all social regulations, we are implying that we have this authority and the Senate is willing to assert this very late in coming student right.

Truth is, it would be comparatively easy.

But we want somebody with more than a pat answer for everything.

We need electrical engineers, physicists, mathematicians and systems analysts who can think creatively and speak their minds.

People who can think logically about solving communications, radar or information systems problems for the defense of the free world. Or technical men who can think creatively about solving problems in air traffic control or urban mass transportation systems.

You won't find any yes men coming up with the answers to these complex problems.

Operetta Guild Performs "Guys and Dolls"

By STEPHEN WALT
Fine Arts Editor

This past weekend the University Operetta Guild performed "Guys and Dolls", which will be repeated this coming weekend. Overall the performance was both effective and enjoyable, though there were some serious flaws. Fortunately, these did not center around the singing.

The first flaw was evidenced at the opening chord of the overture. The pit orchestra, under the direction of Paul Jensen, was distractingly out of tune, something which did not alter itself throughout the entire evening. Often, the orchestra and the singers did not listen to each other, and one occassionally wondered if they were on the same song. This in spite of the apparent efforts by Mr. Jensen to right the situation. The failure of the singer and orchestra to acknowledge each other was particularly observable when James Capirelo sang the closing number of the first act.

Perhaps the greatest weakness was in the dancing. Though the choreography, by Sue Bacon, was good, the dancers seemed to have difficulty in timing their movements with their singing and with each other. This is with the notable exception of the male actors in the "Luck Be a Lady" scene, and the female actors of the Hot Box Girls.

These flaws were somewhat balanced by some very fine acting by a few individuals. Jeffrey Robbins played a very funny and credible Nathan Detroit. Brian McLeod was outstanding as Nicely-Nicely Johnson. The biggest showstopper was Carol Roth, who, as Miss Adelaide, showed the highest degree of professionalism and polish. She was entirely loveable. Shelley Rothschild, who played Sarah Brown, has a lovely voice and would have been exceptional if she were able to project it. Also deserving of mention were Anita Fons and John Worchol who played character parts and kept much of the show's stale humor from dying.

Smith College Offers Ballet-Dance Lecture

A noted dancer-choreographer who feels that Ballet has become "too snobbish" will offer an informal lecture - demonstration on the history of ballet and the dance Wednesday (November 5) at Smith College.

Miss Anne Wilson will present "The Ballet Story," a series of vignette-lectures with special emphasis on Romantic Ballet. The program will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. in Sage Hall II and is open to the public without charge.

Deserting a promising career as a ballet star, Miss Wilson is trying to bring dance and its history to the public. "Ballet is such an entrancing art that it should belong to a wider public, who have been shunted away from it by dance critics and the dancers themselves," she says.

She is the founder and artistic director of her own company, which travels extensively to promote dance. Miss Wilson is also choreographer in residence of the Universalist Theatre, dance instructor at the United Nations, and a member of the dance faculty at Molloy College, New York City.

Miss Wilson studies ballet with such artists as Antony Tudor and Elizabeth Anderson-Ivantsova and modern dance with Doris Humphrey and Martha Graham. She has been a soloist with the American Ballet Theatre and a guest artist with many dance companies. Several of her pieces were choreographed for the New York Shakespeare Festival and the New York Ballet Club.

The recipient of a bachelor of science degree in psychology from the University of Chicago, Miss Wilson has also studied theory and composition at Columbia University, New York City.

Noted Cellist to Perform In Second Celebrity Series

Cellist Zara Nelsova and pianist Grant Johannesen will visit UMass November 4-5 as the second Celebrity Series events of the year. In addition to their two joint recitals in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on November 4-5, the noted duo have agreed to participate in a number of other related activities during their stay.

On Wednesday, November 5th cellists interested in meeting Miss Nelsova privately for a one-hour discussion of that instrument will have their opportunity. This session, open to students and public alike, will be held in Room 231 of Herter Hall. A similar program for pianists anxious to meet Mr. Johannesen will take place in Room 227 of Herter Hall. Both sessions will take place at 12:15 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. and will be followed by an informal coffee hour honoring these artists in the Lounge, Memorial Hall at 1:30 p.m.

Reserved tickets to the Nelsova/Johannesen concerts at the University are available to UMass undergraduate students at $1.00; UMass graduate students, faculty and students from other schools at $2.00 and to the general public at $3.00 and may be ordered by contacting the UMass Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will go on sale two hours before each concert at the Bowker Auditorium Box Office, telephone 545-2149. For this occasion, a program including cello/piano sonatas by Beethoven, Hindemith and Franck will be offered.

How Not to Get Raped

RAPE...ASSAULT...MURDER...DO YOU WANT TO BE RAPED, GIRLS?....DARK ALLEYS...POORLY LIT SIDEWALKS...EVEN IN THE 'SAFETY' OF YOUR OWN BEDROOM? OR MAYBE THAT'S WHERE IT WOULD BE EASIEST. On Wednesday, November 5, Mr. Frederic Storaska will speak on the prevention of assaults on women.

In the fall of 1962, Mr. Storaska became familiar with several assault cases while doing research on juvenile delinquency in one of the leading cities in the United States. During this time, he was an undergraduate student at North Carolina State University, majoring in psychology. He was also a self-defense instructor for various national, state, and local law enforcement personnel. He has a First Degree Black Belt in Karate and Second Degree Brown Belts in Judo and Juijitsu.

DIG IT SO FAR? KEEP READING. It is a fact that serious assaults are an exception to the norm. Many girls, however, are at one time or another annoyed by obscene phone calls, being followed, or see-an exhibitionist or a peeping tom.

According to Mr. Storaska, approximately 60% of all girls of high school and college age, who are assaulted, are assaulted in the dating environment. Thus, Mr. Storaska will include the dating situation as a major part of his program. He will also include other situations in which girls have been, or could be assaulted, and will comment on how to prevent the occurrence of such incidents.

The general response to Mr. Storaska's previous lectures has been one of great satisfaction. According to the Dean of Women at one college, Storaska's humor was appealing to the students, and kept the lecture from being embarrassing and frightening.

At one college, a student in a dormitory room was aroused early in the morning by an intruder in her room. He had made entry through a window in the adjoining room. The girl felt that she avoided an assault from the man because she remembered two directives which Mr. Storaska had stressed in his lectures. First, not to scream or struggle when approached by a would-be attacker, and secondly, to hold the person's attention by talking with him or to do anything that would alleviate the tension. The girl claims that Mr. Storaska's lectures saved her from panic, and that she was, therefore, able to handle the situation.

Mr. Storaska will speak at four different times this Wednesday. At 2:00 he will speak in Southwest; at 3:00 he will speak in the Northeast area; at 4:00 he will speak at Orchard Hill, and at 8:00 p.m. he will speak in the Student Union Ballroom. All women on campus should attend one of his lectures, for his discussion may prove to be invaluable some day.

UMass Debates On War Policy

A committee of students and faculty-administrators has been formed to plan the debates requested, on October 15, by the Coalition, which is questioning the propriety of the University's activities in relation to the war. Members of this committee are George Child, President of the Interfreternity Council; Sidney Finehirsh, Coalition spokesman; Robert Kentfield, Student Senator; Jeremiah Allen, Associate Provost; Mortimer Appley, Dean of the Graduate School; William Field, Dean of Students; Robert Gluckstern, Associate Provost; and Richard Story, Staff Assistant to the Provost.

The four debates will be held on Monday and Tuesday, November 17 and 18, at 3:30 and 8 p.m. The four topics will be "War and the University," "Focus on ROTC," "Focus on Research," and "Focus on Recruiting." The committee welcomes any suggestions which members of the University community may wish to make in relation to the format and speakers for these debates.

Daily Collegian Recruitment Meeting Next Week Watch for Details

Come as you are!

DECEMBER 11, 1969

Now's the time to sign up at your placement office for an interview with the Bethlehem Steel Loop Course recruiter. This could be the start of something big!

And just what IS the Bethlehem Steel Loop Course? Glad you asked! It's our management development program for graduates with bachelors' or advanced degrees.

Bethlehem loopers (150 to 200 every year) spend four swinging weeks at our home offices in Bethlehem, Pa. Then, primed with information about the entire corporation and rarin' to go, they report to the appropriate plants or departments for their first assignments. Then, onward and upward!

Where would YOU fit into the Loop Course? Check your degree or the one most similar to it:

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING—Engineering or mechanical maintenance departments of steel plants, fabricating works, mining operations, and shipyards. Fuel and combustion departments. Supervision of production operations. Marine engineering assignments in Shipbuilding Department. Also: Sales or Research.

METALLURGICAL ENGINEERING—Metallurgical departments of steel plants and manufacturing operations. Engineering and service divisions. Technical and supervisory positions in steelmaking departments and rolling mills. Also: Research or Sales.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERS—Technical and supervisory positions in coke works, including production of by-product chemicals. Fuel and combustion departments, including responsibility for operation and maintenance of air and water pollution control equipment. Engineering and metallurgical departments. Steelmaking operations. Also: Research or Sales.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING—Positions in steel plants, fabricating works, shipyards, and mines. Engineering and maintenance departments. Supervision of steelmaking, rolling, manufacturing, and fabricating operations. Also: Sales.

CIVIL ENGINEERING—Fabricated Steel Construction assignments in engineering, field erection, or works management. Steel plant, mine, or shipyard assignments in engineering, construction, and maintenance. Supervision of production operations. Sales Department assignments as line salesman or sales engineer (technical service to architects and engineers).

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING—Steel plant, fabricating works, mining operations, and shipyard electrical engineering, construction, and maintenance departments. Technical and supervisory positions in large production operations involving sophisticated electrical and electronic equipment. Also: Research or Sales.

MINING ENGINEERING—Our Mining Department operates coal and iron ore mining operations and limestone quarries, many of which are among the most modern and efficient in the industry. This 10,000-man activity offers unlimited opportunities to mining engineers. Also: Research.

NAVAL ARCHITECTS AND MARINE ENGINEERS—Graduates are urged to inquire about opportunities in our Shipbuilding Department, including the Central Technical Division, our design and engineering organization. Also: Traffic.

OTHER TECHNICAL DEGREES—Every year we recruit loopers with technical degrees other than those listed above. Seniors enrolled in such curricula are encouraged to sign up for an interview.

ACCOUNTANTS—Graduates in accounting or business administration (24 hours of accounting are preferred) are recruited for training for supervisory assignments in our 3,000-man Accounting Department.

OTHER NON-TECHNICAL DEGREES—Graduates with degrees in liberal arts, business, and the humanities are invited to discuss opportunities in the Sales Department. Some non-technical graduates may be chosen to fill openings in steel plant operations and other departments.

WHEN YOU SIGN UP be sure to pick up a copy of our booklet, "Careers with Bethlehem Steel and the Loop Course." It tells it like it is.

Good Intentions

The aims of the Student Senate in the current open house controversy are laudable; however, the method is not.

As usual, whenever an important issue occurs on the campus exaggerations, distortions, and untruths fly back and forth between opposing sides. The current controversy over open house is no exception to this fact.

On September 22, the Board of Trustees took a position supporting in principle the concept of dorm autonomy, which would allow each dorm to decide for itself, its own regulations pertaining to parietal hours. However, the Board withheld final approval, awaiting specific plans for security arrangements. These security plans are scheduled to be presented to the Board at its Nov. 14th meeting.

Since the September 22nd meeting, several dorms have presented security plans to the Student Senate. The Senate granted its Student Matters Committee the power to approve or reject these security plans. Thus according to Senate Bill S-306, any dorm which has its security plan approved by this Committee, has the right to establish 24-hour-a-day open house. This action aroused the Administration, which felt that the extension of pareital hours could not be granted until the Trustees formally voted.

Last Wednesday night the Senate passed two bills pertaining to the issue. One bill stated: "Move that the Board of Trustees recognize the authority of the Student Government Association to set all social regulations pertaining to student life at UMass." The second bill, S-54, (the text of which was printed in last Thursday's Daily Collegian) further explains the Senate's position.

Virtually the entire campus community agrees with the concept of student self-determination of all social regulations pertaining to student life. For several years now the Board of Trustees has been moving in this direction. If we the students of this University, are to become the future leaders, lawmakers and judges of society, then the best way of learning is through the governing of ourselves.

The ultimate intent of the Senate in this matter is, in our belief, in the best interests of UMass students. Where the Student Senate erred is in the method used to achieve the goal. S-54 is a poorly written, vague, and terribly misinterpreted piece of legislation.

As worded now, the sixth paragraph of the bill (... the Senate strongly urge that no reprisals be taken by any agency against anyone or group exercising his long-neglected right to leave his life as he will ...) can be read as saying that if Joe kills Mary, then the police have no right to arrest Joe if he believes it was his long neglected right to kill Mary.

In the last paragraph the Senate threatens the Administration and the Board, (... the Senate urge the administration to consider carefully the potentially disastrous consequences of any such retaliatory action). This childish scare tactic has caused most of the controversy. We ask, why is it necessary to threaten the Board and the Administration, when it is evident that both groups have been cooperating with the Student Senate in recent years in working towards the goal? If the Student Senate is ever to be the respected governing body of the students, then it should adopt more rational methods of presentation.

The intent of the Senate's action is good; its method is poor. Progress will not be made by threatening the Board of Trustees. If the Senate wants to "continue a harmonious working relationship between the student body and the Board," then it should reword S-54 into a constructive proposal.

ART BUCHWALD

The Henpecked Father

WASHINGTON - The days when a husband came home to a henpecking wife are a thing of the past. In these perilous times, it isn't a man's wife who gives him hell, but his children.

I didn't realize how common it was until I ran into my friend Nolan in a bar around 6 o'clock in the evening. Nolan was belting them down pretty fast and I said to him:

"Don't you think it's about time you went home?"

"What for?" Nolan said. "I'll just catch it from the kids."

"Have they been hard on you lately?" I asked.

"They're impossible. The minute I walk into the door they start in on me. Why do they have to wait for dinner while I watch the news? How come I can drink a martini and they can't smoke pot? Why can't they each have a telephone in their own room? I tell you, they're driving me crazy."

"Why don't you tell them to shut up?"

"I do, but it doesn't do any good. They're so deaf from listening to their records that they can't hear anything I say. If they've had a fight with their mother and I stick up for her, they all accuse me of taking her side. I can't seem to do anything right.

"I have a 17-year-old son, and he's the bomb thrower in the family. He says everything in the system stinks. He's ashamed of the bourgeois life we lead and the bourgeois friends we have and the bourgeois job I have. But he's not above borrowing my bourgeois car to drive his girlfriend to a student meeting to overthrow the bourgeois establishment."

"It must be tough," I said to Nolan, buying him a drink.

"When my 16-year-old daughter goes out on a date and I say she has to be in at a certain hour, she says I'm destroying her social life, and it will serve me right when she winds up on a psychiatrist's couch."

They really put you through the wringer, don't they?" I said.

Nolan was practically in tears. "You don't know what it's like. The other night my 13-year-old said that Paul McCartney of the Beatles was dead. I said he wasn't dead--that it was all a put-on, and that he was alive and well in London. She said I didn't know what I was talking about, because all the kids knew he was dead. I showed her a picture in the newspaper of McCartney proving he wasn't dead, and she said the grownups were just hiding the facts from the kids, because we wanted them to think he was alive. She said if I lied to her about McCartney, I probably lied to her about everything."

"What's the answer, Nolan?" I asked, as I bought him another drink.

"If it wasn't for my wife, I'd probably call the whole thing off. I love my wife, and I wouldn't do anything to hurt her."

"Then you're keeping the marriage going because of your wife?"

"That's all that's left of the home. I'm putting up a front with the kids, just so I can be near my wife. But it isn't easy. It's so hard for a wife to live in a house where there is bickering going on all the time, and I think she senses that the only reason I come home at night is because of her."

"But Nolan, you can't stay married just because you love your wife," I said.

"It's tough," he said. "But I can't make her suffer just because I have three kids that drive me up the wall."

Death At an Early Age

To Ron Payne, Frank Reynolds, in response to their letter concerning loneliness at UMass:

I feel that many students here are content to barely function in a limited, insensitive existence. However, saying "hello" is merely a step towards probing into the soul of another. It doesn't even shatter the vast spaceland between people. A deep, meaningful communicative attempt is the ideal way to conquer loneliness. Unfortunately, there are very few people who really care to try. I would much rather develop a deep, meaningful relationship, a melting of mind and soul, than to have hundreds of superficial "hello" relationships.

One of my poems intensifies my feelings.

To feel into the pulse, soul and being,
To be aware of the deepest thoughts, emotions and dreams,
To listen to the needs, anxieties and struggles,
To shed the impenitrable cocoon of selfishness and superficiality,
To understand the complexities of searching and merely grasping wisps of nothingness,
To ignore the crippling demands of a limited, bigoted society,
To search into the inner fibers of a person, his motives, desires, inabilities
To establish a meaningful relationship, just once,
To hope for the peaceful,
fruitful brotherhood of so-called humanity,
To give with one's whole being, forever, with no regrets or selfish demands,
To overcome the weakness
by which we fall prey to the hatred, wants and superficiality of society,
To. . .do. . .
Not to--
IS death at an early age
very early

Washington. Go for Peace

Washington for November 14 is becoming a bit too fashionable. The carnival atmosphere anticipated by many people grates my sensitivity when the stated purpose of going is to bring the war to an end. I went to the Boston Common for the October Moritorium; there I found politicians campaigning under the guise of speaking out for peace. I found high school and college students enjoying a pleasant day, mindless of the thought of peace, and seemingly equally mindless to its antithesis, war, which is going on today, and wil l be going on November 14. But don't go to Washington primarily looking for a good time. Go because, if you think about it, war is the most nauseous idea there is, because human beings, real human beings, are getting slaughtered. Go because the government has to be made to hear, because the guns must be silenced. Go because you love life, and everyone's life is more precious than the honor sought by our Government. Go not to enjoy yourself; rather to see this sorry chapter closed.

Happiness Is . . .

America is not a country of heroes. Occasionally, one does emerge, but rarely do they come prominent, for a hero, a true hero, is necessarily an individual, and individualism is not an accepted value in this country. Woodrow Wilson, the government's only philosopher-king, became corrupted with illness and bitterness. Martin Luther King was not fully appreciated as a hero until his death. The Kennedy's had that symbolic heroism, but of course, they never developed their potential. McCarthy, although in current disfavor, will always be a hero. Cesar Chavez is relatively unknown and physically ailing; he will, most likely, become just a footnote to history.

Mrs. Victoria Delee will not have even a footnote in the history books, but she is no less a heroine. She is committed to her beliefs to the point of obsession; she has denied her ex-army son, endangered her other children, faced hunger, prison and death herself, and she cannot stop until her dream is realized. If every fiber and thought is not involved in life, she says, you are dead. Death is not what it's all about, however; "You must keep on fighting until you are really dead."

Mrs. Delee is bitter. She complains about the "white power structure", but concedes that "there are whites whose hearts are black." But she has raised many questions for the white-liberal-radicals that hurt.

Why doesn't the Student Senate on its own initiative give Mrs. Delee some of the $10,000 dollar Viet Nam money so that a couple of dozen people won't go to jail? I realize that Mr. Balboni has tried harder than any other previous President to be progressive. Another progressive gesture might be if Mr. Balboni offered Mrs. Delee some money, or asked the administration to recruit some teachers for Mrs. Delee's Freedom School? Why doesn't SDS picket for those in Dorcester County instead of supporting racist General Electric workers who earn an average of $3.25 an hour? The rent for the Freedom School building is $40 dollars a month. The black students, listening to the jazz group at the Mills Coffeehouse before Mrs. Delee spoke seemed fairly secure attending this University of Massachusetts. Did they ever think of Indians? The blacks down in Dorcester County don't have many things, but as Mrs. Delee says, "the Indians, they don't have nothing. They're the bottom. That's it."

God is on the side of Mrs. Delee, not because it necessarily is, but because she believes that He is.

There are many unhappy and happy people living dead.

Honorable Peace

To those members of the community who still think that the November moratorium is sabotaging President Nixon's chances for an honorable peace, I want to say a few things about war and horror.

It was not an unusual, isolated incident when, during the months of January - March, 1967, the standard procedure of one company of the 26th Marine Regiment RVN, was to cut the ears off dead Vietcong as proof of confirmed kills. An "ear count" was kept on a board in the company CP, and "get ears" was the pep work before most operations. This is not unusual in war because the men who fight there know that there is no such thing as clean death. Death is a man without a head, or half a face, and no arms, entrails soaking into red clay. Death is a chunk of flesh dropped into a plastic bag so it won't smell on the trip home. Death is a man who can no longer touch or feel or create. There is no honor in death, only a crazy, stinking void.

But Nixon asks time to work out a peace with honor. A peace that will win the 1972 election. If three thousand more dead bodies will help achieve this goal, then we are told to be silent and pay the price. We are told to wait. We are told to kill and die a little longer. For peace. And honor.

But you CANNOT kill for honor! If there is any meaning left to the owrk, peace IS honor. The only way to end the war with honor is to end the war. Period. Now.

I have fought in this war with that Marine company, and if there is one man who thinks that the honor and pride of this country can be bought and paid for with human life, then that man may fight, for he is already dead.

There is nothing more valuable than the miracle of life. Never in eternal time will there be another like you, to feel and think and love the way you do. No politics, no economy, and no patriotism means more than this. These may always be changed in other ways, but death is permanent.

A letter in the Oct. 30 Collegian by the director of the Protestant Youth Center stated that the Moratorium is irresponsible and unnecessary. He asks us, instead, to "show some fervor on behalf of the American prisoners of war held by North Vietnam, who are daily subjected both to brutal, inhuman, physical cruelty, and to psychological torture, that has as its malignant purpose, the breaking of the human spirit". This man should realize that he is not simply describing prisoners of war, he is describing the entire PROCESS of war. He is describing the training in our military forces which teaches men to think of human beings as replacable parts. The process may be subtle perverted, and inhuman. But it works.

This is what we are up against. This is why thousands are going to Washington on Nov. 15. This is why Conscientious Objectors are rotting in federal prisons. This is why we are asking, as human beings, to be given the right to follow our own consciences, make up our own minds, and decide our own right and wrong in a world that has no answers. We are marching because men die while we sit and wait.

And when this war ends, as it may, we can look back and see what America achieved. We will see what love and peace and joy of life we have given mankind. We'll imagine what forty thousand bodies would look like in one pile. Then those of us who think and care may want to cry for something more than honor.

Priorities

In Friday's Collegian, the letter signed by the 11 students concerning the moratorium included many questionable statements. It closed with the sentence: "Let's put our priorities back into perspective." O.K. - Let's!

Is it not more important to attempt to end a war which has killed over 40 thousand Americans and has cost billions of dollars a day than to conserve 10 thousand dollars of the Student Senate funds for some future use, as yet not planned for? Is it not important for the students of this University to be given a means through which to express their discontent with this conflict? Is it not more important for our University to take a firm political stand rather than to strive for a reputation as the best university for social events?

This letter also stated that they "protest the misuse of student taxes to support individual conscience". Should questions of individual conscience be funded by the individuals? If so, when the Senate should withdraw their financial support of the C.C.E.B.S. Program and others like it and let the individuals contribute only if they want to (thus threatening the very theory of taxation), clearly a precedent has been set and should be continued.

I protest this lack of understanding on the part of these 11 students and resent their indictment that the 10 thousand dollars will "provide mass assistance for a gay lark to D.C." (The mere fact that the buses arrive in Washington just prior to the march and leave promptly after the march seems to put a damper on any g-i-ing that could be done. Also the fact that the money will provide for only half of the students transportation cost will discourage any free loading).

Any student who desires to go to Washington to protest this war or even to express their views in favor of it should have the opportunity to do so and the Student Senate has not only the right, but it has an obligation to help them do so.

Redmen Kudos

Congratulations to the Redmen, 1969 champions of the Yankee Conference. You've certainly made a dramatic comeback from the off-year endured in 1968. This year's team has progressed throughout the season, bouncing back from two early season losses. Especially to be congratulated are the Seniors, who in the words of George Kerivan, are the backbone of every team. Two Yankee Conference Championships in a three year varsity careers is a feat of great pride. UMass fans will not soon forget this team. Goodbye, Amherst, goodbye.

GE/SDS $3.25 Blues

TO THE Editor:

In any labor dispute, it is customary for the University community to attack the workers. This time the reaction to the SDS action of Thursday, Oct. 30, to support the workers of GE, was very quick and, customarily, the reaction was to attack the workers. A close look at Glickstein's letter will reveal that the economic conditions of the GE workers (skirting the issue of the vicious, non-bargaining policy of the GE bosses, which Glickstein concedes) are also bad. Glickstein thinks $3.25/hr. is a good wage for an American worker just because it is more than a lot of other American workers get. Figuring quickly, this pay rate amounts to $6,760. per year. The U.S. Government, itself, has stated that a moderate income for an average family of 3 or 4 (I forget which) is now 10,000 dollars. (Moderate, in this case, means 20% less than average). It is good propaganda, however, to point out the figure, $3.25/hr., to a college community, since the average college kid (single and not destined to spend his life in a factory) gets even less on his summer job, and remembers that he "made" it. The additional benefits" for a worker, upon retirement from GE, leave even the most "benefitted" worker far worse off than he was when working in the plant. In fact, most retired workers do not get enough from both GE and Social Security to bring them above the poverty level. GE, in addition, cut all cost-of-living clauses in the 1960 contract, only to re-instate new ones in 1966 that fail to keep up with any cost-of-living increases we've had since then.

Jake Konoly's letter attacking both SDS and workers is a shameful demonstration of University-type elitism, super-sensitivity and super-humanity that a lot of students credit themselves with (They get a lot of help from professional liberals, however).

As UMass SDS has already stated in one of its past leaflets, it blames our bosses' University for building anti-working class attitudes in students, as a matter of duty, who will graduate into one of the most class-oriented societies in the world.

Distinguished Botanist to Join UMass Faculty in Fall of 1970

Dr. Albert C. Smith, one of the country's distinguished scientists in the fields of higher plant systematics and evolutionary biology, has been named to the specially-created Ray Torrey Professorship of Botany at the University of Massachusetts, it has been announced by Dr. Seymour Shapiro, action Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Smith, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, comes to UMass from the University of Hawaii, where he was Wilder Professor of Botany. He has also served in such distinguished posts as curator of the Herbarium at Harvard University, director of the Museum of Natural History and assistant secretary at the Smithsonian Institution and program director for systematic biology for the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Smith is a native of Springfield who received his A.B. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. He joined the Smithsonian as a collaborator for field research and taught for a year at Eaglebrook Lodge School in Deerfield before becoming an assistant curator of the New York Botanical Garden in 1928. He was associate curator when he left in 1940 to become curator of the Herbarium at Harvard.

DR. ALBERT C. SMITH

He joined the Smithsonian staff in 1948. With the exception of the two years as program director of systematic biology for the National Science Foundation, he served the Smithsonian until 1963. He was first curator of the Division of Phanerogams of the U.S. National Museum, then director of the Museum of Natural History and finally assistant secretary.

He then joined the University of Hawaii staff, where he was first director of research, then professor of botany and finally Wilder Professor of Botany.

Dr. Smith is author of some 157 technical papers on plant taxonomy and phytogeography and has edited some of the most important journals in his field. He has held offices in major professional societies and has served as an advisor to a number of federal and other agencies. He has been a Guggenheim Fellow, a Bishop Museum Fellow at Yale Yniversity and has held grants from the American Philosophical Society, the National Academy of Sciences and the NSF.

Dr. Smith will join the faculty in Sept. 1970.

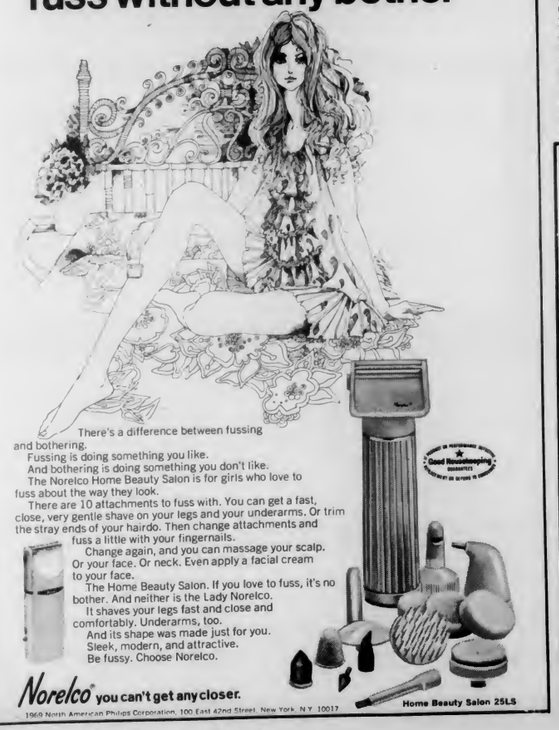
For girls who like to fuss without any bother



There's a difference between fussing and bothering.
Fussing is doing something you like.
And bothering is doing something you don't like.
The Norelco Home Beauty Salon is for girls who love to fuss about the way they look.
There are 10 attachments to fuss with. You can get a fast, close, very gentle shave on your legs and your underarms. Or trim the stray ends of your hairdo. Then change attachments and fuss a little with your fingernails.
Change again, and you can massage your scalp. Or your face. Or neck. Even apply a facial cream to your face.
The Home Beauty Salon. If you love to fuss, it's no bother. And neither is the Lady Norelco.
It shaves your legs fast and close and comfortably. Underarms, too.
And its shape was made just for you. Sleek, modern, and attractive.
Be fussy. Choose Norelco.

UMass Sororities Plan Student Blood Drive

The annual University of Massachusetts Student Blood Drive, sponsored by the University Women, Alpha Phi Omega, and Gamma Sigma Sigma in cooperation with the Hampshire County Red Cross, will be held November 4, 5 and 6 in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. Appointment cards have been mailed to the students and faculty who have pledged to donate a pint of blood. It is very important that they keep these appointments.

The Bloodmobile will arrive at the Student Union with staff and equipment necessary to transform the Commonwealth Room into a complex and smoothly running operation. A physician will be on hand at all times. Experienced workers will staff the donor room. One hour after arriving at the Bloodmobile, the donor will return to normal activity with a membership card for the Hampshire County Red Cross Insurance Program. A blood donor report card will be mailed to each donor within a month with his blood type included.

ments will be accepted beginning Tuesday. Hours for donating are: Tuesday, Nov. 4, 11-4:45, Wednesday, Nov. 5, 10 - 3:45, and Thursday Nov. 6, 10 - 3:45.

Judaic Studies Program For UMass Being Sought

On Monday, October 22nd., a meeting was held on the 12 floor lounge of John Adams Tower to discuss the establishment of a Judaic Studies Program. Dr. Jules Piccus reported to the forty students and faculty present the progress being made in the establishment of Hebrew and Arabic language courses. If all proceeds as scheduled, the courses may be offered for the first time in the fall semester of 1970.

Further points were made citing the immediate need for courses in Jewish history, Jewish philosophy, American Jewish literature, and courses concerning the history and politics of the Mid-East. After further discussion, those present decided to hold a campus-wide meeting on Wednesday, November 5th., for the many interested students in the college community. A committee will be formed at that time to research the possibility of setting up a chair in Judaic studies, for starting courses in History, English, Philosophy, and other departments next semester, and for utilizing the resources of the Five College Community.

A table will be set up in the Student Union so that questions can be answered and those interested can express their interest by affixing their signatures to a paper that will be conveniently placed there.

WMUA's Focus

Tonight, beginning at 8:30, WMUA's "Focus" will examine two issues of national significance. First: "A Look at Dorchester County, South Carolina," where Mrs. Victoria Delee is currently engaging in a desperate struggle to integrate the Ridgeville Elementary School, which has repeatedly been the scene of racial discrimination by whites against Negro and Indian students. A tape of Mrs. Delee's speech in Mills House on Friday, produced by Richard Lipton of the WMUA staff, will be featured. Live commentary will be provided by Steve Moore, an undergraduate in education, and Nancy Lazar, a doctoral candidate in education here at UMass.

Then, following President Nixon's 9:30 address to the nation regarding the Vietnam War, a panel will discuss "The Reasons for the November Moratorium." Tentatively-scheduled guests for this portion of the program include Jack Deaver, professor of comparative literature, George Treyz, professor of economics, Sam Johnson of the United Christian Foundation, and Tony Teso of the Moratorium Coordinating Committee.

Interested persons are invited to tune in on "Focus" tonight at 91.1 FM.

Mr. Carmen Massiamiano, President of the Diocesan Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the Diocese of Springfield announces the creation of the Bureau of Mental Retardation within the Society. Appointed to direct the Bureau for the Council is Rev. Robert F. Wagner assistant at Holy Family Parish in Holyoke. The purpose of the newly created Bureau is "to promote an authentic participation in the life of the Church for the mentally retarded and provide whatever means necessary to promote their full personal development as People of God. It shall likewise contribute to the growth of positive Christian attitudes toward the mentally retarded and assist both parent and child in being accepted in the community, spiritually and physically.

There are an estimated 22,000 people within the Diocese of Springfield who are mentally retarded. Programs of the Bureau are now being developed and personnel from Parish Conferences and professional people are being solicited for training and volunteer work in this social action field throughout the Diocese.

Frosh Honor Society to Celebrate Anniversary

Alpha Lambda Delta is an honor society for freshman women which was installed at the University as a chapter of the national honor society of the same name, in March 1959. The purposes of Alpha Lambda Delta are to promote intelligent living and to encourage superior scholastic attainment among freshmen women. The requirement for membership is an average of 3.5 or above in the first semester or in the cumulative point average for the first year of college.

This year, Alpha Lambda Delta is celebrating its tenth anniversary at UMass. To commemorate this occasion Alpha Lambda Delta will have desplays set up for the benefit of all, in the Student Union from October 27 to November 8. All students, especially freshman women, are urged to take notice of these displays.

Alpha Lambda Delta is also conducting a survey on its past members. Information is being received concerning the occupations of past members. The results could show a diverse range of jobs.

Reading Improvement Course Starting Second Session

Sixty-two students have been enrolled in the first four-week "Reading and Study Improvement Course" sponsored by the School of Education. Music Review

"Led Zepplin II" Within You or Without You

Led Zepplin is one congruous music machine with the ability to jam together at will. On occasion, Jimmy Page has done "Summer Lightning", a thing he wrote when he was with the Yardbirds. He starts off doing it as a solo, with Bonham (the drummer), Plant and Jones finally joining him. Even though all members of the group are in at the end, the song remains a solo for Page. This is not to say that Page is on an ego trip, but merely to demonstrate the oneness and the tightness that Zepplin plays with. To fully appreciate their congruity, they must be heard or seen, preferably both. If one cannot see Zepplin, their imagery can be helped along with Living Sound Dimension.

On stage, the movements of Robert Plant and Jimmy Page help to intensify the obvious interchange that occurs between all members of Led Zepplin. They are sexual and at the same time asexual. Page and Plant are the two members who best exemplify these facets. Page whips his guitar around in much the same manner as Hendrix did at the Monterey Pop Festival in 1967 and at Woodstock this past year. Plant uses Phallic gestures and images, the most explicit of which occurs in "The Lemon Song". He petitions his audience to "squeeze my lemon until the juice runs down my leg." The asexuality of Plant's physical appearance is very evident. Many times he has shown the capability of looking the same from the front or the back. His name itself, Plant, indicates a generally accepted lack of gender. John Paul Jones, the bass player who kicked around with many jazz bands, gives off the same disillusioning image as Clapton now does of being disinterested or bored, when actually his playing has no vegetable-like characteristics.

Before actually hearing the new album, someone mentioned that Led Zepplin did 'Toad", a very interesting proposition to any Cream puff. At first it was somewhat disappointing to find that John Bonham's 'Moby Dick" does not bear any similarity to 'Toad" except for the fact that they are both animals. If you happen to be a person that might confuse the two, either a toad and a whale, or the two musical renditions, then Led Zepplin is now worth your while. However, if a heavy sound with complete musical harmony of four heads is your desire, take the opportunity to dig Led Zepplin II, their new album.

Finally, if what these people or this group of minds who seem to be musically cloned are saying could have been put solely into words, it would have been.

Booters Edged 3-2 Vermont Conf. Champ

By RAY ESONIS
Staff Reporter

The UMass soccer team saw their chances of a Yankee Conference crown go down the drain last Saturday as they dropped a 3-2 decision to the Catamounts of Vermont.

Although the Redmen led during most of the game, Vermont put tremendous pressure on UMass in the fourth period, and came up with two scores in that quarter to secure the victory. The Catamounts are now 5-0 in conference play and have once again captured the title. UMass' conference slate now reads 2-2.

The first period of the match saw some good action and a very fast pace. Each team had equal scoring opportunities, but neither could cash in as the ball traveled up and down the length of the field many times. Thus neither squad dominated the action, and there was no score at the end of the first quarter.

The second period saw Vermont begin to take the upper hand, but they failed to score, due mostly to some fine saves by goalies Tom Malone. Then the Redmen started to pick up some momemtum, and switched the action own to Vermont's goal. After missing a number of close shots, UMass' leading scorer, Duane Brown, finally popped one past the Vermont goalie, and halfway through the second quarter the home team held a 1-0 advantage. As the half ended, the Redmen were in the lead, 1-0.

Vermont's problem during the first half seemed to lie in the fact that their defense was sometimes slow in getting back when UMass started to break downfield with the ball. Most of the time, however, the Catamounts managed to kick it out of bounds before any harm could be done. Altogether, the first half saw some good action, exhibited by both team's ability to pass and handle the ball well.

The first few minutes of the third quarter were uneventful, but soon Vermont's bench began to spur their players on, and the Catamounts suddenly overpowered the UMass defense. The visitor's first goal was then scored, despite a valiant effort by Malone to stop it, and the match was deadlocked at one apiece. Following this, Vermont kept almost all of the action around the UMass goal for the remainder of the third quarter.

After several minutes of the fourth period had elapsed, Redman Duane Brown broke through the Vermont defense, followed closely by Larry DeFelice. As Brown broke right and centered the ball, DeFelice rammed it past the Vermont goalies, and UMass was once again in the lead, 2-1.

UMass victory hopes, however, were short lived as the Redman defense broke down. The Catamounts found the range once again, from around twenty feet, and the score was tied at 2-2. Immediately following this goal, Vermont kept constant pressure on Malone, forcing him to stop shot after shot. And what many people felt had to happen suddenly did. Vermont fired home the winning point with only a few minutes remaining in the match, and held on to win by a 3-2 score.

As a result of the victory, Vermont has once agin captured the Yankee Conference throne. The Redmen, now with an overall record of 3-3, hope to get into the winning column again this Wednesday as they travel to Springfield College.

Patriots Begin Title Rush With Upset 24-0 Win

NEWTON (AP) - Rookie Ron Sellers grabbed a pair of scoring passes from Mike Tallaferro and the Boston Patriots shocked the Houston Oilers 24-0 Sunday for their first American Football League victory under new Coach Clive Rush.

The Patriots, who had lost nine straight dating back to the final two games of the 1968 season under ousted coach Mike Holovak, threw up a might defense in dealing Houston's hopes for the Eastern Division title a sharp blow.

Boston assumed command at the outset, taking the opening kickoff and rolling downfield only to be stopped inches from the goal. A few minutes later Gino Cappeletti's 31-yard field goal attempt sailed wide.

The Patriots finally broke the scoreless deadlock on Cappelletti's 30-yard field goal early in the second period and were on their way, posting their first home shutout in history. Their third and last perfious shutout was in Buffalo in 1967.

play and ran with it 21 yards up the middle to the 39. Ten running and three passing plays later left the Redmen with a third down, five yards from paydirt.

With time almost gone in the first quarter, Hughes set up to throw and drilled one over the middle to end Nick McGarry who was in the end zone for the second TD with time completely run out in the period. Gagnon's kick made the score 14-0 in favor of UMass.

With the defense completely controlling the Vermont offense, the Redman attack, led by Adams, came back for another score in the second quarter. A 65-yard march, it was completed in ten plays when halfback Scavone went off left guard from two and a half yards out at 12:41 of the period. Gagnon's successful conversion made the score at halftime, 21-0.

UMass received the second half kickoff and, after Steve Parnell returned it to his own 46, the Redmen went 54 yards in seven plays for their fourth touchdown. The biggest gainer of the drive came on a second down play on the visitors' 36. A basic play, Adams simply threw a short pass to Grasso, who was wide open in the right flat, and the senior halfback zipped all the way down to the Vermont three.

Grasso found pay dirt two plays later as he jumped in from two yards away. Gagnon split the uprights at 3:09 of the third period for UMass' 28th point.

The Redmen appeared well on their way to a romp, but a Catamount touchdown by fullback Pete Clifford only a minute and 20 seconds later caused some concern. Additional worry was generated when the next UMass drive lasted only three plays and lost three yards. A deflected punt gave Vermont ideal field position on the home 48 yards line.

The Catamounts quickly registered two first downs and soon had a third-and-five situation on the seven yard stripe. At this point, the UMass defense, led by tackle Bill DeFlavio, determined the remaining course of the game. On an attempt to bootleg left, quarterback Peterson was nailed by DeFlavio for a loss of nine back to the 16. On the next play, a fourth down, Vermont's title hopes were ended as DeFlavio broke through Peterson's protective pocket and dropped him on the 27.

From here Adams took the offensive unit in for its fifth score in ten plays, the last of which was a well-executed bootleg of five yards by the senior quarterback. Gagnon belted another one through to give UMass a 35-7 lead with 18 seconds to go in the third quarter.

Marchev was at the helm for the last two scoring drives, one of 77 yards and the other a 33-yarder. the junior QB accounted for the first of these two TD's when he scampered up the middle from 18 yards out after being forced out of the pocket on a pass play from the Vermont 11. Halfback Mark Russell scored the last touchdown when he took a 20-yard Marchev strike on the ten and galloped in for the score.

When it seemed as though Gagnon would never again miss a UMass extra point after hitting his 18th in a row after Marchev's touchdown, his kick following Russell' score was blocked.

In the last home game for Redman seniors, everyone of them saw action and came through with noteworthy performances. In fact, 62 out of the 64 UMass players who suited up got into the contest.

Saturday afternoon rewarded head coach Vic Fusia with some cherishable realities to help soothe the memory of last year's disaster. The conquest of the Catamounts brought the Beanpot to UMass and assured the 5-2 Redmen of a winning campaign. The comeback is now official.

UMass Upset Bid Fails Harriers 2nd in Conf.

Despite a superb team effort by the UMass harriers, the University of Connecticut just held on to win their third straight Yankee Conference cross-country title. The Huskies barely escaped from the fast closing Redmen, 29-31, as the top nine runners represented these two schools. Vermont took third with 71 points, New Hampshire was fourth with 87, Rhode Island scored 150, and Maine tallied 170.

UConn came in as a heavy favorite with a strong front four runners. UMass hopes for an upset hung with a strong effort from all the Redmen runners and the hopes of a large displacement in front of UConn's vulnerable fifth man.

Starting from the Wope field, the race zipped out at a fast clip as the contest broke into a two team race after a mile of the 4.7 mile run. Battling for the lead from the half mile to the top of Baker Hill, about a mile and a half out, were UConn's Rick Spurling and UMass' Leo Duart.

Ron Wayne of UMass passed Duart at the top of the hill and chased Spurling through the two and half mark of the race. Duart was right at Wayne's heels at this point in the race. Following Duart was UConn's John Vitale, who was the pre-meet favorite. UMass' Tom Derderian was behind Vitale and just in front of UConn duo of Craig McColl and Steve Flanagan, who were running side by side. The Redmen's fourth and fifth men at the two and a half mile point, Larry Paulson and Dave Evans, were battling New Hampshire's and Vermont's top runners.

Wayne and Spurling exchanged the lead a few times as the runners swung into the third mile of the race, with UConn harriers, Vitale, McColl, and Flanagan making their moves.

Moving up the East Pleasant Street hill, Wayne moved into the lead but Spurling, and then Vitale went past him. With the two UConn men in front, the Redmen co-captain sprinted by them at the watertowers on top of Baker Hill, and tried to pull away. However, he couldn't hold his lead and Vitale and Spurling went by him at the bottom of President's Hill. Senior Vitale sped on to win his first Conference title in 23:48.5 with Spurling, a junior, finishing in 23:49.

Wayne, the defending champion, finished third in 24:00. Wayne commented after the race, "I went by them too early. I was dead after the downhill. If I had waited to make my move, I may have been able to catch one of them." He also said, "This was the fastest and dumbest race I ran this year."

Duart held his position behind Wayne, finishing fourth in 24:17, running a strong race all the way. Flanagan and McColl finished between Duart and Tom Derderian, who ran his best race, finishing in 24:47. Finishing behind Derderian were Dave Evans and Larry Paulson who placed 8th and 9th in 25:02 and 25:05 respectively.

Evans ran real strong over the last two miles of the race overtaking Paulson and two UNH and two UVM runners in the process. Paulson, also ran a hard race over the last two miles, pulling away from the Wildcat and Catamount harriers.

UMass' sixth man, Bruce Blackburn, and seventh man, Don Dunsky finished 19th and 22nd. The UMass sophs ran good races but couldn't keep up with their experienced teammates.

UConn's strong front finishers didn't mean victory, however, because UMass had five men in but the Huskies fifth man had not yet arrived and if enough runners from the other schools could push him back, Connecticut wouldn't win. Two New Hampshire men and three UVM runners finished before UConn's John Cody ended the suspense and finished 15th to give the Huskies their narrow margin of victory.

Coach Ken O'Brien, who was quite pleased the way his Redmen performed received the congratulations of UConn coach Bob Kennedy, who said, 'You've done a good job in bringing these boys along."

Because of the closeness of the Conference meet, one position change could have given UMass the tittle, UConn has another team to worry about that they didn't worry about before when they defend their New England crown. As UMass co-captain Leo Duart summed up after the meet, 'I never saw a sadder winning team."

Nixon Addresses Nation On Vietnam Policy

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon told the nation Monday night he has a secret timetable for withdrawing all U. S. ground combat forces from South Vietnam but declared Hanoi could sabotage it by stepping up military pressure.

At the same time, in a nationwide television-radio address, Nixon disclosed a hitherto secret exchange of correspondence last summer with the late President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam which he said bolsters his contention that Hanoi is blocking the road to peace.

The Nixon address broke no new ground in the realm of peace initiatives. It added up to a carefully-prepared appeal for homefront support of the administration's Vietnam policies.

"I have chosen a plan for peace," he said. "I believe it will succeed. . .

"Let us be united for peace. Let us also be united against defeat. Because let us understand: North Vietnam cannot defeat or humiliate the United States. Only Americans can do that."

Declaring that he would not reveal any details, Nixon talked about his withdrawal program in these words:

"We have adopted a plan which we have worked out in cooperation with the South Vietnamese for the complete withdrawal of all U. S. ground combat forces and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces on an orderly scheduled timetable."

The chief executive said that if enemy infiltration and the current battlefield lull continues, withdrawals probably could be speeded. But he said should Hanoi step up military pressure and jeopardize U. S. forces in Vietnam, "I shall not hesitate to take strong and effective measures to deal with that situation."

As he spoke, dispatches from South Vietnam told of increasing prssure by a force of about 5,000 North Vietnamese troops in the central highlands.

Administration officials declined to specify what counter steps Nixon might employ.

They also said they could not immediately give a total figure for the number of combat troops to be withdrawn if the Nixon timetable is carried out. However, since there are approximately 495,000 uniformed Americans in South Vietnam and support forces outnumber combat troops by a ratio of about two to one, the total presumably approaches 175,000.

Perhaps the biggest surprise in Nixon's speech, most of which he wrote himself, aides said, was his disclosure that he had written directly to Ho Chi Minh on July 15 to declare, "the time has come to move forward at the conference table toward an early resolution of this tragic war."

Nixon said that Ho's answer, received in Paris three days before the death of the North Vietnamese leader, "simply reiterated the public position North Vietnam had taken in the Paris talks and flatly rejected my initiative."

The White House made public the texts of the two letters. Nixon had addressed Ho as "Dear Mr. President" and the Communist leader had addressed his reply to "Mr. President." Each letter was signed off, "sincerely."

Nixon said that "the effect of all the public, private and secret negotiations" since the United States halted bombing of North Vietnam on Nov. 1, 1968, can be summed up in a single sentence:

"No progress whatever has been made except agreement on the shape of the bargaining table. . .

"The obstacle is the other side's absolute refusal to show the least willingness to join us in seeking a just peace."

Nixon said, upon taking office, he rejected a recommendation that the United States speedily withdraw from the conflict, arguing that this would "be a disaster of immense magnitude" that would "promote recklessness in the councils of those great powers who have not yet abandoned their roles of world conquest" and would spark violence in Berlin, the Middle East and "wherever our commitments help maintain peace."

The result, he contended, would be war, rather than peace.

Rather than go the quick-withdrawal route, Nixon said, he chose to press for a negotiated settlement and, at the same time, undertake a gradual withdrawal "which will bring the war to an end regardless of what happens on the negotiating front."

While stating that some Americans will disagree with the path he has chosen, Nixon said he was addressing "the silent majority of my fellow Americans" and added simply, "I ask your support."

The President, taking note of nationwide antiwar demonstrations past and projected, said it is a strength of American society that any citizen can disagree with his policy and urge immediate withdrawal.

But as President of the United States, he said, "I would be untrue to my oath of office if I allowed the policy of this nation to be dictated by the minority who hold that view and who attempt to impose it on the nation by mounting demonstrations in the streets."

Nixon said that "if a vocal minority, however fervent its cause, prevails over reason and the will of the majority, this nation has no

PARIS (AP) - Communist delegations to the Paris peace talks made it clear early Tuesday they wanted time to study the text of President Nixon's speech before making any comments.

A telephone call to the residence of the North Vietnamese delegation brought an unusual response - the phone was answered with the distant sound of Nixon's voice apparently from a short-wave radio, and then was hung up after a few moments.

At the headquarters of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government delegation, callers were politely asked to "please call back in the morning after 9 a.m."

Faculty Ratifies Curriculum Changes

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

University of Massachusetts faculty members yesterday voted on three propositions affecting curriculum changes in the College of Arts and Sciences. Dr. Seymour Shapiro, Dean of the College, announced the results to the COLLEGIAN.

According to Shapiro, 481 faculty members, or 65 per cent, voted in yesterday's elections. The results were as follows:

Proposition I: As a temporary measure to become effective immediately on approval by the College of Arts and Sciences faculty and to continue only until one of the proposals in Proposition III below receives final approval, the requirements for the B.A. degrees from this College shall be those recommended by the College Curriculum Committee in its memorandum (F-05) of Oct. 14.

Yes - 431 No - 41

This proposal will therefore go into effect immediately.

Proposition II: The Dean of the College shall appoint an ad hoc committee which will be charged with 1) preparing a report to the College faculty on the merits of a four-course system to replace the University's present five-course system, including replies to possible objections, 2) adapting any proposal in Proposition III which is finally approved to the four-course system, and 3) presenting the four-course proposal which may be finally approved by the College faculty to the Student and Faculty Senates for final action on the University level.

Yes - 321 No - 142

This will be set up in two weeks.

Proposition III called for the faculty to vote for one of four proposals dealing with specific curriculum changes. None of the four received a clear majority of the vote. The current CAS graduation requirements received 21 votes; the Curriculum Committee proposal received 132 votes or 27.4 per cent of the votes; the "June" proposal received 40 per cent of the vote; and the Hanke-Quint proposal received 132 or 27.4 per cent.

As a result of the voting on Proposition III, Dr. Shapiro said that a decision would have to be made by Wednesday on whether to hold another Faculty-Senate meeting to clarify differences and answer questions on the three proposals or simply go ahead with a run-off election.

Dean Shapiro told the COLLEGIAN that his reaction to the voting was that it shows there is definitely a desire for some sort of curriculum change among the College faculty.

S.W. Supports Senate JFK Votes Autonomy

The Southwest Area Assembly last night unanimously passed a resolution supporting the Student Senate's stand on open house and dorm autonomy policy. Shortly after JFK Lower voted to form a committee to go before the Senate and declare complete self autonomy.

Resolution A - 9 states that "Whereas, the recent controversy over open housing has raised serious issues of student rights and administrative control, the Southwest Area Assembly, representing over one-half the on-campus undergraduate students, issues the following attitudes: The SW Assembly supports fully the right of student self - determination and dorm autonomy and supports the Student Senate Bills S-53, S-54, and S-306."

Senate President Bruce Balboni stated that the Southwest Assembly move answers the problem, because this is more than one-half the campus."

Last night's meeting of the Assembly was called by President Larry Kravitz to "try to get a policy stand on the open house issue." He pointed out that all the other area governments on campus (Central, Northeast, and Orchard Hill) had taken stands in one form or another.

Balboni, Senate Secretary Pat Beharry and Senator John Dubois attended the meeting in order to address the group and clarify the Senate's stand on the issue.

Balboni addressed the Southwest Assembly with the remark that the whole matter went beyond the open house issue. "The question is whether or not the student governing body has the right to determine social regulations for this University. It's a question of self-determination."

"We will disobey the Board if they do not allow student governing bodies to pass our own social regulations," said Balboni.

The Senate President continued that this was not a threat and "won't lead to a rupture between

N.E. Area Students Live Second Class Says Area Coordinator

1,400 students are living in second class conditions according to Michael West, Northeast area coordinator, because the Quad has not been officially designated a "Residential College".

Mr. West, the only full-time professional coordinator for the area's 1,400 studentsfeels the Northeast is ideal for development -- "Southwest is too big...Orchard Hill is too small, (but) the best attempt so far."

He believes the Quad's assets are the small number of dorms (9) and the grassy area they encircle which he considers ideal as a place for the students to join together.

He decried the lack of faculty involvement. The students' failure to pressure the area government to get progress is depriving them of the educational and social advantages available in the Residential colleges, Mr. West said.

The condition of the dorms is still one of the crucial issues. With only $8,000 available to cover the lack of adequate furnishings in the hundreds of rooms and the lounges, West predicted a battle of area houses over the $20,000 recently allotted to the area government.

Mr. West attributed the Northeast's money problem to the fact that traditionally the Quad was the women's area and a place for "withdrawal" from the University. It has been conservative and peaceful, with no pressure on students to get into activities. The main interests have been sororities and fiancees. He believes the students are afraid of the Quad becoming another Southwest (noisy) so do not push for reform.

Of the nine buildings, seven are women's dorms.

Another critical problem for the residents, he said, is the shortage of parking facilities. The Quad is the last to be considered for improvement because of its comparatively small population, according to West. Because of this, girls must park vehicles next to the stadium and walk all the way across campus.

Perhaps an even more acute problem then any of the above is the apparent "lack of commitment" to the area. For example, The Quad's Angle, the area's bi-weekly newspaper received $2,500 in September, but has just this week printed the first edition. Of 1,400 resident students, "about half a dozen" are actively involved in improving conditions.

The area government,West said, "didn't think up anything new", and he added the suggestions it did propose are copied from successful ventures of Southwest and Central.

Mr. West is concerned over the apparent lack of student interest in the Northeast area. The solution? West emphasized: "The residents must pressure the area government into making worthwhile changes.

An area government was formed three weeks before the close of school last June. This body, made up of a representative number from each of the nine houses in the Quad, has offices in Thatcher.

The government's primary function is to handle area problems. Politically, it does not interfere with individual house problems, but rather "professes house autonomy", according to area coordinator Michael West.

Some of the issues on the government's agenda include the dormitory renovations and what West calls the parking crisis.

Quad residents are forming a committee to develop a Residential college plan. Mr. West feels that the other areas get much more money than the Quad just because they have been designated "residential colleges". With more funds, programs involving faculty and cultural ventures can become part of the Quad's routine, as is presently the case in the residential Colleges.

There are other stirrings in the Quad besides demands for better living conditions.

The Quad's Angle, unlike other residential newssheets, will be printed in the same off-set style as the Collegian, instead of being mimeographed, and will include photographs.

A film series has been planned to include "12 to 15 major full-length movies", Mr. West said. Also in the planning stage are dances for the area.

the Board and student governing bodies," because "we are the student governing body and they have to deal with us."

He pointed out that if the Board of Trustees does not allow student governing bodies to regulate themselves, the Board will then be forced to "enforce the regulations they want."

Balboni stated that originally at the semester's beginning the Student Senate reached mutual agreement with the Board of waiting until Nov. 14 as to what should be done specifically on 24 hour open house policy. In early October, however, several dorms took autonomous action on the issue and the Senate "had to side with the students," he said.

As a result of this S-306 was passed, the Senate supporting any dorm engaging in autonomy providing it had security plans sent to the Student Matters committee first.

The Senate officer emphasized that he believed the "Student Senate acted responsibly on the whole matter."

Balboni summed up his remarks by saying he did not believe area governments should tell dorms what to do about social regulations, anymore than the Board should. "We can safely assume that students will go ahead themselves with dorm self-determination on social regulations no matter what Board, Student Senate, or area governments themselves do. It is not realistic for area government to interfere themselves do, "Most of the students on this campus are already enjoying the policy of open housing autonomy," he concluded.

Election Roundup Nixon Political Strength To be Tested Today

ASSOCIATED PRESS - President Nixon tests the political strength of his White House base for the first time Tuesday in gubernatorial elections in New Jersey and Virginia. He campaigned personally for Republican candidates in both states.

Additional interest in an off-year election is focused on a number of cities holding mayoralty elections, including New York where Mayor John V. Lindsay is a 5-2 favorite for reelection, despite his defeat in last spring's Republican primary.

The only congressional race involves the seat in New Jersey's 8th district, where the incumbent, Rep. Charles Joelson, D-NJ, resigned to become a state court judge. Contesting for the seat are Republican Eugene Boyle, a restauranteur, and democrat Robert A. Roe, the state's conservation commissioner.

For the first time since his own presidential campaign of a year ago, Nixon took to the stump in both New Jersey and Virginia.

He sought votes in Virginia for Republican Linwood Holton, who also has the backing of state labor and civil rights leaders. Nevertheless, Holton was rated a slight underdog to Democratic aspirant William C. Battle. The latter was endorsed by most of his party's leaders, including U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., heir to a powerful Virginia Democratic dynasty.

Nixon's choice in New Jersey was Republican William T. Cahill, a six-term congressman, running against former Democratic Gov. Robert B. Meyner. Both sides viewed the outcome as a toss-up. Mayner attacked the White House Vietnam policy while Cahill supported Nixon's program of measure troop withdrawals.

In New York City, the Daily News poll showed Lindsay a heavy favorite for a second term over Democratic Mario A. Procaccino and Republican John Marchi. The newspaper's survey has never been wrong in a mayoralty race in seven New York City mayoral polls.

Lindsay began as the underdog after he lost the GOP primary to Marchi, a state senator from Staten Island. Spending more than his two opponents combined, Lindsay launched a comeback championing the city's minorities and criticizing the Vietnam war, saying the billions expended there could be put to better use in meeting the urban crisis.

Lindsay is running as a candidate of the Liberal party, which exists only in New York State, and as an independent. However, he has drawn support from liberal leaders from both major political parties.

Procaccino, city comptroller under Lindsay, started out as favorite in the race. But the News poll now shows him with only 27 percent of the vote, compared to 48 percent for Lindsay. He has stressed law and order in his campaign.

Also emphasizing law and order was Marchi, to whom the News poll gives 23 percent of the vote. He has run a low-key campaign supported by the state's Conservative party. Marchi was little known outside state legislative circles until he defeated Lindsay in the GOP primary.

Local Issues Mark Off-Year State Voting

BOSTON (AP) - City voters across New England elect mayors and other officials in voting Tuesday, after quiet campaigns marked only by local issues.

In Boston, attention is centered on the contests for nine places on the city council, with Mrs. Louise Day Hicks, controversial former chairman of the school committee, regarded as a certain winner and the top vote-getter on the ballot.

Mrs. Hicks is making a comback after her defeat for mayor two year ago when she sought to step up from the school committee.

On the latter board, both as a member and during her term as chairman, Mrs. Hicks opposed steadfastly the state racial balance law, which bans school enrollments with more than 50 percent of non-white children.

She also was adamant in opposition to busing of children to other than their home neighborhood schools to correct imbalanced enrollments.

Mrs. Hicks topped the ticket in the September preliminary election which cut the candidate field to 18.

Thirty-eight other Massachusetts cities also are holding elections, most of them choosing mayors by direct votes.

Suburban Somerville has a mayoral contest which has attracted wide interest with a political newcomer, the Rev. S. Lester Ralph, pastor of an Episcopal church, one of the contestants. He is opposed by Joseph E. Marino, who resigned his post as clerk of the Somerville District Court when the Massachusetts Bar Association filed a complaint that he was using that office to further his contest for mayor.

M.I.T. Obtains Order Against Planned Takeover

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Massachusetts Institute of Technology obtained a temporary court order Monday in the hopes that it would head off or at least dampen a threatened takeover Tuesday by a group of ultra-left antiwar demonstrators.

The court order, issued in Middlesex Superior Court against the November Action Coalition and 14 individuals, enjoins those named against interfering with MIT's routine activities.

The NAC, which is protesting research at MIT which it contends is related to the Vietnamese war, refuses to release details of its plans for Tuesday.

It makes no secret, however, of its desire to stage at least one takeover and possibly more, and says its action will come after a noon rally which it expects more than 1,000 persons to attend.

At a news conference Monday afternoon, MIT President Howard W. Johnson called the university "defenseless" in the face of the threatened violence and said he sought the court order because "we cannot ourselves and with only our own resources deal with force or the threat of force."

Only campus police will be on hand for the rally, Johnson said. In the event that outside police have to be summoned, Johnson said he and other administration officials would be on hand to advise them.

Johnson added that he would make the decision on whether to bring in civil police.

"I have not asked, nor would I ever ask, the court to restrain anyone's right to dissent and right to protest," Johnson said.

He added that he would have no objection whatsoever to a peaceful antiwar demonstration, but was unalterably opposed to violence.

Leaders of the NAC met Monday afternoon. They told newsmen afterward only that they had expected the court order and anticipated no changes in their plans.

Earlier Monday, the MIT faculty overwhelmingly endorsed Johnson's decision to obtain the court order on a vote of 344-43.

Inflation in Nation Effects UMass Students

By JULIE JONES
Staff Correspondent

"Money's tight. So are loans." Mr. Judson C. Ferguson, Vice-President of the First National Bank of Amherst explained while discussing the prospect of educational loans for college students, and the Higher Educational Loan Plan (HELP), in particular.

"Any person who is enrolled in an accredited college is eligible for a loan", he said, "and he must begin monthly payments nine months after graduation. At that time, the student pays 7% of the unpaid balance."

He went on to say, "Whether the student pays all the interest, or the government pays, is dependent on the family's income at the time of application. If the net income is less than $15,000, the student may receive government aid."

The amount of money which can be borrowed was, he said, "up to $1,000 a year, but not in excess of $5,000 for an undergraduate program. In addition, he may borrow $1,500 a year for a graduate program, but not in excess of $7,500 total for both undergraduate and graduate programs." No consideration is given to the expense of the college being attended.

On the subject of investigating the applicant, Ferguson said, "We usually study the family background and the application filled out by the student. We also write the university and investigate his standing there. Once we know he is in good standing, the university is notified he's on a HELP loan and the loan is paid directly to the student.

Noting that inflation and college enrollment have set a new trend in educational loans, Ferguson said "Many commercial banks are doing away with HELP because the loans are being held over too long." Graduate school and service obligations delay the payment of the loan. "It is no longer financially worth it to us to continue this particular plan. We continue to assist the student whom we accepted four years ago, but we are not accepting his younger brother.

future as a free society."

The President said he has "powerful personal reasons for wanting to end the war as much as any American. . ." He said:

"This week I will have to sign 83 letters to mothers, fathers, wives and loved ones of men who had given their lives for America in Vietnam. It is very little satisfaction to me that this was only one-third as many as I signed during my first week in office. There is nothing I want more than to see the day come when I no longer must write any of these letters."

Discussing his withdrawal plan, Nixon said:

"I have not and do not intend to announce the timetable for our program. There are obvious reasons for this decision. As I have indicated on several occasions, the rate of withdrawal will depend on developments on three fronts:

"One is the progress which may be made at the Paris talks. . .

"The other two factors. . .are the level of enemy activity and the progress of the training program of the South Vietnamese forces."

Nixon stated that progress regarding enemy activity and training of Saigon's troops has been greater then was anticipated when the withdrawal program was begun in June.

"As a result, " he said, "our timetable for withdrawal is more optimistic now than when we made our first estimates in June. This clearly demonstrates why it is not wise to be frozen in on a fixed timetable.

"We must retain the flexibility to base each withdrawal decision on the situation as it is at that time rather than estimates that are no longer valid."

He went on to say that he wanted to balance his optimistic estimate with a note of caution: "If the level of enemy activity significantly increases we might have to adjust our timetable accordingly."

The President said that enemy infiltration in the last three months is less than one fifth what it was in the same period last year and, in the past two months, U. S. casualties have declined to a three year low.

We have noted the reduced level of infiltration and the reduction of our casualties," he said, "and are basing our withdrawal decisions partially on these factors."

He said that if infiltration or U. S. casualties increase "while we are trying to scale down the fighting, it will be the result of a conscientious decision by the enemy," he continued.

"Hanoi could make no greater mistake than to assume that an increase in violence will be to its own advantage. If I conclude that increased enemy action jeopardizes our remaining forces in Vietnam, I shall not hesitate to take strong and effective measures to deal with that situation.

'This is not a threat. This is a statement of policy. . ."

In appealing for public backing, Nixon reminded his listeners that he had pledged during the 1968 campaign to end the war in a way that would promote peace.

"The more support I can have from the American people, the sooner that pledge can be redeemed; for the more divided we are at home, the less likely the enemy is to negotiate in Paris."

In the body of his speech, Nixon said the United States has reduced its air operations in recent months by more than 20 per cent.

Administration sources said Hanoi was aware of the cutback at the time Ho wrote Nixon yet, in his letter dated Aug. 25, Ho accused the United States of intensifying military operations, B52 bombings "and the use of toxic chemical products."

The late leader of the Hanoi government wrote Nixon:

"In your letter you have expressed the desire to act for a just peace. For this the United States must cease the war of aggression and withdraw their troops from South Vietnam, respect the right of the population of the South and of the Vietnamese nation to dispose of themselves, without foreign influence."

The administration sources indicated Ho's reply was regarded as particularly barren because, in it, he spoke of "the policy of American governing circles."

Nixon cited a number of U. S. peace initiatives undertaken privately and secretly - some even before his inauguration.

Soon after the 1968 election, he said, he made "two private offers for a rapid, comprehensive settlement," through an unnamed individual directly in contrast on a personal basis with the leader of North Vietnam". He said replies from Hanoi called in effect for our surrender before negotiations.

In addition, he said, as President he and others in the administration have tried to enlist the assistance of the Soviet Union and other governments maintaining diplomatic relations with North Vietnam to help promote meaningful negotiations.

"None of these initiatives have to date produced results," he said.

In explaining his correspondence with Ho, Nixon said:

"In mid-July, I became convinced that it was necessary to make a major move to break the deadlock in the Paris talks. I spoke directly with an individual who had known Ho Chi Minh on a personal basis for 25 years. Through him I sent a letter to Ho Chi Minh.

"I did this outside of the usual diplomatic channels with the hope that with the necessity of making statements for propaganda removed, there might be constructive progress toward bringing the war to an end."

Nixon pictured himself as having rejected, last January, the idea of an immediate withdrawal although "from a political standpoint this would have been a popular and easy course to follow." He said some who urged such a decision put it bluntly: "This was the only way to avoid allowing Johnson's war to become Nixon's war."

The President said that the great question at issue was not whether "Johnson's war becomes Nixon's war" but rather "the effect of my decision on the next generation and the future of peace and freedom in America and the world."

Asserting that precipitate withdrawal would be a disaster for the United States, for South Vietnam and for the cause of peace, Nixon argued it "would inevitably allow the Communists to repeat the massacres which followed their takeover of the North 15 years ago" and their executions of civilians during the 1968 Communist Tet offensive.

Having made that decision, he said, the question became "how can we win America's peace."

Recalling his May 14 television-radio speech in which he unveiled an eight-point peace plan, Nixon restated what he has described as the flexible and generous position of the United States at the Paris talks:

"We have not put forth our proposals on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. We have indicated that we are willing to discuss the proposals that have been put forth by the other side and that anything is negotiable except the right of the people of South Vietnam to determine their own future. . ."

He said Hanoi "has refused even to discuss our proposals" and demands unconditional acceptance of their terms including an immediate and unconditional withdrawal and, said Nixon, "that we overthrow the government of South Vietnam as we leave."

At no point did Nixon make a new and direct appeal to the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong to alter their positions but it was clear he wanted to tell them that he was not altering his.

As Nixon stated in Saigon on July 30:

"We have gone as far as we can or should go in opening the door to peace, and now it is the time for the other side to respond."

Titicut Follies Goes to Court

BOSTON (AP) - Producer Frederick Wiseman, who filmed the documentary "Titicut Follies" about Bridgewater State Hospital and its mental patients, was named Monday in a $5.6 million suit by 35 present and former patients.

The inmates charged the 1966 film violated their right of privacy.

The suit was filed in Suffolk County Superior Court against Wiseman and three corporations involved in the documentary's production and distribution.

The picture, photographed inside the hospital with official approval, showed some patients in the nude. The film later was shown commercial in New York City and other places, but Massachusetts officials barred its commercial screening in this state through a restraining order.

Court sources said they believed the suit was the first ever filed in the Commonwealth by inmates of a state institution charging their privacy had been infringed.

Panhellenic Awards

Last week the Panhellenic Council of the University held its annual Scholarship Tea at which a silver tray was awarded to Lambda Delta Phi and Sigma Sigma Sigma for holding the highest cumulative averages among sororities. This was the first time that two houses tied for the honor.

Representatives from each sorority attended the function held at SDT. The presidents, scholarship chairmen, pledge trainers, house-mothers, and advisors all demonstrated their concern for continued scholastic achievement by sorority women, thus indicating that scholarship is an integral part of sorority life.

Heidi Hartley, president of Panhellenic, presented the tray and then introduced Dean Curtis, the advisor to Panhel. Miss Curtis congratulated sorority women for maintaining their superior average which was above that of the University as a whole as well as that of all University women.

Dr. Inez Hegardy, Associate Professor of Speech at the University, addressed those in attendance. She commended sororities for their achievement and urged that the members continue their endeavors into graduate schools. Dr. Hegarty stressed the many possibilities open in professional fields for women and stated that their will never be enough qualified women to accommodate the number of individuals in need of professional service.

AMHERST, Mass. - James Hendricks, assistant professor of art at the University of Massachusetts and nationally recognized painter of moonscapes is one of three contemporary artists whose works are currently being shown at the Smithsonian Institution National Air and Space Museum.

The other artists are Chesley Bonestell, "Dean of Astronomical Art" and Keith Ferris, whose paintings are of aircraft.

Hendricks began painting moonsaw a moon-probe of the Crater Copernicus and used it as the basis for an abstract painting. He works from NASA and other photos, often on canvases as large as 18 x 18 ffet, using either conventional brushes or airbrushes.

Although at first Hendricks' approach was toward the abstract, his works are showing more and more detail as cameras have gotten closer and closer to the moon's surface. His colors range from gray-blue to gray-brown and grey-green. One of his favorite formats is the multiple sequential image - a dozen or so image s in regular order on the same canvas.

FROM OUR SIDE

A Good Idea

The allocation by the Student Senate last Wednesday night of $10,000 to subsidize undergraduate students going to Washington for the November 15 march was in our opinion an excellent idea, even though it has suffered tremendously because of poor logistics.

The idea of the senate supporting the transportation of students to Washington is an excellent use for these funds. The anti-war march of November 15 is anticipated to be on a scale with that of the Poor People's March on Washington and the Civil Rights March of 1965. Few would deny that such an event could be the push needed to get some positive action out of President Nixon in getting us out of Vietnam. Poor planning possibly resulting from the urgency of the bills needed immediate passage, resulted in a setback for the bill.

The first mistake which the Senate made was in bringing the bill up for vote before it ever got to the senate finance committee. This was in direct violation of the financial policy booklet. This put a rather stiffling damper on the bill right off, making the Senate's action on its passage invalid.

Then there were the lack of specifics written into the bill which sort of left people wondering just how the whole thing would be carried off logistically.

Assuming the Senate works out these problems however, it will provide a needed service to the large number of students intent on working for peace on November 15th.

ART BUCHWALD

White Rats Have All the Fun

WASHINGTON - The key to man's survival on earth seems to be the white rat. Most experiments being conducted these days to see what effect our environment has on human beings are first conducted on white rats. Only after we know what happens to white rats will be take any action to protect the human race.

Nobody has bothered to find out how the rats feel about this. In man's ever-questing search for truth, I visited a large government laboratory the other evening around midnight and recorded what the white rats were saying to each other.

"Zelda, you look so thin."

"They've had me on cyclamates. I must have lost 3 ounces in a week. What have you been doing?"

"I've been taking monosodium glutamate. It's tasty, but it gives me headaches. Oh, Horace, will you stop coughing?"

"Ack, ack, ack. I can't help it. They've got me smoking a pack of cigarettes a day."

"Why don't you give them up?"

"I'd like to, but they won't let me."

"What on earth is Sheldon doing? He's staggering all over his cage."

"He's involved in the marijuana experiments. He goes on a trip every night."

"That's what I call luck. How can I get off cyclamates and in the pot program?"

"You have to know somebody. Every rat in the lab wants to go on pot."

"I don't. I feel you have to face reality and not seek escape. That's why I'm proud to be associated with the air pollution project."

"How can you stand it?"

"It's not bad. Every day they drive me around New York City and I just breathe. If I die, they know the air pollution count is too high. If I live, I get to see the city."

"You're probably right, Bettina. I volunteered for air pollution, but some computer assigned me to water pollution. I'm getting sick of drinking dirty river water every day."

"What's the matter with Whitney? He seems awfully quiet tonight."

"He's been eating grapes with DDT on them for a week, and I guess it's finally getting to him."

"I told him to boycott grapes."

"They won't give him anything else to eat, so he has no choice."

"Where's Alvin?"

"Didn't you hear? They transplanted his heart into Hazel today. Hers gave out during the automobile exhaust tests."

"Poor Alvin."

"He didn't seem to mind. He was involved in the tranquilizer experiments, and when they asked him for his heart, he said he couldn't care less."

"Who's crying?"

"Sandra. They have her taking the birth control pill. She wants babies in the worst way."

"Well, at least she's having some fun, which is more than I can say for what I'm doing."

"What's that, Carolton?"

"I'm working for NASA to see the effects of weightlessness. I vomit all the time."

"But the space program at least has some glamor to it. They keep injecting me with flu germs."

"I guess Sampson has the best job of any of us."

"What is he doing?"

"They put him in front of a color television set all day long to see how much radiation he absorbs. He's the only white rat I know who gets to watch Laugh-in."

Area Governments. Playing It Safe

To the editor:

It seems that a major crisis is arising between campus Area Governments and the Student Senate. The focal point of dispute is whether the Student Senate or the Board of Trustees should have the ultimate jurisdiction over social regulations at the University of Massachusetts.

It is my intention in this article to clarify a number of basic issues.

Firstly, one of the blatant misinterpretations surrounding this question equates Area Government neutrality with outright disapproval of self-determination. At this time three of the four Area Governments have expressed their neutrality toward the issue. An example of this is the Orchard Hill Area Government resolution of October 28, "We, the duly-elected members of the Orchard Hill Residential College Area Government, do hereby agree to delay legislation of social policies pending the outcome of the next meeting of the Board of Trustees (November 14)." This resolution in no way states opposition to the policy of self-determination. It does act as a caution device for irrational movements in the name of "self-determination."

On Wednesday, October 29, 1969, the Student Senate took the following stand: ". . .be it resolved that the Student Senate, in keeping with the stand of last year, consider that this question (visitation policy) and other questions relative to social regulation of students' lives, are and ought to be outside the jurisdiction of the Board of Trustees, and are and ought to be exclusively the concern of the student and his elected governing agencies, with the advice and assistance of student personnel services. . ."

However, in the passage of this resolution, the Senate erroneously neglected to "do its homework before class." One of the most fundamental issues which this resolution fails to take into account is that of legal liability. For example, a rape occurs in a dormitory. Who then is responsible? The House Council? The Student Senate? The administration? The Board of Trustees? According to the Senate resolution, this responsibility follows under the jurisdiction of the Student Senate. WRONG! After recently consulting Staff Counsel for the University, Mr. Sidney Meyers, I learned that the Board of Trustees and only the Board can assume this legal liability. The reason for this stems from the fact that the Board of Trustees is legally bound under laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Therefore, if the Student Senate wishes to solely take on the responsobility of determining the social regulation of student lives, it must first change the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

On September 22, the Board voted in favor of the specific social regulation dealing with self-determination. The only stipulation was that a workable security proposal be approved by the Board before the implementation of the policy. (This seems only fair in the light that the Senate asks the same prerequisite from any dormitory petitioning for 24-hour open house.) It is therefore obvious that the Board, due to its ties to Massachusetts law, cannot relinquish this ultimate responsibility, including the legal liability, to the Student Senate.

The Area Governments foresaw this contradiction of interests concerning responsibility, and have therefore adopted their neutral stands until after November 14. If the Senate had researched the implications of its stand before its legislation, it too, would have foreseen the complications and thus would have saved the student body, the administration and the Board of Trustees from this needless embarrassment.

Train Allocation? No Way to Peace?

To the editor:

I must object to the recent Senate bill which appropriated some $5000 to allow some students to attend the Moratorium demonstrations in Washington. I do not favor the Moratorium, but I like even less the idea of (our, my?) money being used for the transportation of some select few to an activity not in the least connected with the University. Your article of Thursday last said that this money will come out of Homecoming profits. May I ask where this money would have gone if someone hadn't thought this scheme up? Might it perhaps have been used to fund those student organizations which, for various flimsy reasons, were told, "No money available" in answer to their budget requests? Might it be used to help out the marching band, which I hear is in hurting shape for next season?

There is, of course, a group of people who sincerely feel that the Moratorium in general, and the Washington protest in particular, is the way to peace: At least they're dedicated to something. I cannot help feeling that their services might be better employed here, trying to win over the rest of us apathetic dorm rats. If, for some reason, they MUST be in D.C., surely it is their problem to get there, and at their own expense, not ours.

Black Studies Found O.K. At Brown University

By AMBROSE B. DUDLEY
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP) - Brown University's new black studies program, although still far short of expectations, has had a beneficial effect on students, the Negro chairmanof the department said today.

"The students, to some extent, have been made aware they are being listened to and that the college is concerned," said Dr. Charles H. Nichols, head of the Afro-American studies committee.

"Also, other areas of the college are much more aware of the role of the Negro in American life as a result of the program," he told The Associated Press in an interview.

"The people in the theater are planning a play by a black author," Nichols said, "and the religion department wants to have Negro lecturers."

About 300 students, most of them white, are enrolled in the two course offered under the program during its first full semester. Ten courses will be offered next semester.

There are about 220 Negroes among the 3,900 students at Brown and Pembroke College, its sister school.

"White students are very interested in the program, but not all black students are, Nichols said.

The problem in evaluating the black studies program, he said, "is that this is an age in which young people have higher expectations.

"I resented as a youth being told I had to do something," the 50-year-old Brooklyn native recalled, but I didn't do anything about it."

Negro students at Brown "deserve a great deal of credit for making the college aware of their problems," he said. "The Negro had the political astuteness to dramatize the problem without disrupting the campus."

Last Dec. 5, 60 of the 85 Negro students at Brown and Pembroke walked off the campus to dramatize demands, including creation of a black studies program.

The Afro-American studies program however, had been under consideration three months earlier, a college spokesman said.

Last January, Brown announced a new course on black culture along with a seven-part series of lectures and in May inaugurated a program leading to a major in Afro - American Studies. Nichols' committee, which includes four students, guides the program in conjunction with the Afro - American Society.

A visiting lecturer at Brown last fall, Nichols became head of the department last month.

A cum laude graduate of Brooklyn College in 1942, he received a doctorate in English and American literature from Brown six years later.

Nichols was director of the department of literature for the John F. Kennedy Institute for American Studies at Berlin's Free University before returning to Brown.

Nichols is the first to admit Brown's black studies program is not satisfactory, "nor is any in the country."

"We need to think through the program," he said. "We need to define what the objectives are and where we are going."

The program is a conglomeration of "rather disparate courses" with some attention given to the black experience, he said, but without an in-depth consideration of any one aspect of black studies.

"It is hard for a student to plan a cohesive program of study," he said.

The Afro - American Society's Committee on Black Studies is collection information from other schools on their programs and development of new ideas, said Philip Lord, coordinator of the society.

There is "mountainous material" at the John Carter Brown Library that could be used in the program, Nichols said, but the problem is getting it catalogued.

Nichols said there are three elements he feels the program needs:

1. Organization of research material and attach a point of view to it. "Afro-American studies obviously are not a discipline, but many disciplines."

2. Incorporate the black experience into the total curriculum of the school. 3. Build student interest in learning things that will help them funtion in the black community more effectively. "They need to develop techniques to deal with the problems the people who are discriminated against confront."

The program also needs, he said, more Negro instructors. By next September, he wants to add two members to the faculty.

Selective Service Found Punitive

By LAWRENCE KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Selective Service System must be stopped from using the draft to punish antidraft and antiwar protestors, former Attn. Gen. Ramsey Clark told a Senate panel Monday.

Clark said fines might be substituted for the official policy of speeding up induction into the Army as a rebuke for actions ranging from protests to failure to carry a draft card.

He said the delinquency rules have been used unconstitutionally to stifle protest and limit freedom of speech and should be repealed by Congress.

And he said criminal prosecutions of draft violators should be held to a minimum as a matter of national policy.

"We pay a high enough price for any war," Clark said. "Why should we pay an even higher price by blighting, perhaps permanently, promising young lives."

"The only line that must be drawn, while military forces are maintained, is on the day set for induction," Clark added. "If the individual refuses then to step forward in the service of his country, he must expect to pay the penalty of the law."

Clark and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., whose judiciary subcommittee is holding hearings on the administration of the draft system, agreed President Nixon could make some needed changes immediately, if he wants to.

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he is being wrongly blamed for blocking consideration this year of a House-passed administration bill to create a lottery system to choose men for the draft.

He said his statement last Thursday that chances for Senate action on draft legislation this year are dim, did not reflect any intention of the Senate's Democratic leaders to hold up action.

U. of Me. Establishes New Protest Penalties

ORONO, Maine - The University of Maine has put into effect a new policy for dealing with campus disorders, it was learned yesterday.

The policy was approved by the student senate, college faculties and the administration, and calls for "swift and appropriate" discipline of student demonstrators in accordance with a new code of student rights.

The code lists rights of free speech and assembly and requires the approval of a widely representative committee of the university before outside police may be brought in to restore order.

The maximum penalty under the new policy is dismissal, levied only for commission of bodily harm or property destruction. Trespassing makes the offender subject to suspension, while a probationary period is the penalty for disorderly conduct.

The code also governs on-campus activities by job recruiters and calls for administration restraint in the use of security officials during any disorder.

Second Century

The 1970 edition of the INDEX marks the one hundred and first edition of the book. For the "Second Century" of publication the book will have a new look - a look that will kick off the swinging seventies in style.

If you have thoughts on what the 1970 yearbook should be like, why don't you join the staff. Just come to the Bristol and Essex Rooms of the Student Union this Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

Why Do You Read So Slowly?
A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique of rapid reading which should enable you to increase your reading speed and yet retain much more. Most people do not realize how much they could increase their pleasure, success and income by reading faster and more accurately.
According to this publisher, many people, regardless of their present reading skill, can use this simple technique to improve their reading ability to a remarkable degree. Whether reading stories, books, technical matter, it becomes possible to read sentences at a glance and entire pages in seconds with this method.
To acquaint the readers of this newspaper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing rapid reading skill, the company has printed full details of its interesting self-training method in a new booklet, "How to Read Faster and Retain More"; mailed free. No obligation. Send your name, address, and zip code to: Reading, 835 Diversey, Chicago, 60614. A postcard will do.

Trustee Healy Speaks of Great UMass Future

By NINA MCCAIN
Globe Staff

Within the next decade, the University of Massachusetts will have more than 45,000 students on three campuses and will operate on an annual budget of $100 million or more.

"We are not running a corner grocery store," said Joseph P. Healey, chairman of the UMass board of trustees. "We are running one of the largest operations in the commonwealth."

And yet, until now, the university has been run much as it was when it was "Mass Aggie" - a cow college with a few hundred students nestled in the Connecticut River Valley.

To be sure, the administrative staff grew, but the president of the expanding university system was still the man in charge at Amherst - worrying about dormitory rules and the peccadillos of the campus humor magazine while trying to preside over the establishment of a Boston campus and a medical school in Worcester.

PLAN ENDORSED

Trustees have been aware of this problem for some time and the impending resignation of President John Lederle announced last June provided an opportune moment for a re-evaluation of the whole structure.

At their last meeting, the trustees took a decisive step toward creating an administration for a true university system, not just a collection of campuses. They endorsed in principle a plan that will make the next president the head of a system, with his office in Boston.

The individual campuses will be run by chancellors and there will be four new vice presidents with responsibilities for system-wide academic, fiscal, administrative and planning operations.

Healey, who has been a member of the board for 11 years and who is as responsible as any one man for the reorganization, says that the university's size and complexity demand a president with an "overview" of the system. Boston was chosen as the location of the new office, Healey said, both because it provides the necessary psychological and physical separation from individual campuses, protecting the president from charges of favoritism, and because "Boston is the center of the action."

Proximity to the governor, the legislature, and the state's major news media, will make it easier for the new president to get political and financial support for the university, the trustees hope. Although university budgets have doubled and tripled in recent years, the state is still far behind the rest of the country in providing public higher education for its young people. It ranks 49th in the country in per capita spending on higher education and one study has predicted that even when all new building programs are completed in 1980, there will still be 113,000 more students than seats.

NEW AWARENESS

At the same time, Healey hopes that regular exposure to the governor and to the legislature will make university administrators more aware of the competition for the state's dollar and the practical necessity of balancing competing interests.

Healey, also hopes that the move to Boston will enable the new president to take a leadership role in coordinating public and private education in the state. With private universities in financial trouble and looking to the state treasury for help, Healey believes that the need for joint planning is urgent. He is personally in favor of "putting some public underpinnings under private higher education," but he would first like to see a thorough study to make sure that public and private institutions are not duplicating expensive programs.

With all the potential advantages in moving the new president to Boston, there are also some possible disadvantages. There is a risk that the president could become isolated from students and faculty on the various campuses. There is also the very real problem of finding the right kind of man to fill the job, plus a new chancellor for the Amherst campus at a time when the vacancies in higher education outnumber the top quality people available.

In addition, there is the chance that there will be conflicts or problems of overlapping authority among the four new vice presidents and the chancellors. On paper the organizational chart has been worked out so that there will be no conflicts, but Healey acknowledged that in practice there might be internal power plays. There is always the danger that a newly created office will expand out of proportion to its function.

On balance, the reorganization appears to be a big step in the direction of providing the kind of purpose and long-range planning that UMass needs if it is to become one of the great state universities.

Black Artists Exhibit at Mt. Holyoke

The first major exhibition of contemporary paintings and drawings by black artists to be exhibited at Mount Holyoke College will open Thursday, November 6 at Dwight Art Memorial on the campus.

Organized by Henri Ghent, director of the Community Gallery at The Brooklyn Museum, the show will be comprised of more than 40 works of ten leading Afro-American artists, several of whom have won recognition both in this country and abroad.

The participating artists are Romare Bearden, Floyd Coleman, James Denmark, Norman Lewis, Raymond Saunders, Thomas Sills, Alvin Smith, Bob Thompson (Estate of), Russ Thompson and Walter Williams.

Mr. Ghent, who was the firs black American to assume an administrative post in a major U.S. museum, will give a lecture on "Black Artists - The Invisible Americans" at 8:00 p.m. Wednesday, November 5 in Chapin Auditorium at the College. This will be the third lecture in the All- College Lecture Series on "The Black Experience."

Mr. Ghent said, "Contrary to the popular notion that the black artist's expression reflects little that does not allude to his awareness of his second-class status in America, we find that this show points to the fact that the contemporary black artist embraces this concern along with a marked interest in the overall human condition. . . our primary aim is to underline the 'art' in 'Black Art'. . . ."

The exhibition is sponsored by the Mount Holyoke Friends of Art. "It is a pleasure and privilege for the Mount Holyoke Friends of Art to be able to bring to the Pioneer Valley its first major showing of contemporary art by Afro-American artists," said Miss Jean C. Harris, associate professor of art.

The exhibition will remain on public view through November 26. A catalogue with foreward by Mr. Ghent will be available. The gallery is open daily from 9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sundays from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Here's what your first year or two at IBM could be like.

You'll become involved fast. You'll find we delegate responsibility—to the limit of your ability.
At IBM, you'll work individually or on a small team. And be encouraged to contribute your own ideas. You'll advance just as fast and far as your talents can take you.
Here's what three recent graduates are doing.

Doug Taylor, B.S. Electronics Engineering '67, is already a senior associate engineer working in large-scale circuit technology. Aided by computer design, Doug is one of a five-man team designing integrated circuits that will go into IBM computers in the 1970's.

Soon after his intensive training course, IBM marketing representative Preston Love, B.S. '66, started helping key Iowa commissioners solve problems. Like how to introduce school kids to computers, without installing one. His answer: share one in Chicago by phone cable.

Soon after his IBM programmer training, John Klayman, B.S. Math '68, began writing programs used by a computer system to schedule every event in the Apollo tracking stations. And when the finished programs were turned over to NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, he was responsible for making them work.

Women's Wardrobe Ways Set Stylish Trends And Save Money Too!

By MARSHA POSTERNAK
Staff Correspondent

Contrary to opinion, it is possible for the average American female to build a wardrobe that contains: 1. quality at the "right" price; 2. creativity with a "different look"; 3. personal pride in wearing; 4. suitable taste in color, material, style, fit, care and coordination.

According to Mrs. Cynthia Bright, owner of Fashion Fabrics material store in Amherst, more and more females nowadays are designing or making their own outfits. Mrs. Bright, who is devoted to sewing as a hobby as well as a business, has many ideas as to how a woman can make a desirable, stylish and varied wardrobe.

She claims that the first step in designing an outfit is pattern selection. Simplicity, McCalls and Butterrick patterns offer a wide range of styles from casual to evening wear. They offer patterns not only for all members of the family, but also for domestic accessories. Vogue patterns offer an elegant selection in Parisian designs. Polynesian patterns offer selections in oriental designs.

Mrs. Bright advises the beginning seamstress to choose a simple pattern. Yet, she adds, choosing a pattern is not merely selecting a picture. The seamstress must carefully measure herself for proper size and select a pattern style appropriate for her figure.

The next step in the outfit-making process is selection of material. It is in this step that Mrs. Bright takes extra care to see that her customers, as well as herself are pleased. She suggests buying material which is easy to care for such as polyester cottons rather than 100% cottons, since polyesters require little ironing and are always machine-washable.

She highly recommends buying a good grade of material, 'even if it is a little extra a yard'. In her words, 'It is better to spend an honest price and get quality, than to bargain-hunt and not know what you are getting."

She likewise suggests buying a good lining for material. In her words, "it is absurd to see someone buying yards of Pendleton wool (a top grade wool) and then choosing a cheap sheath lining. It is like putting a Donald Duck record on your four-speaker stereo."

The wide selection of material for the seamstress to purchase is reflected in Mrs. Bright's average-sized fabric store. She stocks wools (bonded and unbonded), cottons, (100% and polyesters), crepe, corduroy (ribless, wide wale, pin wale), challis, interfacing, brocades, velvet and velveteens, synthetics, suede, leather, linings (5 types), acetate, knits and quilt.

Mrs. Bright also cites sewing accessories as essential to the finishings of an outfit. Among buttons alone, there are the ready-made, button-covering kits, snaps, hooks and frogs. For trims, one may choose from ribbon (velvet, grosgrain, acetate), lace, woven braid, sequins. In selecting a zipper, one may choose between a regular zipper or a zipper which is hidden when sewn into material.

Once a seamstress has selected a pattern, material and accessories, she is ready to begin her creation. Mrs. Bright points out that with the aid of modern inventions, the creative process is quick, easy, and exciting. For, not only are modern electric machines available to the seamstress, but also such gadgets as electric scissors, button-hole makers, hem and zipper attachments, hem markers, seam rippers, and countless other helpful aids.

A "Bright" suggestion: "If you want a wardrobe that is really different, economical, suitable and creative, THEN SEW!"

Students Write Adds UNIVAC Gives Prizes

Univac has come up with a new way of appealing to college students in its recruiting ads: have them write their own ads.

The company is sponsoring a College Copywriting Contest at over 100 colleges and universities which it visits during its recruiting campaign. The aim is to produce ads which will be especially relevant to students because they have been written by students.

Student contestants are to submit finished copy, a rough pencil layout, and a one-page copy platform explaining the rationale behind the ad. Three or four additional headlines, showing how the idea could be expanded into a campaign should be included at the bottom of the platform.

Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight, Monday, November 10, 1969 and must be received by Saturday, November 15, 1969 at the Univac College Copywriting Contest, P.O. Box 4050, St. Paul, Minn. 55116.

Full-time students at 115 schools which are visited by Univac for recruitment are eligible to participate. Entries will be divided into five geographical areas of the U.S., with the second prize being awarded in the four areas remaining after the first prize selection.

Winners, to be chosen by a blue ribbon panel of advertising executives, will be informed on or before December 1, 1969. They will then work with the executive art director of Univac's agency, Mac Manus, John & Adams Inc., St. Paul, Minn., on actual production of the ad. Prizes will be awarded to the winning student and to their schools.

For details concerning participation, visit the Placement Office, School of Journalism, English, or Business Administration, or write Univac College Copywriting Contest, P.O. Box 4050, St. Paul, Minn. 55116.

Station WFCR Appoints Keenan New Manager

Charles F. Keenan has been appointed manager of radio station WFCR, it was announced today by Horace W. Hewlett, Secretary of Amherst College and President of the Western Massachusetts Broadcasting Council.

Keenan has been administrator of television and radio at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst since 1967. He will retain that position in addition to his new duties.

Prior to coming to UMass, Keenan was a writer-producer on the "General Electric Theater" television series on CBS, director of creative services for Sterling Movies and general manager of Prism Productions, producers of "Watch Mr. Wizard" on NBC and "Experiment" on National Educational Television. Keenan also has credits as a writer-producer-director for many other radio, television, motion picture and stage productions.

A native of Milton, Mass., Keenan graduated from Holy Cross in 1951. He is married and the father of six children.

Redmen Savor Beanpot, Prep for UNH

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

There were a lot of question marks dotting the UMass football picture just a couple of months ago. There was an uncertainty at quarterback, in the offensive line, in seven sophomores starting on defense and in the attitude of a team that was coming off its worst season in a decade.

All the questions are answered now. There are three quarterbacks that can do the job capably, the offensive line has keyed the emergence of an awesome rushing attack, the sophomores, along with the veterans have molded into a rock-ribbed defense that has allowed three touchdowns in their last four games, all against highly regarded offenses. And the attitude has been excellent.

Thus, the Redmen join the Mets, Jets and Tony Conigliaro as "Comebacks Kids" of the past year, and are in possession of another Yankee Conference Beanpot, their fifth in seven years.

Sometimes that much success could make the recipients complacent about their victory. But UMass was more than happy about the whole thing. As coach Vic Fusia put it, "I just have this wonderful tired feeling. All our titles have felt good, but the way we made a total recovery from last year, makes this one feel like the first one.

The way people are rejoicing, you'd think this was the end of the season. But, following an off week this Saturday, the Redmen must play New Hampshire in a game that could earn them a perfect record in the Conference, and then their second season, the Boston College game.

If Fusia has his way, there won't be any letdown. "We want to defeat New Hampshire, because as far as I'm concerned we have to prove we are the best. A good football team has to keep doing this.

And the coach does not think that a week off will have an ill effect on the momentum built up over the past month. "We need this week off", said Fusia. "I've pushed this squad pretty hard since the beginning of the year. So this week will give us a chance to recoup a lot of the bumps and bruises that have accumulated over the year. But we'll work like we still have a game scheduled."

It is indicative of the way this UMass team has developed that with no trouble at all, they could be undefeated. The Buffalo loss, was caused by just one off day offensively. And the Delaware loss, (Delaware incidentally routed Rutgers 40-0 this week after Rutgers had beaten people like Princeton and Navy) was caused by one off-day defensively.

To paraphrase Dickens, 1968 was a "winter of despair." Now with a winning streak, the inevitable B.C. game looms as the "spring of hope".

REDMAN RANTINGS - Fusia was pleased with his offense that racked up over 400 yards in total yardage..."They put everything together"...Fusia also said, "We stayed with our script of alternating our quarterbacks as was done, although I was going to use Ken (Hughes) a little more"....Mike Marchev has made an early run for a starting berth a year from now as the junior was excellent in the last quarter...Vermont's Gene Monahan, who was billed as one of the east's top receivers, caught two passes for a whopping 0 yards....Bob Rodger, the Catamounts' touted sophomore running back, gained only 66 yards after averaging over 100 a game previously this season....And Vermont threw the ball only 12 times, an absurdedly few times considering they were behind throughout the game and were facing a tough rushing defense....Marchev's and Mark Russell's touchdowns were the backs first scores in a UMass uniform....Vermont had momentum once when after their score they drove deep into UMass territory....But Bill DeFlavio put an end to the foolishness with two solo attacks on Catamount quarterback Fran Peterson....It was Legislators Day at the stadium, and the erstwhile luminaries who showed up probably were stunned that they play tackle all the way out here in the woods....Most of the astute lawmakers were probably tuned to their transistors to listen to the ONLY school in the state that plays REAL football, Boston College lose again....The Eagles did lead Penn. State for a while, but then the Nittany Lions took out their cheerleaders and inserted the team and things changed....B.U. defeated Connecticut as the redoubtable Bruce Taylor returned two punts for touchdowns ....Rhode Island upset New Hampshire while Gene Benner broke two New England pass catching records as Maine outlasted Hofstra 40-34....Although Assistant Coach George Karras smuggled in champagne, the celebration was not that hysterical....They are saving themselves for the B.C. bash.

Little Redmen Fight Hard, But Lose to BC, 22-7

Last Friday night, Coach Dave Kelley's Little Redmen fought the Boston College Eaglets with aggressive, hard-hitting football, displayed a never say die attitude, while producing 150% throughout, but B.C. prevailed 22-7. The Eaglets outweighed UMass' offensive and defensive lines by ten to twenty pounds per man. This factor plus B.C.'s overall depth proved to be the margin of victory. The UMass offensive line was unable to withstand the constant pressure put on by B.C.'s defensive unit and as a result left the UMass backs virtually unprotected. The Little Redman's defense, on the other hand, stopped B.C. on almost every offensive series except for three long drives which produced the three B.C. scores.

In the first period, B.C. drove to the UMass 12 helped by a pass interference call. On the next play, fullback Dave Johnson ran five yards to the UMass 7, and then busted off-tackle for seven yards and the touchdown. The extra point was good and B.C. led, 7-0. The period ended with the UMass defense holding B.C., but the Little Redmen's offense was inconsistent.

In the second period, led by halfback Bouchard and tailback Kevin Filley, UMass drove the length of the field with Bouchard going over from the three for the score. Butkanicz kicked the extra point and the score was tied 7-7. The half ended without any further scoring.

B.C. came out fired up and immediately started a drive on the ensuing kick-off. Mixing running and passing plays, B.C. drove to the UMass 7 yd. line. Again, halfback Johnson went off-tackle for the score. The extra point was good and B.C. led again, 14-7. On the next offensive series UMass started to drive, but linebacker Ray Machelgunn intercepted on the Little Redmen's 40 yd. line. Machelgunn had three interceptions which thwarted three UMass drives. The Redman's defense stiffened and held and the third period ended without any further scoring.

In the fourth period, the Eaglets depth and size began to take its toll on the Little Redmen. Injuries to split end Steve Shubert and Filley virtually wiped out the UMass offense. Neither of the quarterbacks, Brian Murray or Len Matuza, could start any offensive drive. Constantly harassed by the B.C. defense, UMass was unable to get a first down in the fourth period. In the middle of the fourth period, B.C. again drove the length of the field and this time fullback Ed Macinsky dove over from the one. The extra point was blocked but B.C. led, 20-7. With three minutes left in the game, quarterback Matuza was caught in his end zone for a safety resulting in B.C.'s final two points.

Coach Kelley praised every member of his team for a fine effort. Though the Redmen were physically beaten they hit throughout the game and never gave up. This team was probably their best showing of the year although they thoroughly romped in their first two games. UMass has nothing to be ashamed of and B.C. knew they had been in the ball game.

Funds Must Be Raised To Open Campus Center

By MARK SILVERMAN
News Editor

The Student Union Governing Board (SUG) must decide at its meeting tomorrow night how to raise $180,000 needed to finance opening operations of the Campus Center next semester. Possibilities now being considered by the Board include a $10 hike in the Student Union Tax next semester, a cutback of services, and an increase in Union prices.

The need for the added funds, according to SUG board President Sander Ross, comes from $170,000 not budgeted for last year, but needed to fulfill the Board's agreement to raise the pay of its employees, in line with new wage guidelines inacted into law last year.

Also, Ross explained, "It takes a certain amount of money to get any new building into operation... we will face a fund deficit for a few months until revenue from the Campus Center, scheduled to open in February, starts making money."

Ross said that a complicating factor in the SUG Board's financial situation is that all Student Union tax funds are used to pay for a bond issue financing the building the campus center. Thus, the fees which students pay each semester do not cover the operation of the Student Union, but go toward the cost of building the Campus Center.

This arrangement, set up by Treasurer Johnson in 1967, forces the Union and the Campus Center to be self-supporting.

The proposed increase in student union tax, which would have to be approved by the Board of Trustees, would raise the fee from $15 to $25 next semester. Continuation of the increase beyond next semester would be voted on by the SUG Board later this year.

The Graduate Student Senate has proposed that a school-wide referendum be used to determine whether the fee increase is enacted, but Ross disapproves of this plan.

"In the first place," he said, "we (the SUG Board) are the students' elected representatives, and have the authority to make this decision ourselves."

He added, "It would take a great job of educating the student body on all aspects of this problem before a referendum could be staged, and there is a time factor if we are to act before the beginning of second semester."

The other two proposals being considered by the Board include cutting back services, and possibly raising prices in the Union Bookstore and the Hatch.

Student Senate on Trial . . .
Open House Legislation May Be Violating Policy

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Staff Reporter

The General Court of Justice, the highest student judiciary and the only one empowered to hear questions of constitutional interpretation, heard last night a suit against the Student Senate concerning its open house legislation. The suit was brought by Mr. Paul Saunders of James House and contended that the Student Senate by acting in Violation of the open house policy of the Board of Trustees exceeded its authority.

The first and only witness for the prosecution, Mrs. Hubbard, James House Head of Residence, asserted that the only authority in this matter was the Board of Trustees. She admitted on cross examination that the 1968-69 policy was generally not being enforced by her house government, and that she had taken no initiative to secure enforcement because this laissez-faire attitude had "the tacit approval of my superiors."

The defense, represented by John Shyavitz, Senate President Bruce Balboni and Senate Vice-President Cynthia Olken, contended that the Student Senate is responsible to and representative of the student body and is not a representative of the Board of Trustees, nor is it bound to enforce Trustee decisions.

Balboni noted that recent Senate legislation on the open house question represented "a significant change (regarding) to whom responsibility is felt. We will work with the Board on a number of bases, the first of which is that this (open house) is a right." He stated later in his presentation that "The attempt to foist last year's policy upon the student body is based upon incorrect assumptions."

Balboni noted that since the start of the current year, students have been operating in large numbers, officially under the enabling clause of S306, and unofficially, under their own policy, and that the enforcement of the 1968-69 policy has long since ceased to be a real possibility.

At press time, the case was still being heard. The court will deliberate and announce its decision at a later date.

Nixon Receives Support By Telephone, Telegraph

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon personally staked out a claim Tuesday that his Vietnam policy speech achieved his major goal-drawing tangible support from "the great silent majority of my fellow Americans."

Nixon, pointing to several thousand telegrams stacked on his desk, said they represented backing that could speed an end to the war.

Calling newsmen to his oval office to view the wires cluttering his desk, Nixon showed a certain pride of authorship in his television-radio talk to the nation Monday night.

Nixon announced that about half the telegrams before him came from people claiming membership in "the great silent majority."

While that phrase was not original with Nixon, he made it the centerpiece of his appeal for public support of his Vietnam policies. And he expressed delight that many telegram writers echoed it.

More than any other Nixon speech since Jan. 20, Monday's effort was his own product - the distillation of nearly a dozen drafts he wrote by hand in recent weeks on scores of lined yellow pages - the kind that lawyers use.

The President acknowledged that some who sent in telegrams advocate an immediate U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam. He held up a four-inch-thick stack of Western Union filmsies that was dwarfed by the other piles on his desk.

Equating the response to his speech with prospects for peace, he said:

"It's very important in our quest to peace to realize that the country is behind what we are trying to do. I would put it this way: that demonstration of support can have more effect on ending the war sooner than anything else."

Public backing for the administration, he declared, was more important than skillful diplomacy, training of the South Vietnamese army or military tactics.

Hicks, Lindsay Stage Political Comebacks

Republican Linwood Holton was elected governor of Virginia Tuesday night, smashing nearly a century of Democratic domination. William T. Cahill captured New Jersey's State House for the GOP. And President Nixon shared in the lustre of the party's off-year election triumphs.

The two top state-wide prizes-governorships which had been held by Democrats-both went to Republicans for whom Nixon had personally campaigned.

With these victories, the GOP will hold 32 of the nation's governorships - including those of every major industrial state. Nixon had urged Virginians a week before polling day to set an example for all the South by breaking their Democratic tradition.

John V. Lindsay, dumped in the primary by city Republicans and later adopted by many liberal Democrats, held a strong lead over two rivals last night in his drive for re-election as a Liberal-Independent.

A victory was sure to propel him back into national political speculation. His endorsement of the Oct. 15 Vietnam moratorium won him a large and enthusiastic following among young people of all parties.

Lindsay said he had always been a Republican and had no plans to change, but that as mayor he won't campaign for GOP candidates or help raise money for the party.

Mrs. Louise Day Hicks, the controversial former chairman of the Boston School committee and adamant foe of school busing to bring racial balance to the public schools, emerged last night the front runner for a seat on the Boston City Council.

Running second was Thomas I. Atkins, completing his first term as the first Negro member of the Council.

For Mrs. Hicks, it was a comeback from the defeat she received two years ago when edged out for mayor of Boston by the incumbent Kevin M. White.

Mayor Carl B. Stokes took the lead over Republican challenger Ralph J. Perk Tuesday night as returns were tallied in Cleveland's mayoral race.

In scattered Detroit returns, Sheriff Roman S. Gribbs held a slender margin over Richard F. Austin, a Negro.

Independent Democrat Peter F. Flaherty, who broke with an old fashioned party organization to run as a reformer, was elected mayor of Pittsburgh, swamping Republican John K. Tabor.

Democratic Mayor Frank A. Sedita held an early lead over a conservative Republican and a Negro poverty worker in his bid for a third term as mayor of Buffalo.

Incumbent Republican Mayor Frank H. Freedman of Springfield, Mass. was reelected Tuesday by a margin of almost 20,000 votes.

Progress Toward Goals is Point Of Planned Meeting

The Coalition to Throw the War Machine Off Campus has scheduled a meeting for this Thursday night at 7:00 in Machmer W26 to discuss the progress the group has made toward its goals. Representatives of the Coalition have been meeting with a group of administrators to formulate plans for a series of debates on war-related campus issues to be held on November 17 and 18.

The Coalition has presented as its objectives the abolition of ROTC, an end to military recruitment on campus, an end to recruitment by corporations involved in war production, and an end to all war related research on campus.

President Lederle has agreed to participate in a debate on "The War and the University". Numerous faculty and students have expressed the desire to hold debates on ROTC, war-related research, and military and industrial recruitment. The Thursday night meeting is open to the campus community.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

(AP) - Picketing at the Burlington, Vt. General Electric plant was subdued and limited Tuesday after a court order was issued in the wake of Monday's violent clash between police and strikers.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee approved Tuesday a bill to exempt joint newspaper publishing arrangements from the antitrust laws.

The vote was announced by Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., as 8 to 4, with five absent committee members to be permitted to vote later.

The bill would permit profit pooling, fixing of advertising and circulation rates, and market division under joint operating arrangements involving a failing newspaper.

The Supreme Court, in a March 10 decision, ruled that such an agreement between the Tucson, Ariz., newspapers, the Star and the Citizen, is illegal under the antitrust laws.

Similar joint publishing arrangements are in effect in 22 other cities.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Navy singled out eight more ships and two aviation units Tuesday for retirement as part of the Pentagon's effort to cut defense spending this year.

One, the destroyer U.S.S. Nicholas, is the oldest active destroyer in the Navy. It was commissioned June 4, 1942. The seven other ships, also destroyers, are all more than 24 years old.

The mothballing brings to 111 the number of ships being cut from the fleet in the economy drive. There are now 13 aviation units being disbanded.

The Navy said the new announced layups will save about $8.8 million.

Dick Tuck to Give DVP Lecture Entitled "Humor of Politics"

By RICHARD S. KLINE
Staff Reporter

Dick Tuck, who spent most of his youth making "Dick" Nixon miserable, will deliver a lecture on "The Humor of Politics" this Thursday at 8 p.m. in Thompson 104. The lecture is the second of the year sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Mr. Tuck, the man who made the New York Times front page when it was discovered that he had placed a Democratic spy on the Goldwater for President campaign train, has semi-retired to write a book on his 20 years as a frighteningly significant, but little known, figure on the political scene.

He has appeared on such shows as Johnny Carson, David Frost, and Dick Cavett to discuss how he has aided putting humor in politics. Although Mr. Tuck is primarily known as a player of tricks on "opposition", usually Republican, candidates, he is an authentic political philosopher as well, and an American phenomena.

He is an original member of the "NOW" generation having joined it 20 years before it began. Mr. Tuck has been a large part of the development of American politics and what we know today as the "New Politics."

Described as a "cunning old mastermind" by the New York Times, Mr. Tuck has been credited with numerous misadventures of Republican candidates. Active in California for years, his first major national role was with John F. Kennedy.

Bearing the brunt of Mr. Tuck's sharp barbs in 1960 was John F. Kennedy's Republican opponent Richard M. Nixon. It was Tuck who provided Kennedy with a secret tape recording of Nixon's true opinions on issues, in contrast to press releases, before the famous Nixon-Kennedy debate, enabling Kennedy to know how the then Vice-President would really answer.

A few years later when Nixon was running for Governor of California, Mr. Tuck was there. Somehow, when Richard Nixon was making a whistle stop speech campaign a man dressed as a railroad conductor signaled the train to pull out just as Mr. Nixon started speaking. On another occasion Mr. Nixon spoke in San Francisco's Chinatown in front of a large sign written in Chinese, only the word Nixon in English. The now President was quite pleased with it until someone told him what it actually said....

Mr. Tuck's adventures continue on and on from Nixon to the Goldwater spy, to aiding one of the nation's black mayors from getting cheated at the ballot box.

Dick Tuck has much to say and predict on politics yesterday, today and tomorrow. At 8 p.m. this Thursday in Thompson 104 you can hear it all.

Proposal Made to Lower Beer Drinking Age to 18

A member of the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission urged that the state lower to 18 the legal age for buying and drinking beer.

Quintin J. Cristy, a former ABC chairman, said he believes "thousands of teen-agers are illegally consuming beer or alcoholic beverages daily in our commonwealth."

He asked that, for the first time, penalties be established for young people illegally buying liquor. Now, minors may be penalized only if they lie about their age or alter a state liquor identification card.

Cristy made his suggestion in a letter sent to all legislators yesterday. He emphasized he was acting on his own, not as a member of the ABC.

Cristy said 10 states and the District of Columbia now allow 18-year-olds to consume beer. He called for a "realistic, forceful, and legal effort to resolve the problem of our youths who are consuming alcoholic beverages and beer on our highways, on the college campus, at high school graduation parties, at other social events and elsewhere."

Smith Faculty Passes Motion; Students to Schedule Own Finals

The Smith College Faculty passed a motion October 23rd, which now makes it possible for students at Smith to schedule their own final exams. Retention or rejection of the self-scheduled exam policy for 1970-71 will be contingent upon the results of a review at the end of the year.

Considerable thought went into the planning of the change. Early this month, Dean Phyllis Lehmann consulted with Jane Grant '71, chairman of Academic Honor Board, for Honor Board to prepare a report on the risks and feasibility of self-scheduled exams.

In "exploring the possible pressures which the proposal for self-scheduled exams will bring to bear on the Academic Honor System," Honor Board's evaluation looked at three "dangers" and concluded with three "advantages to the proposed system...which would outweigh the dangers involved."

"Attitudes toward learning on the Smith campus appear singularly healthy...." Thus, Honor Board argued that the "dangers" to the system can be controlled by making them well-known and by emphasizing the advantages of self-scheduling.

These dangers "arise mainly from the fact that not all students take their exams in a particular course at the same time; instead there is a possible time lag of up to four days before all students will have taken the exam, and during this time it will be the responsibility of each individual student not to discuss the exam with anyone."

Dangers include " 'accidental' cheating," that is, unintentional leakages; second, "'humanitarian' cheating," or compassionate aid; and, third, the extreme: forgery.

Yet, Honor Board emphasized the ability of the Smith community to realize and control the risks.

Furthermore, the advantages of self-scheduling touch on nothing less than the goals professed by the college. "First.....the student is due to gain in self-respect. Instead of simply preaching individual responsibility as an important ingredient in a Smith student's education, we will then be practicing individual responsibility.....

'Second, the proposed self-scheduling should go far toward eliminating the pressure of competition between classmates....The student should be able to forget her classmates during the exam and concentrate on her own individual response to the material. Thus, there is less pressure to try to cheat....

"Thirdly, the proposed self-scheduling could improve student faculty relations....the teacher wishes the student to take her exam when she feels best prepared."

Reward

By going to the Bristol and Essex Rooms of the Student Union Thursday evening you may receive a sizeable reward: You could be a major part of the 1970 INDEX.

"Hello Friend" to Present Orpheus Leader in Concert

The Hello Friend Folk Society will sponsor its first special concert this year on Monday, November 10, in Mahar Auditorium..

Hello Friend, which has presented organized folk music shows since the beginning of last year, will open its concert series with the "Two Foot Lambdoor". The group consists of Bruce Arnold, Steve Martin and Eliot Sherman.

Bruce Arnold, singer and lead guitarist, is responsible for many songs recorded by his well known group, "Orpheus". Steve Martin, also an established songwriter, has written "Congress Alley" and "Hush Shalla," both recorded by "Orpheus". Eliot Sherman is a talented pianist from the Amherst area. Admission to the concert is $.99.

As well as presenting professional talent to the UMass campus, Hello Friend continues to organize folk shows featuring on-campus talent. The next Hello Friend Folk Hoot will be held this Friday, at Hampden Dining Commons at 8:00 p.m. Persons interested in performing should call 546-7517.

The Western Massachusetts Section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will meet Wednesday, November 12, 1969, at Western New England College for a discussion of "Computer Time - Sharing and the Engineer." The speaker will be Mr. Hugh B. Calkin, Sales Representative from General Electric. The presentation will include a complete discussion of computer time-sharing and its impact on the engineering profession.

Herter Hall to be Dedicated Saturday

UMass will dedicate Christian A. Herter Hall, its newest academic building this Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The ceremony, to be held in the building, will honor former governor of Massachusetts and U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, who died in 1966.

After serving as a special assistant in the U.S. State Department in 1917 and 1918 and as secretary to the American Commission to Negotiate Peace in Paris in 1919, he became an assistant to Herbert Hoover, then director of the American Relief Administration. He was an assistant to Hoover when Hoover became Secretary of Commerce in 1921.

Mr. Herter was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 1931 to 1943 and was House speaker from 1939 to 1943. He represented the Tenth Massachusetts District in the U.S. Congress from 1943 to 1953. He was governor of the Commonwealth from 1953 to 1957, undersecretary of state from 1957 to 1959 and Secretary of State from 1959 to 1961.

Herter Hall has 35 classrooms, 175 offices, two auditoriums and language laboratories. It was occupied at the beginning of the present academic year and now houses the departments of History and Germanic, Romance and Slavic languages.

UMass President John W. Lederle will preside at the ceremony and Mr. Herter's widow, Mrs. Mary C. Herter, will unveil the decicatory plaque. The public is coordially invited.

Index to Have a New Look As a New Kind of Yearbook

By RICHARD S. KLINE
Staff Reporter

1970 marks the beginning of another century and a new era. In the eyes of Alan Marcus 1970 is the 101st year.

"I can see a new frontier just ahead," said Marcus, Editor-in-chief of the 1970 INDEX. "This is the perfect year for a new kind of yearbook - a new book with a new look for the first year of the second one hundred."

The INDEX first appeared in 1869 and has never missed a year since. That 1869 book, however, bears little resemblance to the 1969 book - only the name has remained the same.

INDEX 1869 was merely a small pamphlet with a few engravings and a few names. "We've come a long way in that century," said Marcus, "and we're aiming to go even farther."

A look at the 1869 yearbook need only be a glance. Its press run was twenty-five and copies went to all students, faculty and administrators. "The 1869 INDEX was just that - an index," says Marcus. The job of putting out that book was the major activity of the junior class; all four of them.

A prized possession handed down from INDEX editor to INDEX editor is a copy of the 1875 edition of INDEX. It, too, has no pictures (just engravings), and was again put out by the junior class which had now grown to seventeen.

Massachusetts Agricultural College, as UMass was known then was a growing institution and by the 1934 edition of INDEX was Massachusetts State College. It was in 1934 that a major editorial decision of the yearbook was reached: the seniors rather than the juniors should be featured.

The 1934 INDEX was a far different book than the first put out some fifty - nine years earlier. Group photographs were used on many of the pages, so every member of the college could be pictured.

The 1950's saw the evolution of the book into a larger and more elaborate volume. The 1960's added color photos and more emphasis on the campus as a whole and campus life during the year.

Where the book will go in the 1970's and in its second century is matter for speculation. "Bigger and better are rather worn out cliches," said Editor-in-chief Marcus, "but there's not much doubt in my mind that we're going to be both."

The format and general look of the book will be completely different than ever before. "People will be surprised at the 1970 book; to say the least," said Marcus.

"The emphasis in the 1970 book will be changed from buildings to people," promised the editor.

MIT Anti-War Demonstrators Protest Defense Research

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Defying a court order, hooting anti-war demonstrators invaded the administration building at Massachusetts Institute of Technology Tuesday, then marched to other facilities on campus.

They demanded an end to both the war in Vietnam and MIT's involvement in defense-related research.

There were no arrests. Campus police were the only law enforcement officers in evidence.

About 1,000 of the demonstrators went to the Instrumentation Laboratories, which are just outside the MIT campus property, but they made no attempt to enter the buildings.

Chanting and waving a 10-foot NLF banner, the demonstrators demanded through a loudspeaker system that work be halted on the Poseidon missile guidance system.

After a short time, the demonstrators returned to the plaza outside the Student Center to listen to more speeches.

Most of MIT's 6,000 enrollment ignored the demonstrations. Classes were conducted normally.

The protest, led by a goup which calls itself the November Action Coalition, began about noon with a mass rally at MIT's Kresge Plaza.

Then, shouting, "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh, the NLF is bound to win," the protestors marched through a light rain to the administration building.

They surged through the building's first-floor corridors for about 10 minutes, then the majority spilled back outside and trekked four blocks to MIT's Center for International Studies. Others jammed a corridor on the second floor outside the office of MIT President Howard W. Johnson.

Later, the demonstrators rallied again in a rotunda in the administration building and, on a voice vote, decided not to seize Johnson's office. They decided instead to march on the Instrumentation Laboratory.

No attempt was made to invade the Center for International Studies. It was ordered closed earlier by the administration.

"Because of the risk of violence and the nature of the threats that have been made against some of the people whose offices are in the building, we felt the wisest course was to close it," said Prof. Paul E. Gray, associate provost.

On at least two occasions during the afternoon the demonstrators were read copies of the court order, which the administration obtained Monday and which barred the protestors from disrupting Institute routine. They were told that violation of the order would lead to arrest.

Lecture by Barnard will Honor Poet Robinson 100th Anniversary

The 100th anniversary of the birth of American poet Edward Arlington Robinson will be observed at UMass with a lecture by Dr. Ellsworth Barnard of the UMass English department faculty Thursday, Nov. 6, at 8 p.m. in Herter 227, open to the public without charge.

Dr. Barnard is professor of English at the University and author of two books on Robinson, one published in 1952 and the other scheduled for publication this December. His other books include a study of Shelley and a biography of Wendell Willkie.

Dr. Barnard was awarded an honorary UMass degree at commencement last June and has had a distinguished career as a teacher of American literature and romantic poetry. He has served on faculties at Williams and Bowdoin Colleges, the University of Chicago and Alfred University, where he was chairman of the English department for 10 years.

Arts and Sciences Curriculum Changes

By RICHARD W. STORY
Special to the MDC

The Arts and Sciences faculty vote on curriculum change, reported in Monday's MDC, has real and IMMEDIATE impact upon ALL students in the College. The changed College requirements approved by the faculty vote are in effect NOW, according to a spokesman in the Dean's office.

In brief, what the new requirements do is to bring the College's set of core and distribution requirements more into line with the previously - existing University core. Here, in precise prose form, are the terms of the new College requirements (approved, as an interim step in curriculum change, by a vote of 431 to 41).

1. 120 credits over-all, exclusive of required Physical Education.

2. A basic proficiency or experience with written or spoken English representing at least 6 credits in either the courses English 111-112 along with one of the Speech courses 101, 105, 107 or 150; or a rhetoric program subsequently approved.

3. For the B.A. and B.S. degrees, a basic proficiency or experience with foreign language as demonstrated by, (a) completion of a foreign language course at the college fourth semester level, or (b) a satisfactory performance on an achievement or placement test, or (c) four entrance units (years) in one foreign language or three units in one and two units in another foreign language, or (d) a year in a school in which English is not the language of instruction, or (e) an approved substitution of language-related study if there is clearly demonstrated difficulty in language study.

4. One of the pairs of literature courses approved for core requirements "C" and, in addition: (a) two courses from the "C" group for the B.A. degree, or (b) one course from the "C" group for the other degrees. The approved pairs of courses are: English 125-126, Engl 127-128, Engl 135-136, Engl 151-152, Engl 153-154, Comparative Literature 201-203, Comp Lit 201-204, Comp Lit 202-203, Comp Lit 202-204, French 161-162, Italian 161-162, German 277-278, Russian 251-252, or Spanish 161-262. (Ie., four courses total for the B.A.)

5. Three courses in the "D" group chosen from at least two departments; one additional course from the behavioral and social science group for the B.A. degree (i.e. four courses total for the B.A.).

6. Four courses from the "E" group, and from at least two of these groups of disciplines: (a) logic, mathematics and statistics, (b) botany, entomology, microbiology and zoology, (c) astronomy, chemistry, geology and physics. (Note: the reduction in the size of the science/mathematics requirements seems to be the one of most particular interest to students at the moment.)

In addition to these core and distribution requirements, the last item in the new curriculum requires that the student have an "approved major program" of the college. At the moment, "approved major program" means one of the familiar departmental majors. However, it is hoped that before very much longer new varieties of major programs will be developed. If this were to happen, students would then have the option, possibly, of following an issue-centered major, or even a custom-made major program. There is a great deal of potential inherent in this provision.

The wording of some of the specifications above may not be clear to all students; if you have any questions at all about the new College requirements, the best advice as to one's standing may be obtained from the CASIAC office on the second floor of South College, door "A"

The set of requirements outlined above is in effect right now, the Dean's office states; and students who are in the College are now eligible to apply these revised standards to their academic records. Even though the possibility is strong that the College will change requirements again within the next year, none of the possible new curricula are any more restrictive than the provisions above; and no student will go wrong in following these College graduation requirements.

Key Points of Difference In Old and New Requirements

To help students place the revised College of Arts and Sciences requirements into perspective against the old requirements, the following are the key points of difference between the old and the new core and distribution specifications.

The over-all graduation requirement is unchanged from its value of 120 credits. The composition/ speech requirement is unchanged from that voted by the faculty one year ago - at that time options for the satisfaction of the requirement were introduced; and, now, more than half of the entering freshmen in the College have found themselves exempt from language. The options to English 125-126 are not new - they were approved earlier. The additional general humanities/fine arts requirement is cut to 6 (more) credits for B.A. students, and 3 more credits for all other degrees.

This is a 6-credit reduction for B.A. students and a 9-credit reduction for B.S. students. The social science requirement is loosened slightly in that the specification that so many credits be lower-level and so many be upper-level is eliminated. The science/math requirement is cut to 12 credits for B.A. students (a reduction of 6 credits); and the requirement that so much be in the same departments, and so forth, is eliminated. The potential for very different sorts of major programs now exists.

Further curriculum change is in the offing in the College. The Dean's office is preparing a run-off ballot, to be circulated to all College faculty, asking for a choice between the Curriculum Committee proposal and the Quint-Hanke proposal. The winner of this run-off will be matched against the "June proposal" in a second later run-off, to determine which is to be presented for later adoption as a more final curriculum for the college.

There will be an open question session for College faculty and students this Thursday evening, 6 November, at which any questions about the Quint-Hanke proposal, or the Curriculum Committee proposal, will be answered. The time and location of this meeting will be announced shortly.

Address: Better Unsaid

President Nixon in his address of Monday evening rejected any plans for an immediate pull-out of American troops, and instead instituted his 'secret plan' which is really no departure from what he has been doing all along.

It would seem that Nixon could have saved himself the trouble of addressing the nation and interrupting Elvis Presley and Doris Day to tell the people essentially nothing. His plan in effect offers the North Vietnamese nothing and the American people even less. His 'secret plan' is nothing more or less than more of the same.

The President in his speech said that he was not taking the easy way but the hard way to peace. What he meant was that he does not want the American people to regret a peace abruptly arrived at. It seems to us that Nixon has his priorities a little mixed up to say the least. What the vast majority of people are calling for is not an honorable peace, not a just peace, but just plain ordinary PEACE. Nixon would have us hold up peace for something as mundane as honor. Who in the hell needs honor when American lives are its price. What great honor does a mother obtain when she receives the telegram telling her that her son has just been sacrificed for honor's sake.

The President also said that the American people are "a do-it-yourself people. . ." "Instead of teaching someone else to do the job, we like to do it ourselves." What Nixon is saying here is essentially that Americans would rather do other people's killing for them than to have them do it for themselves. Anyway it seems that we have a better heritage as far as this is concerned than most other "civilized" people.

Nixon also made an obvious appeal to the "silent majority" to back him in this, his "new policy" as opposed to the "effete corps of impudent snobs" who are striving for peace, real peace. We guess that it is about time that he did ask the American people for their support, for up to this time it didn't seem to matter to him if they did or not. It now seems to be a reality that there does exist in America another two societies, separate and unequal; one striving for peace at any cost (honor, justice, etc.) and the other calling for peace and honor and victory at all costs. Yes, Nixon has addressed the nation and like his running mate, Spiro, it would have been better if he had just kept his mouth shut and gone on with what he was going to do anyway.

W.A.S.P. Down Our Throats

The President of the United States is an ass-hole. Fact. The speech he made Monday night is more of the same shit he's been trying to force down our throats. Fact.

For any person to believe that Communism is a monolithic force that is bent to destroy us is naive. For the President of the United States to believe this is tragic. He stated that the United States will not accept defeat and will not be humiliated. This I cannot take.

I have always hated Richard Nixon because he represented the sterile, patriotic, White Anglo-Saxon Protestant, and his speech only serves to intensify my hatred.

It's obvious he doesn't realize we cannot possibly win in Vietnam. The North Vietnamese are winning the war on all fronts, militarily, psychologically, propaganda, and public opinion. They are not about to concede a damn thing to the United States.

There is no "new" Nixon. He is the same old bastard. He still thinks America will never lose a war, he still thinks the commies are out to take over the world, he still bathes in the glorious mud of overt patriotism, he still has no soul, no compassion and no sense.

Nixon can't stand being the first President to lose a war and that is why we are not getting out of Vietnam.

I'm just so fed up with Nixon and all his Strom Thurmonds, his W.A.S.P. America, and his goddamn face, that words cannot convey my feelings.

Agnew for President!!

Reviews: An Insult to Intelligence

To The Editors:

The Daily Collegian music review of November 3, "Led Zepplin (sic) II" WITHIN YOU OR WITHOUT YOU is an insult to the intelligence of even the most casual rock music follower.

One of the hazards of being a rock fan is being bombarded by the pretentious, mindless drivel that flows from that vilest of all artistic parasites, the rock critic. In my long search to find a tasteful, intelligent album review, none has brought me to the brink of nausea more rapidly than that of your "phantom critic".

Just for openers, he could have at least spelled the name of the group correctly (assuming it is his error and not the typesetter's).

To the best of my knowledge (which with regard to Led Zeppelin in general and Jimmy Page in particular is relatively extensive) neither they nor he ever performed a song entitled "Summer Lightening".

I will assume, therefore, that Mr. X refers to the semi-legendary "White Summer" which, after witnessing its performance live on two occasions, I can assure Mr. X, finds Robert Plant and John Paul Jones leaving the stage entirely and not joining in to demonstrate "the oneness and tightness that Zepplin (sic) plays with".

As to the discussion of Page and Plant being sexual or asexual, I would have to ask Mr. X to elaborate on this, perhaps the most inane of all his points. Perhaps he could begin by explaining what in God's name he means when he says that Jones' playing has no "vegetable-like characteristics?"

Finally, one must assume that the absurd discussion of the album cover was a misguided attempt to launch a McCartneyesque mystery ("Is Robert Plant a female impersonator?" or perhaps, "Is John Paul Jones really twins?"

In conclusion, one can only hope that the lack of a byline on this non-review indicates its author was perhaps a malfunctioning computer, but more realistically, one prays that future reviews will at least be well researched and less obscure than "Led Zepplin II" WITHIN YOU OR WITHOUT YOU.

Peace: A Question of Rationale

To The Editor:

Though not completely supporting the position of those 12 students whose letter appeared in the Collegian of Oct. 31st., we do agree with them on one major point; that of the allocation of $10,000 to cover 50% of the cost to transport a group of undergraduate students to Washington, D.C. for the Nov. 15th Moratorium march.

We seriously question the rationale of the Student Senate action of Oct. 30th. (since invalidated) in appropriating this money for this purpose. How can the student body as an entity, be logically taxed to send a limited number of INDIVIDUALS to participate in an action, when it is not known if the student body in general supports it. This violates the taxation principle of tax funds for general use of the entire student body, not just for a certain group or individuals.

Concerning Mr. Rosenthal's comment of Nov. 3rd., that a precedent had been set in the case of the CCEBS program, we disagree. The CCEBS program is a scholarship-type program where the individual is given a helping grant in accordance with his/her financial means. It is also not wholly student funded. The only clear precedent that has been set was set last spring when a bill for funds for the Spring Mobilization was defeated, mainly on the grounds that it was not with the support of the general student body.

Would the Student Senate appropriate funds for a group of students to go to Washington to Voice support for the Administration's policies? Would it appropriate funds for ALL 18,000 students to go, if they so wished? We seriously doubt it. Therefore we urge each student to let your senator know how you feel on this issue and get him/her to vote against this bill when it comes to the Senate floor on Wed. night. Do not let a precedent of this sort be set.

We also urge each student, if the Senate appropriates this funding, to join us in refusing to pay the student tax on the spring semester bill, as evidence of our disagreement with the Student Senate's use of the student tax fund for other than general student body use.

Index Cut: Aesthetically Pleasing

To The Editor:

I would like to express my disgust and dismay on the outcome of the recent Index budget crisis before the Senate. I am sure that if the students of this University fully realized what, this Senate refusal to appropriate new funds, has and will do to the quality of this year's Index, they would have expressed this concern to their respective Senator more fully.

Many people feel that a yearbook is like a souvenir for Seniors. This is not true of the Index, for it covers the activities of all classes and the pictures represent all students of the University, not just Seniors. The yearbook records the events and atmosphere of the year for every student in an esthetically pleasing manner. It is a shame that the Senate refusal of these needed funds has cut down the quality and the coverage of our yearbook.

Moratorium: Emotional Lark?

To The Editor:

The letter in Friday's Collegian entitled "Moratorium" was appalling!

The letter states that the only purpose of the Moratorium and subsequent anti-war activities was to "...further the excite emotionalism and widen the communications rift between the establishment and the anti's." The letter-writers are either totally ignorant of the Vietnam war which has wasted over 46,000 American lives, or they consider this war to be of such a trivial nature that it deserves no serious public notice.

Then there is the statement that "...the Moratorium was used as an excuse to take pot shots at our lame duck President because he did not shut down the University." I'm sure that the participants in the Moratorium, many of whom were responsible, respectable middle-class citizens, would be amazed to know that they were part of a giant conspiracy to persecute poor John Lederle.

I wonder what sitting for over twenty hours round trip on a cattle-car like train should be considered? If this is a lark then it would be interesting to find out what the letter-writers consider "....sacrifice or personal hardship."

I have to agree, however, that priorities have been forgotten. I personally heard one of the signers of the letter express annoyance at the Senate's "train appropriation" after its earlier denial of monies for -- something obviously more important -- the Index!

ROBERT BRILL

As I See It: Open House

By JOHN DUBOIS

Seldom have representative bodies been as guilty of such ludicrous disregard for honesty, and of such a distorted view of political as well as grassroots reality as the area governments of Orchard Hill, Northeast and Central areas have been on the issue of open house. It is quite apparent to anyone at all au courant of administrative attitude that, come what may, action suppressing the current campus-wide state of disobedience of last year's absurd open house policy is simply not going to be taken. There is a general realization at all levels of the administration that the residence hall staff is patently unwilling to police the policy; that students simply refuse to enforce the policy upon themselves; that house governments and the Senate recognize both the futility and the absurdity of enforcement; and that the only other alternative, policing the residence halls with security guards and police, would be grossly counterproductive, to say the least.

Against this background, the action of the area three governments is nearly inexplicable. I say nearly, because all have been the victim of gross misinformation (none sought high-level Senate representation at their meetings); and at least one has taken advantage of the situation to attempt to generally undermine the Senate, for no other purpose than the enhancement of their own power. This situation is unfortunate, for these actions (refusing in varying degrees to support the Senate stand of immediate residence hall self-determination on open house) may encourage the Board of Trustees to believe that when the Senate strongly endorses, as it has, the cardinal principle of student control over their own lives (in open house as well as other areas), they are not speaking for the campus. These three area governments have therefore done a grave disservice to their constituents. Self-determination is an idea whose time has clearly come, and is in fact, long overdue. It was a position that the Senate first articulated two and one-half years ago, and has consistently fought for ever since. If the Trustees are in fact convinced that there are sufficient faint hearts on campus to allow them to impose something less than complete and immediate self-determination, then the students may justly assign the blame to these three area governments.

The action last night of the Southwest Assembly, the only area government which had not spoken, will hopefully clear the air and leave no doubt in the mind of the Board as to broadbased student support for the Senate's position. The motion, passed unanimously after a presentation by Senate president Balboni, reads in part: "Whereas, the recent controversy over open housing has raised serious issues of student rights and administrative control, . . . the Southwest Assembly fully supports the right of student self-determination and dorm autonomy and, therefore, the Assembly supports fully Student Senate bills S53, S54, and S306." (Linde) This action may now clear the air, and will undoubtedly give a great boost to the efforts of the Senate officers at the upcoming Board of Trustees meeting.

The Senate in approving the above-mentioned bills is guilty of one thing, and one thing only: an excess of honesty. They told it exactly as it was, much toth exactly as it was, much to the dismay of an administration which would have been content to ride the hypocritical pretense that last year's policy would continue to be in effect until the Board said otherwise. (For those who are wondering, you may entertain a guest of the opposite sex from 3-10 p.m. Monday to Thursday, noon to 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and noon to midnight Sunday, after having signed her/him in at the main desk.) The Senate was simply unwilling to implicate itself in this hypocrisy for one day or seven weeks, and rightly so. The three area governments appear to have been more than willing; indeed, they grasped the opportunity with an attitude that bordered on eagerness.

One wonders whether the residence halls and their governments will realize the underlying challenge presented to them by the area government actions: the policy which the Senate has for a number of years consistently supported was and is one of residence hall self-determination. There is no room in that concept for interference by area governments, and once the Senate wins a formal grant of self-determination, it will be interesting to see whether the area government (to whom the Senate has had no intention of delegating open house authority) pursue their recent assertions that it has some sort of legitimate interest in this area by an attempt to in some way regulate the houses. The area governments of the Hill, Central, and Northeast areas need to be immediately notified by the residence halls that the Senate's policy of residence hall self-determination in this matter allows no room for interference from the intermediate level.

What will be the ultimate outcome of all this? Hopefully, the vast majority of students will find the courage to say with their actions, that, in the words of Senate bill S54 "this question and other questions relative to social regulation of students' lives are and ought to be outside the jurisdiction of the Board of Trustees, and are and ought to be exclusively the concern of the student and his elected governing agencies, with the advice and assistance of the student personnel (staff)." By failing to support that position,

Home Ec Ass't Professor Voted Food Council Pres.

Mrs. Jane F. McCullough, assistant professor of home economics at UMass has been elected president of the Massachusetts Food Service Educational Council.

Made up of food service industry organizations, the Massachusetts Food Service Council has as its major purpose the encouragement and support of educational opportunities for people in the industry. It conducts annually, in cooperation with the University, the annual Food Management Seminar, held in January in Amherst and also awards scholarships and supports and conducts other educational programs and activities.

Charles E. Eshbach, associate professor in the UMass department of hotel and restaurant administration, was elected treasurer.

Mrs. McCullough is a native of Ohio with bachelor and master's degrees from Ohio University. She also did graduate work at Oklahoma and Cornell Universities. She came to the University in 1954, and teaches quantity food and service courses in the School of Home Economics' department of food and nutrition to home economics and hotel and restaurant administration students.

Mrs. McCullough has been food service director at St. Joseph's College in Indiana and at Douglas Aircraft Co. in Oklahoma, and served also as a member of the Ohio University staff. She has been consultant for numerous food firms and food service organizations, is a member of the American Dietetics Association, the Society for the Advancement of Food Service Research, and Phi Tau Sigma.

She is past president and currently a trustee of the Western Massachusetts Branch of the Food Service Executives Association; and last year was chairman of the 16th annual Food Management Seminar of the Massachusetts Food Service Educational Council.

The Council is made up of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, Massachusetts Hotel - Motel Association, New England Club Managers Association, Massachusetts Dietetics Association, Boston and Western Massachusetts branches of the Food Services Executives Association, Massachusetts School Food Service Association, and the Epicurean Club of Boston.

Hampshire College. Experimental Liberal Arts College

By BLENDA WOODARD
Smith '73

Within the old farmhouse, barn and partially constructed modernistic buildings of Hampshire College, a new experimental liberal arts school is evolving.

Opening for students in 1970, it is "intended to be a national pilot enterprise for innovation of quality in American higher education." Hampshire, an independent coed college, was developed through the initiative of faculty and administrative leaders of Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith and the University of Massachusetts. Its founding in 1965 resulted from preparation begun in 1958.

Hampshire plans to admit 250 students, both men and women, in 1970. By 1975, a student body of approximately 1500 is expected, and this may expand in time to 3600 students. The college owns 500 acres of land in Amherst and Hadley. Construction of the first academic building, the residential and dining unit, and the Hampshire College library has begun.

Non-conventional

The academic program at Hampshire differs from conventional procedures in several ways. The departmental system will be replaced by a three-school academic structure. Students will work within a flexible time schedule of three sequential divisions rather than the freshman through senior sequence. Also, comprehensive exams and independent research will replace fixed course credits as graduation requirements.

Although new and innovative, Hampshire's academic program will be closely related to those of Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith and UMass. Hampshire students will participate equally with others in five-college cooperation.

Three-school structure

Students will begin their college education with involvement in each of the three schools: humanities and arts, natural science, and social science. Before they graduate they will have had intense experience in at least one of the divisions. Students will move through the divisions of study at their own rate. A comprehensive exam will determine if a student is ready to enter the next division.

INCREASED SPECIALIZATION

Division I will be an introduction to the three schools of the college and to the intentions of a liberal education. In division II students will concentrate in one of the schools. They will study a single discipline more closely. Advanced studies in the chosen discipline and also related studies in other fields constitute division III.

No course will be required and no set course credits will be needed to graduate. The only stated requirements for graduation from Hampshire are that the student pass a set of examinations for each division and complete an advanced study or project. Exams will be graded on a distinction-past-fail basis.

Students will move through the sequence at their own rates. Some may take two or three years, while others may, with off-campus studies, take from five to six years to graduate.

Utilization of field experience in connection with course work will be encouraged. Students will be allowed time either before or during college for extended leaves for travel, work periods, independent research and community service. These will be stressed, especially after a student's first year.

Involvement in business, government, Peace Corps work, the poverty program military service and other fields is considered an important part of education at Hampshire.

The flexibility of the academic program allows for a break between high school and college for those student who can benefit by it. A "guaranteed holdover admission" policy has been established for those students who wish to wait for a year before beginning study at Hampshire College. This free year could be spent in travel, study in a foreign country, or a full-time job.

Delayed residence year

Another possibility available is the "delayed residence year." Beginning in the spring of 1970, Hampshire will accept a limited number of students who wish to begin their education off campus.

The student would submit to the college a projected schedule of work and study. Throughout the year he would be responsible for progress reports and be subject to review and evaluation by his faculty advisor. Upon successful completion, he would receive full credit for his study.

The new academic system at Hampshire is combined with a housing plan of living and learning together. It is hoped that "students and faculty alike will see themselves as a part of a common enterprise in which all have a stake and a continuing part."

The College is divided into Houses, units containing from 250 to 300 students. The House unit will be the means through which its members participate in the life of the college. The Houses will regulate their own internal affairs.

Each complex has its own living, dining, and academic facilities. The first house, now under construction, is Merrill House, named in honor of the late Charles E. Merrill, who left a $1 million gift to the college.

Single rooms

Work has also begun on Hampshire's second residential building. The proposed 296-student building will be adjacent to Merrill House. Between 80 and 90 percent of the students in these Houses will dwell in single, sound-proof rooms.

The four-story structure of House II will be divided into seven "cottages," with an average of 12 students living on each floor.

Each House will have in residence, a senior professor who will serve as Master. He and a Proctor, his full-time assistant, will be an important part of the House community. Professors with offices in the academic building will be faculty fellows to the House.

The academic building, which will be adjacent to the residence of the Master, will contain faculty offices and classroom space. Audio-visual facilities will be available in each classroom to be used by the classes and also in evaluating the professors.

Five-story library

Hampshire's library will serve as the center of college life and bring together the various Houses. The five-story building will include a book library, bookstore, display gallery, post office and computing center. The design of the building offers flexibility for "innovation and experimentation."

Two-thirds of the available space in the library will be for conventional library services. The stacks will be open with space for 210,000 volumes, 50,000 micro-forms, 600 current periodicals and 10,000 non-profit items.

Processing and cataloging will be done by a commerical firm. As automation of the cataloging becomes feasible, the library catalog will be combined with the bookstore inventory, giving the student the opportunity to buy or borrow.

Exhibitions of paintings, rare books, films, sculpture and kinetic art will be possible in the display gallery. The central area of the gallery will rise three stories with one-story alcoves running around the gallery's outer edge.

The lower two floors of the library will house television and film studios, photographic workshops, computer space, and duplicating services. These features comprise the INTRAN (information transfer experimental) center.

The center will aid in the application of technology to education. It will serve to link the library to student rooms, classrooms, faculty offices and administrative facilities. It will coordinate campus use of closed- and open-circuit television and radio, and will provide access to remote computer programs and data.

Through its innovative features, Hampshire College hopes "to overcome a dichotomy between the academic and the real life." Students are sought who are believed to "have potential for making a creative difference in the world."

The planning for the college is described the THE MAKING OF A COLLEGE by Franklin Patterson, president, and Charles R. Longsworth, vice-president, of Hampshire College.

Harold F. Johnson, an Amherst alumnus, pledged $6 million to the creation of the new college. In addition to his gift, the Ford Foundation has given Hampshire a $3 million grant on a two-for-one matching basis. This is the largest Ford Foundation grant ever awarded a college and the only one given to a college not yet accepting students.

$3600 tuition

The college has also received three major construction grants of $750,000 each, a college housing loan of $1,670,000, and several research grants from the Federal Government. The comprehensive fee for room, board, tuition, and fees will be approximately $3600. Some financial awards will be available.

Concert artists Zara Nelsova and Grant Johannesen who are spending a two day residency at UMass this week and appearing in their last Bowker Auditorium concert tonight at 8:00 p.m. will be featured in several informal meetings with students and faculty this afternoon.

At 12:15 p.m. this afternoon, each of these distinguished artists has agreed to spend a one-hour meeting with students and faculty interested in their particular instrument. In the case of Miss Nelsova, cello enthusiasts will meet in Room #231 Herter Hall. At the same hour, Mr. Johannesen will meet those interested in the piano in Room #227 in Herter Hall. Following these individual meetings, the Concert Association will host an informal coffee hour at 1:30 p.m. in the Lounge, Memorial Hall so that everyone will have an opportunity to meet the Johannesen's. This duo will conclude their stay at UMass tonight with a joint recital in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. which will include performances of cello-piano sonatas by Beethoven, Hindemith and Franck.

Single reserved tickets for this concert are priced at just $1.00 for UMass undergrads; $2.00 for UMass grad students, faculty, staff and other students and $3.00 for the general public.

Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall until 4:00 p.m. and from 6:00 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium Box Office.

Guess who Gets the Flying Fickle Finger of Fate Award?

Glass Onion Comes To S.U. Ballroom

One of the most successful events to hit the University campus in the past year has been the Glass Onion, sponsored by the Southwest Patriots. The concept behind the Glass Onion is to provide students with a place to gather and meet and enjoy some good entertainment. It mixes rock, folk, jazz, people, food, and a lightshow in a nightclub atmosphere complete with waitresses and a cigarette girl.

The Glass Onion has been held about once a month in Berkshire Commons in Southwest since last February and has enjoyed remarkable success. It has, almost without exception, played to standing room only audiences. This Friday, the Onion moves into the Student Union Ballroom in an effort to provide the maximum opportunity for everyone's enjoyment.

This Friday night's show features three top entertainers. Headlining the bill is BOLD, just recently returned from recording session in New York. Their first album will be released shortly after January 1st by ABC Records. From Brown University, the Onion will be bringing in, for a third appearance on campus, the Jaberwocks, a ten man troupe who specialize in everything from folk to rock to the ridiculous. Their expert talent and wit is something that should not be missed. On the folk scene, Kevin MacIsaac will be playing folk guitar and piano, ably accompanied by Steve Comolli on bass. Kevin has written most of his own material and is presently recording for Mercury records.

In addition, the usual fine menu offering drinks and refreshments has been expanded to include more specialty items. Hot fudge and fresh strawberry sundaes, floats, social mixers, and bagels and cream cheese are just a few of the entries.

Another new innovation at the Onion is that tickets may be purchased in advance at the Student Union Box Office anytime this week. Table reservations may also be made at the same time to insure front row tables for a truly great combination of entertainment and refreshments.

Vietnam

The events of today will be a memory tomorrow. This memory will be documented by the 1970 INDEX and you can decide what should be there to look back at.

This Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Bristol and Essex Rooms of the Student Union the INDEX will have their major staff and recruitment meeting of the year. Drop in - what have you got to lose?

Precisionettes in Step For Increased Activity

On Sunday evening, October 26, 33 UMass coeds, members of Precisionettes, the university's women's drill team, held a homemade cookie sale in several campus dorms. Despite a few mishaps, one broken refrigerator and countless burnt cookies, all was successful as eager eaters bought every cookie.

At the Pittsfield Halloween Parade on Friday, October 31, cleverly costumed as Precisionettes, the girls performed to the great joy of all skeletons, lions and tigers, pirates, and assorted spooks that had gathered for the event.

Last Saturday brought the climax of weeks of practice for the team. Under the leadership of Linda Wisniowski, in charge of creating each of the team's many routines, 24 girls put on a half-time performance at the UMass-UVM football game.

For their final performance of the 1969 season, the Precisionettes will travel to Norwich University in Northfield, Vermont this weekend. This is the second year in a row they have been invited to perform and participate as special guests in the university's regimental weekend.

Nixon Rapped By Sen. Doves

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sens. J. W. Fulbright and Mike Mansfield called Tuesday for early hearings by the Foreign Relations Committee on President Nixon's Vietnam policies. Democratic doves and some Republicans criticized the lack of any presidential word on further troop withdrawals.

"He now has fully and truthfully taken on himself the Johnson war, and I think it is a fundamental error," Fulbright told reporters.

Young People's Socialist League Holds First Meeting

The UMass chapter of the Young People's Socialist League (YPSL) held its first membership meeting last night in the Student Union. Plans were discussed for bringing Michael Harrington, author of THE OTHER AMERICA and Pen Kembel, National Secretary of the Socialist Party, to campus as speakers.

The group also considered plans for support of the upcoming Vietnam Moratorium, and held discussion on such topics as the tenants' union, the Holyoke welfare rights organization, and the UMass local of the AFT.

Membership meetings will be held once a month. An open meeting is planned for Tuesday, November 11, at 8:00 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union.

People interested in joining YPSL should contact Chairman Shawne Hutcheson. The organization began in 1966 and is now operating on a National level.

Flying Redmen Trick Squad Place First in Competition

"Banjo Squad", led by Robert Bartlett, became the number one trick squad of the Flying Redmen Drill Team last Saturday in the first Inter-squad Drill Competition the Flying Redmen have entered this year.

"Puff's Squad", led by David Opatka, placed second with 68 points out of a possible 90, and "Pidgeon's Squad", led by Larry Pidgeon, placed third with 58 points. Banjo Squad won with 72 points.

The Flying Redmen under the command of Ronald Desjardins and Drill Instructor Ralph Owen, became the Number One Trick Drill Team in New England by beating Northeastern University last year. They are defending this title with a new, promising sixteen man drill team.

In a surprise move, the Flying Redmen have completed their plan of becoming an all-university drill team by voting out their two military advisors and voting in Professor G. Putnam Barber (Soc.) as their new advisor.

This Saturday, during half-time of the Freshman football game in Alumni Stadium, the Flying Redmen Drill Team will perform old and new trick routines created over the past three years. On Nov. 11, they will march in the Worcester Veterans Parade, their first off-campus appearance as an all-university civilian drill team.

the only thing that the three area government succeeded in doing was to jeopardize the success of that policy, and earn a good deal of ill will, both within the student Senate and within the student body at large.

In the end, the whole matter is not a question of whether residence halls will go their own way on visitation, for they have already done that; it is not a question of whether the Board of Trustees can limit visitation privileges beyond those limits that students choose to impose upon themselves, for the Board, short of creating a police state, does not ha0e the means at its disposal; it is not a question of the Senate creating a confrontation with the Board of Trustees over this question, for the Senate did nothing more than describe the situation as it existed, asserting at the same time that this was the way that it ought to be, that this and similar questions "are and ought to be exclusively the concern of the student and his elected governing agencies"; it is, however, quite clearly a question of simple honesty. The Senate had the courage to tell it like it is; it has nothing to regret, be ashamed of, or retract. I am hopeful and confident that this Senate will continue to act in a similar manner, on all the questions it considers this year. Further, I am hopeful, and confident, that the Senate will receive from the student body that support that it so well deserves.

Hard Luck UMass Booters Meet Rugged Springfield

Chiefs Third in N.E. Injuries Plaguing UM

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

After two tough one-point losses to Worcester Tech, 2-1, and Vermont, 3-2, the UMass soccer team travels to Springfield College today for a 2:30 encounter with the 9-1-1 Chiefs who are ranked third in New England and 13th in the nation.

The Redmen will put their 4-4 record on the line against a Springfield team which is riding an eight game winning streak and which has lost but one game in two years.

Springfield was undefeated last year after sporting an excellent 14-0-1 mark. UMass head coach Peter Broaca considers the '69 Chiefs, led by star senior Paul LeSeur to be the second best team in New England next to Harvard. He puts them a notch ahead of Bridgeport, which is currently ranked second behind number one Harvard.

When asked if he anticipates a letdown against Springfield after two very close defeats, coach Broaca warned, "If we do have a letdown, we'll get murdered." However he immediately assured, "I don't think we'll have a letdown."

The coach took time out to praise his team's effort in its losing cause to Vermont, a game in which the Catamounts captured the Yankee Conference soccer title. "I'm very pleased, we did a good job," he stated. "We got a real good effort out of our kids."

The Redmen had entered this contest with a young team that lacked the experience present on the all-senior Vermont squad. Broaca felt that this fact gave UVM an edge,particularly in the fourth period when the visitors tallied two goals to win the vital match.

UMass was also hampered in this fray by a considerable list of injuries which slowed key performers such as Augie Calheno, Lindo Alves, Dick McCarron, Joe Cernawski, Marc Cantor and Rick Matuszczak.

Matuszczak, in particular, was not up to par. The junior co-captain means a lot to the team but a broken nose forced him to employ a facemask which impaired his vision and limited his effectiveness.

With these factors against them, the Redmen almost pulled off an upset due to a fine team effort and outstanding individual contributions on the parts of Calheno, Duane Brown and Tom Malone. The latter, in the words of Broaca, "was sensational".

Malone, the UMass goalie, was under unusual pressure in the closing moments of the affair when the Redman defense was tiring out and the Catamounts were firing shot after shot at the home goal. With a few minutes to go they finally penetrated Malone for their third point and the Conference title.

Coach Broaca reiterated, "The whole team did a good job." On behalf of the Catamounts, he commented, "They deserve it (the title). We had a shot at it but they beat us."

Thus, with a 4-4 record, UMass prepares for its encounter with the powerful Chiefs. In the true spirit of competition Broaca states, "We're anxious to play Springfield. We're anxious to see what we can do."

To Attend: All sports staffers and prospective candidates.

MacLean Conf. Star, Stats Released

UMass line-backer John Mac Lean, Maine split end Gene Benner and Rhode Island quarterback Bob Ehrhardt (Flushing, N.Y.)have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

Benner, a 6' 187-lb. senior, set single-game New England University Division records with 13 receptions for 215 yards in Maine's 40-34 win over Hofstra. Benner caught toughdown passes of 35 and 6 yards as Maine made its record 4-3.

MacLean, a 5'10 205-lb. senior, made 11 tackles and twice caught runners for losses as UMass won the Yankee Conference championship with a 48-7 decision over Vermont. MacLean called the defensive signals as UMass held the opposition to one touchdown for the fourth straight week.

Ehrhardt, a 6'1 180-lb. sophomore, completed 12 of 26 passes for 136 yards and ran for two touchdowns as Rhode Island came from behind to to tip New Hampshire 14-6 in a Conference game.

Other nominations were: Offense - halfback Vin Clements (Connecticut), halfback Dick Narcessian (Rhode Island), fullback Peter Clifford (Vermont), halfback Chip Breault (New Hampshire) and tight end Nick McGarry (Massachusetts; Defense - middle guard Phil Doran (Connecticut), linebacker Mark Richardson (Maine), cornerback Doug Randall (Rhode Island), linebacker Kevin Lynch (Vermont) and linebacker Dick Gordon (New Hampshire); Sophomores - defensive back Dom Carlucci (Connecticut), tight end Paul Soucy (Maine), halfback Bob Rodger (Vermont) and linebacker Joe Sabulis (Massachusetts).

Frosh Booters Drop Finale

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshmen booters closed out their season Friday afternoon with a 3-0 loss to Springfield. The loss was the first of the year for the frosh and left them with a highly creditable 5-1 record for the season.

Coach David Jekanoski attributed the defeat to a combination of factors. His squad went into the Springfield game with only one day's rest after a very "physical" game against Trinity Wednesday and consequently suffered what he termed a "physical letdown". This factor plus the overall size and strength of the Springfield squad led to the first loss.

However, the game was by no means a one-sided affair. The score at the end of the first half was 0-0. It was not until the third quarter, when Springfield scored two of its goals, that the letdown began to take its effect.

Goalie John Kiah and fullback Dave Zandon turned in outstanding efforts despite the loss.

Commenting on the overall season, Jekanoski claims that the key to the team's success was its unity. He says that there were no superstars on the squad; that "the kids worked very hard playing together as a team with no traces of selfishness whatsoever. "This", he concluded, "is what really made us jell."

After protracted debate, the Student Senate last night by a vote of 37-36, with the chair breaking a tie, again appropriated $10,000 to subsidize half the transportation costs for those undergraduates who wish to participate in the November 15 march on Washington.

Senator Elters presented a 4-1 favorable Finance Committee report. The opponents of the bill centered their debate about the contention that the campus was opposed to taxing the student body for this purpose, though, it was repeatedly stated, this did not mean that those opposed to the appropriation were necessarily opposed to the march itself, or in favor of the war. The feeling was that those who wished to participate ought to pay their own way.

The proponents based their case on opposition to the war, and support for efforts like the moratorium and the march which are designed to apply meaningful pressure for immediate withdrawal by demonstrating support for that course of action.

The Senate had previously passed a motion in support of the October moratorium and in favor of troop withdrawal. It was felt that through an appropriation, this position would be rendered meaningful, and not simply another statement of moral support.

Following passage of the motion, an unsuccessful attempt was made to have the Senate place the question on a referendum. Referendum supporters contended that the only grounds for opposition to the motion would be a fear of the student body, and an unwillingness to subject the Senate's decision to the scrutiny of the electorate.

Opponents of the action contended that the Senate ought not to presume disagreement with its decision, which, however close, was a decision, and that if there is in fact sufficient discontent with the Senate's action, then that fact can be made known to the Senate through a petition for a referendum. (Such a petition has already obtained 1,051 signatures and needs about 2,000 more).

There appears to be some doubt as to whether the money can be spent between now and the referendum, though the Senate by-laws explicitly state that an act stands until repealed. The problem is that, in order to charter busses, a contract is necessary, and if the referendum revokes the action, the Senate will be open for a breach of contract suit. Whether the money will in fact be available between now and the referendum remains to be clarified.

In other action, the Senate, after hearing General Court Chief Justice Edward Terrell, appointed an ad-hoc Committee on Community Relations, to promote closer cooperation between students and administration on the drafting of a proposal to be presented to the Board of Trustees concerning the ramifications of residence hall self-determination on open house.

The Senate also passed a motion calling for a referendum on the proposed $10 increase in the Student Union fee, and expressing its opposition to said increase.

At press time, the meeting was in progress with a long agenda yet to be acted upon.

Collegian Publishing Board Discusses Controversial Column

The Collegian Publishing Board, acting on complaints about an editorial that appeared in Wednesday's edition, last night adopted two motions:

1 - The board voted to "publicly deplore the judgment that resulted in the publication" of the editorial entitled, "W.A.S.P. Down Our Throats". . ."in the position it occupied on the editorial page".

2 - And voted to "recommend in the strongest terms that the Editorial Board (of the Collegian) prepare forthwith written guidelines to be followed in the selection and presentation of editorial page matter, such guidelines to be explicit and binding."

The Publishing Board has 11 members: four student editors, the newspaper's business manager, three advisers, two Student Senators and an alumni member. Nine acted last night at a four-hour session.

PUB Board members reaffirmed the student newspaper's long-standing freedom to select the material it publishes. At issue was the language used in the editorial, which carried the name of its author, the position the piece occupied on the page and whether the editorial constituted as some claimed "a personal attack".

The executive session, members reported after the meeting, included an in-depth discussion of the Collegian's staff policies and the goals.

Members said that the first vote represented the board's action on the issue of the specific editorial. On the second vote, recommending written guidelines for editorial page material, Editor-in-Chief Donald E. Epstein indicated the Editorial Board will meet soon to work out a method of carrying out the recommendation.

In an unrelated action, the Publishing Board voted to recommend to the English Department that it release Alvin F. Oickle, a lecturer in journalistic studies, from all other duties so that he can devote his full time to serving as the paper's teacher-adviser. Oickle, who has been technical adviser of the Collegian since 1965, would begin his duties "as soon as possible", according to the motion.

Last night's meeting had been called a week ago to vote on the adviser proposal and when the Collegian staff received criticism about the editorial the Editorial Board decided to take the issue to the Pub Board. The Editorial Board consists of the six editors elected annually by the staff.

Bus Service To Begin

The Student Senate Campus Bus Service will begin tomorrow morning at 7:39 a.m. it was announced by Bill Perkins, Manager. An inaugural bus run will be made today at 2:30 p.m. leaving from the Student Union and circling the campus.

The Student Senate purchased two buses in August, 1969, at a total cost of $8,000. One of the buses is parked on the south corner of the Union until 2:30. The bus service now has seven qualified drivers being paid through the work study program. There are still openings for students wishing to operate the buses.

Only the S.W. Area will be serviced by Friday's opening operations, due to a shortage of drivers. The Orchard Hill and Central Areas will be serviced as soon as sufficient drivers can be recruited and trained.

The inaugural fun tomorrow is open to all interested students, faculty and administrators. Persons who have been instrumental in making this service possible have received invitations.

Protestors Interrupt MIT Research

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Squads of police drove some 300 anti-war protesters away from a Massachusetts Institute of Technology research laboratory Wednesday.

The police marched in on the protesters after some of them had forcibly prevented research workers from entering the Instrumentation Laboratory.

One person, an MIT student identified as Allan Fuchs, 19, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was arrested and charged with disturbing the peace and unlawful assembly. He was released in $1,000 bail for hearing later.

Some 10 persons were treated for minor injuries. An MIT spokesman said seven of the number were not MIT students.

The disturbance took place at laboratory five where researchers are working on the guidance system for the Poseidon missile - MIRV - which is one of the targets of the demonstrators who demand that MIT get out of any war-related research.

It was the MIT Instrumentation labs that conceived and designed the guidance system which took America's astronauts to the moon and safely back to earth.

The demonstrations are being directed by the November Action Coalition, which in a statement later claimed a victory because it said research in laboratory five was halted for two hours.

MIT said the work went on as usual.

NAC said it will continue demonstrations against the research "and some day we will stop it forever, along with whole imperialist system which this research supports."

Seale Sentenced On Contempt Charge

CHICAGO (AP) – Bobby G. Seale, national chairman of the Black Panther Party, was held in contempt of U.S. District Court Wednesday and sentenced to four years in prison by Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

Judge Hoffman sentenced Seale to three months in prison for each of 16 incidents of contempt in the trial of the Panther leader and seven other men on conspiracy charges growing out of riots at the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

At the same time, the judge declared a mistrial for Seale, separating him from the other defendants. He set April 23 for a new trial of Seale on the charges.

Seale is being held in the Cook County Jail on a fugitive warrant from New Haven, Conn., where he is charged with the murder of another member of the Black Panther Party.

Judge Hoffman's ruling appeared to resolve the impasse growing out of Seale's repeated interruptions of the trial with the demands that he be allowed to defend himself. The judge ordered Oct. 29 that Seale be bound and gagged in an effort to stifle the disruptions.

He relented, without explanation, Monday and Seale continued to voice his demands to cross-examine witnesses.

The dispute reached the breaking point earlier Wednesday when defense lawyers William M. Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass refused to cross-examine a California sheriff's deputy who testified about Seale. They said they did not represent Seale.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

JERUSALEM (AP) - Egypt and Israel battled across the Suez Canal Wednesday and Cairo's semi-official newspaper said the United States has come forth with a new Middle East peace formula.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee dropped plans Wednesday for public hearings on the Vietnam War while it seeks additional word on President Nixon's policy to cut back U.S. involvement.

SAIGON (AP) - South Vietnamese infantrymen, going it alone on the ground but supported by American planes and artillery, have clashed with two veteran North Vietnamese units in their biggest fight in four months.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon and Republican National Chairman Rogers C. B. Morton contended Wednesday that GOP triumphs in New Jersey and Virginia governor elections represent solid popular support for the administration's policies, particularly regarding Vietnam.

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) - In a new surge of violence against U.S. citizens in Brazil, kidnapers shot and killed the son of an American business executive after collecting $12,500 ransom. The body of Patrick Dolan, 18, was found Wednesday.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - The space agency Wednesday gave the go-ahead for the Apollo 12 astronauts to televise their moonwalk in living color, after the camera successfully beamed clear pictures from the launch pad to Mission Control in Texas.

BOSTON (AP) - Rescuers criss-crossed a stormy Atlantic Ocean area Wednesday in search of a tanker and a yacht reported sinking with a total of 43 persons aboard.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A $20.7 billion compromise version of the military spending authorization bill that produced one of the bitterest House fights of the year passed that body Wednesday with no opposition, almost no questions and no vote count.

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Senate Commerce Committee Wednesday approved a bill that would outlaw cigarette advertising on radio and television after Jan. 1, 1971.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon gave a royal welcome home Wednesday to the three Apollo 11 moon astronauts, declaring that their global journey that began Sept. 29 was "the most successful goodwill trip" in American history.

Honors similar to those accorded visiting kings and prime ministers were accorded Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin Jr. on the south lawn of the White House.

Officials at UMass Campuses Discuss Latest Developments

At a news conference last Saturday on the Amherst campus, the top officials of all three UMass campuses outlined the general direction of the University, in educational philosophy as well as physical expansion.

Dr. Oswald Tippo, speaking on general educational developments on the Amherst campus, stressed the student search for relevancy and informality in education, citing such concepts as Free University City, the Contemporary University program in the School of Education, an experimental freshman group with no course requirements to give students more freedom of choice.

Dr. Tippo spoke as well on continuing student attempts to assert control over their own lives. He saw these developments as the natural outgrowth of the critical faculties which the University seeks to encourage in students.

Recalling how he lived as an undergraduate in 1938, the Provost noted that the concept of student self-determination in social matters was not in fact such a new or radical concept, for in 1938 undergraduates lived satisfactorily in a situation without staff to oversee them, or a hierarchy of rules imposed from above.

The Provost cited the Cance and Project 10 experiences as evidence that undergraduates are capable of managing residence hall affairs by themselves. Doctor Tippo noted the recent Trustee approval of the Greenough co-educational residence hall proposal, and cited the success that co-educational residence halls have had at other schools.

Student Senate Treasurer Alan Gauthier, representing the Senate, spoke on the structure and function of student government, stressing the recent Senate action on behalf of residence hall self-determination on open house, and general self-determination on all social matters, stating that this is a concept that "the Senate has consistently supported" over the past several years.

Mr. Gauthier declared that social rules are best made by the peer group working through the residence hall government, and that such a self-direction of one's life is a "principle that free men have long recognized."

President Lederle followed Mr. Gauthier's presentation with a brief statement declaring that what was developing in student government was a kind of federalism, in which certain functions were reserved for each of the three levels of government, a development which would allow for a good deal of "experimentation and innovation at that (the residence hall) level."

Dr. William Tunis, Dean of Admissions, and Mr. H. Jackson Littlefield, Amherst Planning Officer, spoke of the growing pressures upon the University in terms of larger numbers of qualified students applying each year (there will be 24,000 applicants for 3,800 freshman places), and of the pressures of the concomitant growing enrollment upon the physical plant.

Mr. Littlefield cited the Board of Higher Education estimates of a projected statewide lack of 113,000 spaces by 1980, and even that was at a "greatly increased level of expenditures." He raised the possibility of temporary buildings to alleviate the pressure, should sufficient funds not be forthcoming from the state legislature.

Mr. Roy Hamilton, Vice-Chancellor for Fiscal Affairs of UM Boston, and Dr. Lamar Soutter, Dean of the Worcester Medical School, sketched plans for the physical development of the two campuses. Mr. Hamilton maintained that the $50 million General Court authorization was sufficient only for land acquisition, the construction of a dike and fill, and the laying of the foundations for the first six buildings.

He predicted a request for further funds in the near future to continue construction beyond that point. The stated goal is 5,000 students and six buildings by the Fall of 1972, with the addition of one new college per year for 1973-78, to an anticipated 15,000 students by 1980.

Because of the commuter nature of the campus, Mr. Hamilton also scored the legislature for failure to provide on-campus rapid transit for the six thousand people who will be arriving between 8:30 and 9:30 daily in the fall of 1972. Mr. Hamilton called the rapid transit system "a very critical problem that has to be resolved soon."

Dr. Soutter described plans to admit sixteen medical students next fall. Any delays in construction could however, cast some doubt on that projection. Dr. Soutter noted that the school was receiving from three to ten applicants per day, with 173 turned in to date. The applicants are generally above the national average. He summed by saying that this was "a very exciting time."

Judge May Set Inquest Date Today, Cause of Mary Jo's Death Undecided

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - A date may be set Thursday for the inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, who died when a car driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy plunged into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island.

Attorneys for prospective witnesses at the inquest were to meet in private conference with District Court Judge James A. Boyle the inquest judge.

The conference presumably is to give Boyle an opportunity to explain new rules established for the inquest, and indications were that Boyle also would set a date for the inquest. The state Supreme Court recently ordered the inquest closed to the public but allowed that witnesses could bring their own attorneys to the inquest. Attorneys for Kennedy had asked the court to close the inquest to the public in order to assure a fair trial.

The high court refused to give the attorneys the privilege of cross-examination.

The inquest is to determine the legal cause of Miss Kopechne's death.

Valley Peace Center Announces Plans for Nov. Moratorium

Plans for a November Moratorium against American involvement in Vietnam are gaining momentum in the Connecticut Valley region, with Valley Peace Center organizers and area student groups coordinating their activities for maximum impact.

A possible highlight of the two-day observance on the 13th and 14th may be the prime-time television appearance of Senators Edward Kennedy, Edward Brooke, along with Representatives Edward Boland and Silvio O. Conte, on a Springfield television station. A select panel of some 20 local residents would confront the four congressmen with questions about the Vietnam War and the possibilities of immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from the beleaguered country.

According to Peace Center spokesmen, petitions circulated among towns in the five-college area over the weekend attracted several thousand signatures of people requesting the representatives' appearance. The petitions, which will be mailed to the three congressmen of this area later this week, follow on the heels of telegrams already sent. Definite word on their commitments is expected by Wednesday afternoon.

In addition to the televised discussion, organizers are planning activities on two other fronts.

On the one hand, area residents and students will attempt even broader dissemination of antiwar material than was achieved in the October Moratorium. Leafletting will begin this weekend and will include the widespread distribution of information in outlying areas. War Veterans Donald Cunningham is contacting churches in some of the outer communities, asking them to organize sessions at which he and Peter Fossel, a vietnam War Veteran, can appear to discuss U.S.involvement in the war.

Short informational films will be shown between features at Amherst's Campus Cinema II and may be shown at area high schools on the 13th and 14th.

On the organizational front, the Valley Peace Center is attempting again this month to gain demonstrated support for the antiwar movement among local businesses. Stores will be requested to show some visible sign of support.

At 5 p.m. on the 14th., a candlelight ceremony will be held at the Amherst Town Common. The procession will include a reading of the names of Massachusetts young men killed in Vietnam and a solemn observance led by University of Massachusetts Rabbi Martin Kowal.

Amherst churches which showed interest in the October Moratorium --including the First Congregational, Wesley Methodist, and Grace Episcopal Churches -- are being asked to do their own organizing for the November action, so that Peace Center and student organizers can concentrate on widening the scope of this month's demonstration.

For the November 15th March in Washington, the Valley Peace Center is selling tickets for busses. One set will go down on Thursday night with another set going down Friday evening. The cost will be $15 round trip. All interested should contact the Peace center at 253-3683.

77% Accept Nixon Vietnam Policies

Gallop Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP

President Nixon wins a vote of confidence from 77 per cent of Americans on his Vietnam policies among those persons who listened to his Vietnam speech Monday night.

Only 6 per cent express outright opposition to the President's program for ending the Vietnam war, but another 17 per cent are undecided.

While the initial reaction to the President's program was highly favorable, the course of public opinion in the coming weeks will depend largely on the actual rate of withdrawal of U. S. troops from Vietnam.

In a test of the nation's first reactions to the speech, a series of questions were put to a total of 501 adults living in 286 localities in a nationwide telephone survey conducted Monday evening immediately after the speech.

Approximately 7 persons in 10 contacted heard the speech. Among this grup, interviewers found a large percentage of Americans who were impressed and reassured by President Nixon's remarks; but at the same time, a sizable minority who expressed disappointment that the President did not come up with new ideas to end the war.

The predominant view at this point is that the President is pursuing the only course open to him.

The idea of "Vietnamization" of the war has particular appeal to the public.

Vietnam

The events of today will be a memory tomorrow. This memory will be documented by the 1970 INDEX and you can decide what should be there to look back at.

This Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Bristol and Essex Rooms of the Student Union the INDEX will have their major staff and recruitment meeting of the year. Drop in - what have you got to lose?

SMU Faculty Calls for Resignation of President

NORTH DARTMOUTH - By a count of 54-12, Southeastern Massachusetts University (SMU) Faculty members approved a resolution presented by the SMU chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) calling for the resignation of President Joseph Leo Driscoll. Only about one-third of those faculty members eligible to vote attended yesterday's meeting.

The faculty vote followed student senate action last Friday calling for the ouster of the 47-year old president. Driscoll could not be reached for comment.

The crisis which brought about the student - faculty action was Driscoll's refusal last week to grant tenure to Charles White, an assistant professor of English.

White, who has been at the Dartmouth (Mass.) campus since 1966, had been involved in demonstrations last year over the dismissal of a fellow faculty member.

Driscoll accused White of acting "unprofessionally" during the fair and charged White had acted to "incite students to act in such a way as to disrupt the university."

White has categorically denied all charges.

A rally before the faculty vote drew about 1500 students demonstrating in favor of driscoll's ouster. Wearing buttons that said "Joe must go," and "SMU or JLD," the students voted to boycott calsses and to travel to Boston to press their case before Gov. Sargent.

The student unhappiness with Driscoll rests also on last week's resignation of Dr. Samuel Stone, who was dean of SMU's College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Stone, a favorite of students resigned his post, he said, because "of fundamental differences of opinion on important administrative matters."

At the faculty meeting, Prof. Richard Reis charged that Driscoll had violated the academic freedom of the faculty.

"He has no due regard for the competence of the faculty," Reis said, "As a professor at SMU, I feel this situation cannot exist any longer. The atmosphere is beyond redemption."

The resolution passed by the faculty says in part: "Disturbances, primarily caused by Dr. Driscoll and persons acting under his instructions, have upset the calm and orderly atmosphere so necessary for the discharge of our duties as responsible educators, and have produced instead an atmosphere of continuous distrust, unease, and crisis....Therefore we now feel compelled to ask for President Driscoll's immediate resignation, and call upon our colleagues to join with us in asking for his resignation."

Dr. Driscoll, who has been president of SMU since 1962 when it was called Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute, could only be fired by the 15-member University Board of Trustees. Trustees' chairman, Robert W. Nelson of Attleboro, could not be reached for comment.

Candidates Forum

Hogan For President

Practically every day in the COLLEGIAN, and elsewhere, you can find a lot of controversy about the course of action taken by the Senate, the area assemblies, and the class governments. Apparently, some people are dissatisfied with what these groups are or are not doing.

Still, when it comes to taking a mere five minutes to vote for your class officers, many of these people are too "busy." It really doesn't require a great deal of energy to place a checkmark next to the names of the candidates of your choice. Now many people say that since they do not actually know the candidates, they cannot really make a valid decision. Yet, how many people voted for Presidential candidates in the last election actually knew any of the men?

When you look at the qualifications of a candidate, you usually look at his: 1) past experience, 2) his views on the various issues, and 3) the vitality of his campaigning. As freshmen, we cannot use the first ingredient, for no one has had the time to prove himself. Now, the second decree is a little different. The issues may not be directly influenced by the voice of the underclassmen, but the mere fact that there are 3,700 of us (the largest class in UMass history) will bear to mind that our inteests will be listened to.

Personally, I feel that the biggest issue at stake now is the matter of 24-hour open house. Then the desire of house autonomy is also outstanding When we look at the set-up of the school, we find several different communities located in the various residential colleges. The same things that are vital to SW may be of little consequence to the residents of Orchard Hill, or Northeast, or Central. Even to a greater degree than this, the various dorms have their own situation which may be entirely unique. We come to learn here at UMass, the majority of people learn by communication with other people, usually of their own age. Therefore, as today's youth and tomorrow's adults, we should be able to experiment and find out for ourselves what is best suited for ourselves. For these reasons, I favor dorm autonomy, with each house deciding on their own open-house policies. No house, I am certain, would rush to any extreme measure without taking considerable thought first.

The third factor in the frosh election is the amount of campaigning done. All of the candidates have advertised, some more than others. The student s who helped me canvassed the entire campus putting up two posters on every floor of every dorm.

So, when you're at the Union today (Nov. 6), take five minutes out and vote. Let the kids who spent a lot of time and money on this freshmen campaign know that you care, at least a little.

Thank you for taking time to read this little article, and don't forget to go to the polls.

Remember, "Hogan doesn't need a slogan, but he does need your vote!"

JOHN J. HOGAN

Cearnal For Secretary

My name is Kacey Cearnal. I'm running for the office of secretary of the Freshman class, and I'd like to explain to you why I decided to run.

When I first came to UMass from Houston, Texas, (that's right - Texas), where I was secretary of my Sophomore class, I was completely overwhelmed by the size of the campus and the seemingly MILLIONS of students. I felt, as I'm sure every one of us did, that I was just one little drop in a vast ocean, and that my opinion here actually meant nothing in the long run. I decided then that the only way I would have any say in the workings of the university would be to run for an office. You see, I want to be INVOLVED.

Many people have asked me what I plan to do when I get in office. My primary duties, of course, will be those of any class secretary; publicizing coming academic and social events, corresponding with individuals and groups on campus and off, keeping complete minutes of all meetings, and seeing that they are well publicized. Since English is my major, I feel that I am well qualified for these duties. However, I also feel that there is another major role of the secretary that is often overlooked That is support and ready assistance to the other officers, especially the president and vice-president. I will be only one part of a group of five officers, and we must work as a unit in order to accomplish anything really constructive.

So I would like to ask all CONCERNED Freshmen to please vote today. This is YOUR class! Let's make it the best that UMass has ever seen. DOWN WITH APATHY! Vote KACEY CEARNAL for secretary, class of 1973. Thanks.

KACEY CEARNAL

Krukonis For Senator

Just think about how college would be in four or five years if the Student Senate abolishes class government. The Senate would be given the power which the classes now hold. Committees will be set up to organize social functions. The resultant: impersonal social functions because there will be no officers or executive council to voice class opinions. More important than social functions is the budgeting and handling of OUR class funds. Students will still pay their fees, but there will be no specific person or group of persons to handle the money. The Student Senate will do it for us, and we will have little to say about how it will be handled.

Personally, I hope that class government is NOT abolished. Without class government; an individual will have no personal ties with his class, if in fact it could still be called a class at all. As Senator-at-Large, I will work with others in favor of class government in order to keep it in practive.

On Thursday, November 6, vote Debbi Krukonis for Senator-at-Large. Thank you.

DEBORAH KRUKONIS

Tye For Treasurer

My name is Carol Tye and I'm running for Treasurer of the freshman class. I come from Newton, Massachusetts. I have not yet declared a major but am thinking in terms of Zoology or math.

Even before entering UMass., I knew I wanted to be active in my class. I thought that for me the best way for this to happen would be to run for an office. Which office? That was an easy decision. I've always had an aptitude for working with numbers so I knew I'd be best as a Treasurer. Having enjoyed Math, I was qualified for the official duties of a Treasurer. But there's more than the official duties. In a school this large, the officers must work together as one rather than each doing their individual jobs and hoping they'll all blend together in the end.

As an officer of my class, I would like to deal with the problem of the lack of unity within the freshman class. A start would be for all freshmen to have the chance to voice their opinions, ideas and suggestions to the officers so that the officers aren't doing what they think the freshmen class wants them to do but rather what they know the freshmen want to do.

People always associate student government with social functions. Social activities are great but I'm also concerned with academic reform. The freshmen should have a chance to say now how they get their education. It is up to our student government to deal with both social and academic matters.

I want to be able to look back and say that the class of '73 was a great class, we held some unusual events, and we improved the rest of the school both socially and especially academically. I hope you give me a chance to do this and vote CAROL TYE for TREASURER tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom.

CAROL TYE

Newhall For Vice-President

What is the role of a vice president? What do you plan to do for your class? Why did you decide to run for vice president?

These are the questions that I have been asked and I have definite answers to them.

To me, the role of vice president is to support the president and the other class officers. This position's basic function is to handle the affairs that the president can't afford to give proper treatment of, with respect to his other duties. The functions of a class vice president at the University of Massachusetts include this basic function, but in order to keep a working relationship between the Student Senate and the members of the Freshman class, a vice president must take more than the fundamental tasks that are expected of the position.

I feel, that to run a class governmental system well and to work in cooperation with the Senate, a vice president must become involved with the Senate meetings and keep close lines of communication with the executive council and individual members of the class. This can effectively be done if the vice president sits in on Senate meetings along with a committee whose job is as such and have the executive council a widely spread group with each dormitory activity represented. Through these efforts the officers of the class of 1973 will be more than social leaders, they will be the people who help organize and channel the Student body's feelings on social, academic, and other various matters towards successful and meaningful results.

I want to help unite this University and this year's Freshman class. I want to help make the students feel a part of their class and University, not a number among numbers. I want to have the class of '73 live up to the expectations of its members, of the candidates running for its class offices, and of those candidates who will take on the duties of those offices.

I would like to take on the duties of the office of vice president of the class of '73. I need your support.

LORINDA NEWHALL

Pepyne For Sec.

My name is Debbie Pepyne. My home town is Ashfield, Massachusetts. Prior to living there, I lived in West Springfield, Massachusetts, and other numerous towns ranging from East Lancing, Michigan, to Block Island, Rhode Island. I came to the University of Massachusetts, because I feel that a large university offers the best education. At the present time, my major is child development.

I decided to run for an office, because I was involved in Class Government in high school. Of the three high schools I attended, I played a major role in the class government ot two of them. I chose the office of secretary, because I have had the most experience in this office. Therefore, I could serve the class most efficiently in this position.

The most important duty a secretary has is to be a communication line between officers themselves, the executive council, and the class. I hope to help unify the class, and I hope that as classmates you will not remain apathetic, but that you will participate in class government by expressing your ideas. The duty of every class officer is to represent his classmates, and to organize the class in such a way to enable the class to accomplish what it wishes. Also, every class officer must be acquainted with the controversial issues of today so that he can form his own opinion on the issues.

I want to thank everyone who has helped me in my campaign, and everyone who voted in the primary elections. I hope to see all of you at the Student Union this Thursday between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Help choose the people who are going to represent you! Make the Class of 1973 your class!

DEBORAH PEPYNE

Brown For Treas.

Let me introduce myself to you Beautiful People - my name: Jim Brown; my major: engineering; my ambition: to be the class of 1973's Treasurer. During high school, I was involved in many activities, meetings, committees, clubs, etc., some of which I was chairman. If someone was to ask me why I wanted to be Treasurer, I would say, because of the class. I want to be in a position to be able to make decisions that will benefit YOU. I can do that by keeping a balanced budget and by controlling the general outcome of our financial situation. The financial standing of a class is the most important factor for its "survival" as an actively involved unit. (The statements you have just read are not a lot of bull but rather they represent Sincerity). Now that you know my goal is to help benefit the class, you will also be interested as to why I decided to run for Treasurer, rather than some other office. My reply is this (need I repeat, this reply is also for Real): The office of a Treasurer not only includes decision-making and responsibility, it also involves qualities such as honesty and abilities such as in math. The former can be verified by people that know me; and math has always been my least difficult subject. The office of Treasurer is not only a political position, it is also a job, a duty; one which is more interesting to me than the other offices.

The purpose of this little "speech" is to assure 3700 People that I desire very much to be their Treasurer. I hope you take me into serious consideration when you vote.

Please vote Jim Brown for Treasurer of your class.

It would greatly be appreciated. Call 6-6015

JIM BROWN

Campus Comment

Where Guilt Lies . . .

To the editor:

The Senate is not guilty in providing the University with an excess of honesty. It is agreed in many political circles (including mine) that the Senate did in fact "tell it like it is." Last year's policy of open housing is not in effect, although I am sure that the Board of Trustees did not realize this. The slowness of their decision to impliment social dorm autonomy would not have occurred had the Board understood the anarchous social regulation situation.

The Senate, however, did know about this predicament; therefore they are at fault for waiting even four weeks for a decision on self-determination. John Dubois, in yesterday's COLLEGIAN stated that "the Senate was simply unwilling to implicate itself in this hypocrisy for one day or seven weeks, and rightly so." But the Senate waited - a statement should have emerged from that body the first day of school, explaining specifically what the policy should be. This did not happen, so the campus was in limbo. Thus I feel that since the Senate waited four weeks, they could have waited five or six more. The question of honesty, then, is irrelevant. The Senate could have ignored for this short time the violations of open house policy by not referring the violators to the Judiciary until after the Board meeting at the SWAP conference. That would have been the ideal time to take a stand on the issues.

It is Mr. Dubois' feeling that the Senate had to support the student body while flagrant disobedience of open house regulations were occuring. I am in complete agreement with this. If the Senate doesn't back us up, who will? I do feel, however, that the Senate should not have given support by passing an ultimatum to the Board as expressed in Senate bill S54, written by former senator Dubois, saying, "Be it further resolved that the Senate urge the administration to consider carefully the potentially dangerous consequences of any retaliatory action . . ." A threat to the Board has in itself potentially dangerous consequences.

It IS possible to both "tell it like it is," and RECOMMEND to the Board that the students should govern their own lives (this is honesty) - at least let the Board feel powerful.! After a decision from this body, the Senate could make decisions as to the observance of the Board's decision. It is not necessary to create a confrontation situation by relating to the Board that the power IS the student's and that since it is, the Senate will start implimenting this policy without approval of the Board. This irrational move was not only a power play, but an outrageous disregard for the tripartate system.

Concerning the attack on the Central, Northeast, and Orchard Hill Areas, it seems that Mr. Dubois is perfectly willing to accept the "interference from the intermediate level" of the Southwest Assembly. They reacted favorably toward the Senate actions, and thus Mr. Dubois used this government as an example which "will hopefully clear the air and leave no doubt in the mind of the Board as to broadbased student support for the Senate's position." Is it possible to have broadbased student support where the Central, Northeast, or Orchard Hill areas (three out of a total of four areas) disapprove of Senate measures? Mr. Dubois is not willing to accept the disapproval of the three areas.

In defense of the area governments, I believe that each is full agreement with the principle of social dorm autonomy, but are not in agreement with the actions of the Senate. They believe that the Senate did describe the situation as it existed, but they believe that the Senate did more than assert that "this was the way that it (social dorm autonomy) ought to be . . ." They asserted that this was the way that it IS GOING TO BE. There is a difference in the eyes of many people between suggesting and ordering.

Taste?

To the editor:

Regarding the editorial of November 5, 1969, entitled, "WASP Down Our Throats," and authored by a Mr. Douglas Packer, we feel that the language used was in the poorest of taste. "The Daily Collegian" occupies a unique position among most news media because its entire circulation is composed of supposedly educated people. To resort to such terms as "asshole" and "bastard" for the purpose of driving home an editorial point makes one wonder about the journalistic talen t of the author. Has he hidden it successfully or is his talent lacking altogether?

In All Fairness . . .

To the editor:

The Student Senate has taken into its own hands to subsidize a political faction interested in marching upon Washington, D.C., November 14 to protest the war. Perhaps in fairness to the political beliefs of the rest of the University community it is now time to rush through additional appropriations of $10,000 for those in support of Nixon, and $10,000 for the support of the apathetic remainder which cares only to journey as far as the Pub.

If INTEREST is a matter to be considered in judging how much should be appropriated, certainly the apathetic remainder journeying to the Pub will poll the greatest percentage. However, if CONVICTION to a cause is a far more important issue, then let the individual show his concern through his own monetary sacrifice rather than having the Senate impose its convictions upon us.

Patriots Offer Ninth Ego Trip

Amid luminescent liquid walls, the ninth ego trip of the Southwest Patriots will capture the captive audience hopefully assembled on Friday November 7 in the Student Union Ballroom. Ego trips are usually hard to find, but when found, and produced well, they are well worth any investment. The Patriots own ego trip is the popular Glass Onion.

This campus' most popular recording group, BOLD, will headline the bill at the nightclub. BOLD, having just returned from the "big city" after recording an album for ABC, makes a triumphant return to UMass. Their last appearance on campus was at the first Glass Onion of the semester. "Doing your own thing together" is the motto of BOLD. It's kind of hard to believe, but they do.

Arriving from Brown will be the Jabberwocks, a combination of mirth and merriment. The Jabberwocks, a handsome male troupe, is a combination of folk and the ridiculous in ten or twelve part harmony (give or take a few!)

A new addition to the folk scene is Kevin MacIsaac. Although he is a UMie, this should not be held against him. Remember Jaime Brockett and Buffe St. Marie also were UMies! Kevin is strictly folk - with talent, a little bit of soul, and all of himself. He is in the process of recording for Mercury records - no small accomplishment. Kevin will demonstrate his ease on both guitar and piano and will be assisted by the talents of Steve Comolli on bass.

A new feature of the nightclub will be food of a different sort. Sociable mixers and nibbler's delights have always highlighted the Onion's menu; however, the November 7th nightclub will feature such unforgettables as cherry cheesecake (no pun intended), donuts, bagels and cream cheese, and sundaes with fresh strawberries. Many other combinations on non-dining commons extravaganzas are offered.

Tickets may be bought and tables may be reserved at the Ticket Office all this week. The Patriots extend a cordial invitation to all and wish all a very enjoyable evening.

Wood technology is a new field which trains in scientific, technical, and business skills.

Wood Technology Group Sponsors Contest

Contrary to public knowledge, the University of Massachusetts does contain a department known as Wood Technology. The students, professors, and members of industry have rallied together proclaiming November 3-7, Wood products Industries Week.

The group is currently running a contest in the Student Union Lobby. Gifts to be presented to lucky winners are products of wood such as One UMass Alumni Chair, donated by S. Bent Brothers Inc.; a tennis racquet presented by A.G. Spaulding Company; one coffee table given by Winchendon Furniture Company and lastly, a billiard cue donated by the AMF Company. All prizes may be viewed at the Book Store Window in the Student Union.

Applicants simply answer the quiz about wood and deposit their entry in a box located at the Wood Products display at the Student Union. There is no limit to the number of entries, but only one prize will be allowed to a contestant. Winners will be selected at a drawing to be held November 17 at the Wood Technology Open House, Colonial Lounge, Student Union at 7 p.m. The contest is open only to students of the University of Massachusetts.

The purpose of the contest is to publicize and promote the field of Wood Technology as a college major and future career. Today, wood must be engineered by modern technology. Many new products have been developed; process methods and equipment are constantly changing.

Success in our highly competitive economy also requires that such products be effectively merchandised. Wood Technology is a new and broad professional field which trains young men and women in the scientific, technical, and business skills required for careers in forest products and service related industries.

There are over 100,000 firms in the United States in some phase of lumber and the wood products business or firms that service the woodworking industry. The demand for technically trained personnel far exceeds the supply and the employment potential continues to expand.

Nelsova-Johanneson Performance Tuesday Hailed as Dynamic

By J. W. WADE
Fine Arts Staff

Anyone who holds the notion that women cellists lack the brains or brawn of their male counterparts had a surprise in store for him Tuesday evening at Bowker Auditorium. Cellist Zara Nelsova and pianist Grant Johannesen were there to dispel any such qualms. Their performance of sonatas by Beethoven, Hindemith, and Frank was about as muscle-toned and dynamic as one ever hears.

Yet the Nelsova-Johannesen duo proved a too business-like combination. There was a sense of freshness and excitement lost through their regimentally-precisioned style of playing. It almost seemed as if they'd been playing some pieces too long together and needed a little variety.

Beethoven's Sonata in A Major, Opus 69 was given a disciplined approach with an exactitude and line that made for clear-cut phrasing and a non-nonsense atmosphere. Miss Nelsova sometimes cluttered low-register playing, letting forced dynamics distort tone. Yet the total scope of the work wanted forcefullness - and for the most part, got it. There was straightforwardness in the first movement, flexibility in the Scherzo, and contrasting moods of greatness in the final Adagio Cantabile-Allegro vivace.

Jumping almost a century and a half ahead to the Sonata for Cello and Piano by Paul Hindemith brought an entirely new dimension to cello-piano technique. Dissonance and dischord filled the hall, assailing the listener with quite an about-face of melodic lines. Pianist Johannesen was brilliant in his color-mastery of the constantly changing moods of the piece. Both second and third movements presented mammoth virtuostic challenges which were met by both cellist and pianist impressively.

By merely playing an octave lower than the violin, cellists have acquired the use of Frank's A Major Sonata for Violin and Piano; thus, it becomes a cello-piano sonata, and a beautiful one at that. The romanticism of Frank runs deep in this work, and Miss Nelsova capitalized on the lush tones and lyricism contained within the music. Although she sometimes overly fussed with dynamics, her total control was enthralling. It was in the Frank that both cellist and pianist best created a feeling of enthusiasm and vivid music-making.

Philadelphia Quintet To Perform Sunday

Amherst, Mass. -- Five of the finest woodwind players in the country will appear in concert in Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts Sunday afternoon at 3. The occasion will be the visit by the Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet as the second event on this year's Chamber Music Series sponsored by the UMass Concert Association.

The Quintet is comprised of Murray Panitz, flute; John de Lancie, oboe; Anthony Gigliotti, clarinet; Bernard Garfield, bassoon, and Mason Jones, horn. All five are principals of their respective sections in the famed Philadelphia Orchestra.

The opportunity to hear music written for woodwind instruments is a rare thing these days. When one thinks of chamber music, literature for stringed instruments immediately comes to mind, however, of equal importance and beauty is the woodwind literature. The great masters of composition have realized this and much inspired music exists for this combination of instruments. The program for Sunday afternoon's concert by the Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet will include excellent examples from many periods and will bring to the attention of area music lovers rarely heard works by Mozart, Vivaldi, Rossini, Onslow, Ingolf Dahl and Jacques Ibert.

Excellent reserved tickets for this concert are available from the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will also be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office on Sunday from 12 noon.

Young People's Socialist League Growing; Presents History and Plans for Future

A chapter of the Young People's Socialist League (YPSL), the youth section of the Socialist Party, recently has been formed at UMass.

The party of Eugene Debs, Norman Thomas, and Michael Harrington, YPSL was started in 1906, and remained a major political organization for many years. But it disbanded in the early 1960s when its most active members decided to work full time in the civil rights movement.

In 1962, the League for Industrial Democracy (LID), an organization with close ties to the Socialist Party, gave birth to a new group: Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). The early SDS, for all its problems and faults, was an extremely promising group from the point of view of democratic radicals.

But with the escalation of the Vietnam war, the collapse of the war on poverty, and the polarization of the races the mood of the country changed, and along with it the mood of SDS changed too.

SDS viewed the works of President Johnson with horror -- and felt they had been duped into supporting him in 1964. They saw a man who was elected as a liberal carry out a reactionary foreign policy and fail to deal with such domestic ills as racism and poverty.

They saw too that Johnson had been supported by the three major liberal reform movements: the labor unions, the civil rights groups, and the liberal-academic-intellectual community.

This new ideology led them into direct conflict with their parent organization, the LID, and in 1965 the two groups severed relations. Not all SDSers, however, approved of the new road SDS had set out on; some continued uneasily in SDS, some worked for adult liberal groups, some dropped out of politics. In 1966 approximately fifteen young people, many of them drop-outs from SDS, met to revive the YPSL to provide an alternative to SDS for radical students. They elected Penn Kemble their chairman. Kehzle had been the chairman of the New York at-large chapter of SDS, a chapter which broke with the national organizatin over its new policies. The handful of members began the arduos task of building a new YPSL, starting from scratch.

They began by offering an ideological alternative to SDS. While accepting SDS's analysis that the root of such problems as racism and poverty lies in our economic system, they viewed the democratic electoral process as a way of challenging that system, and they saw the various liberal movements as potential allies.

Most importantly, they emphatically rejected the communistnations as their ideal and as a radical alternative to capitalism. Instead, they looked to the democratic socialism of the Scandinavian countries for inspiration.

Rather than assigning sinister motives to the actions of liberal groups and leaders, the YPSL maintained that the liberal failure to challenge capitalism came from mistaken analysis and false hopes, and not from any deep commitment to injustice. At the same time, YPSL argued, if the domestic and international injustices of this country are to be done away with, then ultimately capitalism must be challenged.

Furthermore, no one group in the United States is strong enough to do this on its own. What will be required is the coming together of a coalition of progressive forces: the labor movement, the black freedom movement, the poor, the liberals and the students.

It is this ideological background which brings the activities of the YPSL into focus. YPSL works to unite the often quarreling forces in the coalition, to educate in behalf of economic programs which unite the coalition, and to work with the individual elements of the coalition on their particular struggles.

So, in 1966, the YPSL faced an enormous task. It had to build a nationwide youth movement from scratch, at a time when the country as a whole was moving to the right, and when SDS was growing in strength and gaining in popularity on campus. By the end of the first year YPSL had about 100 members, most of them in New York City.

It was during 1968 that YPSL really began to grow, tripling membership to 300 and building several chapters on the East and West coasts. The largest chapter, at Harvard, was growing rapidly at this time. In 1969 YPSL continued its strong growth reaching a total of about one thousand members in twenty five chapters in every area of the country except the South.

The UMass chapter, through involvement in specific issues and projects, hopes to provide an outlet for the energies of idealistic students who, until now, have not found many such outlets other than SDS, which has completely turned them off. If the initial success of YPSL at UMass is any indication, the nationwide outlook for "the other new left" is encouraging.

Harriers Defeat Cen. Conn., 17-44

Redmen Capture First, Second, Third in Rain

The Redman Cross Country team swam to a definite victory yesterday on the rain soaked home course, defeating Central Connecticut 17-44.

Three Redmen, Ron Wayne, Leo Duart, and Tom Derderian free styled the top three positions, finishing within 22 seconds of each other, with Jim Jall of Central wallowing in for third, followed by Blackburn and Paulson together in his wake.

Central was rated as one of the top teams in New England, but this was not evidenced by the lopsided score.

Due to the slippery conditions the race was not necessarily fast.

Just before the race started, Coach O'Brien had to change parts of the course to avoid some dangerous spots, but even with this change, the runners found it rough and slippery going. Tom Derderian took an early lead and held it until the half way point where Wayne took over, followed by Hall and Duart. From three to four Miles Duart rowed past Hall and with a quarter to go Derderian paddled fiercely to overcome Hall by two seconds.

While the top four battled, another fight was taking place for fourth and fifth places between three Central runners, Paulson, and Blackburn. The two Redmen overcame their opposition by half a minute at the tape, and sloshed in a half minute ahead of their opposition.

The little Redmen also won with Tom Jasmin and Tom Swain finishing together in the mist well ahead of the nearest Central frosh.

Both teams look forward to the New England's next Monday at Franklin Park, where they both must be considered for the New England Championship. The varsity is particularly anxious for this meet as it is a chance for them to wage revenge on the U-Conn team which nipped them Saturday for the Yankee Conference championship.

Frazier-Ellis Bout Set

Jimmy Ellis and Joe Frazier have been guaranteed $250,000 each to meet in Miami Beach early next year and settle professional boxing's muddled heavyweight championship.

Beach promoter Chris Dundee, who said Wednesday Frazier's handlers were considering the offer.

"I expect to hear from Yank Durham, Frazier's manager, tonight or Thursday," said Dundee. "If we agree, they'll fight sometime in February or March."

A PAUSE DURING PRACTICE - Basketball practice continues at the new(?) cage. The renewed strength of injured star guard Ray Ellerbrook has been accompanied by a recent sickness to Rick Vogeley. Both, however, should be ready for the big home opener on Dec. 2 with Providence. The team will hold a scrimmage in the cage this Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, after the freshman football game.

McGarr, Maclean Cited At 'M' Club Luncheon

End Nick McGarry and linebacker John MacLean were awarded Varsity 'M' Club certificates for being outstanding performers in Saturday's Yankee Conference tie clincher over Vermont. The UMass stars were selected by their coaches and presented with the awards at the weekly 'M' club luncheon at the Newman Center.

McGarry, who each week gets more overpowering at his tight end position, caught four passes, one for a touchdown, besides doing an excellent blocking job to help key the Redman rushing attack.

MacLean, a senior, made 11 tackles, while also being selected Yankee Conference defensive player of the week.

The luncheon had a light-hearted air after the beanpot win, but Vic Fusia, whose light-heartedness was tempered by two more games, commented, "I can't begin praising and giving out credits to the team. We have two more games remaining and I'm going to work them just as hard this week."

However the coach did say, "I've never had a team that has been this loose. There has been a great mutual effort among these players and this has made them progress as they have."

The coach in addition, had good words for the play calling of quarterback Ken Hughes and the performance of his entire defense that tied up the high-scoring Vermont team throughout the game.

Saint's Kilmer Selected N.F.L.'s Off. Player of Week

Bill Kilmer, once the trigger man in San Francisco's old shotgun offense, shot down the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday with six touchdown passes for the New Orleans Saints.

Although Charley Johnson, the Cardinals' passer also hit the bullseye six times, The Associated Press nominated Kilmer the Offensive Player of the Week in the National Football League for leading the Saints to their first victory.

"The receivers were getting open and I had great protection," Kilmer said. "They had a couple of rookies in their secondary that I figured might make mistakes and I guess that's about what happened."

Tom Fears, coach of the Saints, said, "Bill can hit his receivers if he's got time to throw."

The Saints didn't let the Cardinals get to Kilmer once all day. St. Louis has been among the leaders in the game to dump the quarterback.

The Saints changed their passing attack, moving Dave Parks from wide receiver to tight end and playing Al Dodd at Parks' post. Dodd,Parks and Dan Abramowicz, the other receiver, caught 17 passes.

The result of the passing of Kilmer and Johnson was a wild 51-42 victory for New Orleans. The 12 touchdown passes set an NFL record.

Army May Block Nov.15 Washington March

By WILLIAM BARTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Force will be used if necessary, to block a mass march down Pennsylvania Avenue on Nov. 15 to protest the Vietnam war, the Justice Department said Thursday, citing availability of the National Guard and the Army.

"The Army, as far as the District of Columbia is concerned, is always standing by," said Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst as he reiterated that there is "a substantial likelihood of serious violence."

He told newsmen the Guard and the Army will be ready if needed to bolster District of Columbia police, U. S. Park Police, and the White House police force.

The Pentagon, saying it has started precautionary planning, reported 28,000 soldiers and Marines are available in the general Washington area for use if needed.

The New Mobilization Committee and other sponsors of the projected three-day protest against the Vietnam war next week have been promised a permit only for a symbolic parade along Pennsylvania Avenue instead of the mass march by the White House which they had outlined.

John W. Bean III, a Kleindienst aide who has been conducting negotiations with the sponsors, said the department will "under no circumstances" reverse itself and permit the mass march.

He said discussions are continuing with the sponsors on other matters such as parking, health and medical facilites.

Kleindienst would identify only one group-the militant "weatherman" section of the Students for a Democratic Society - as potential troublemakers during the demonstration due to start next Thursday.

Pressed to name other groups, he said large delegations from the University of Wisconsin and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are planning to take part. Noting past disruptions on those campuses, Kleindienst said it is reasonable to assume some of those students will "engage in violent conduct."

The demonstration is scheduled to begin Nov. 13 with a 40-hour "March Against Death" from Arlington National Cemetery to the White House, then along Pennsylvania Avenue to the Capitol.

The committee planned the mass march down the avenue to the White House and a rally on the Mall, the big rectangular park area between the Washington Monument and the Capitol.

Dick Tuck Speaks; Calls Protest Good

By JILL WALLACH and NEIL NOVAK

"Protest brings out the humor in politicians--most politicians bring out the humor in protestors." Speaking with the aplomb of a veteran campaigner, Dick Tuck, political homorist, shot forth his barbs last night before a capacity crowd in Thompson Hall 104.

Tuck said that he felt that "this is a good week to talk about political humor. In fact I thought of just taking the President's speech from Monday night and reading it." Then referring to the recent controversial column in the Collegian, Tuck said that Nixon's speech was an insult to the people who had waited patiently and too long for the war to end. For "the President to suggest that he was going to have a solution and to come up for a second time with another secret plan to end th e war is ridiculous."

SUG Board Says No Tax Raise

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

UMass students will not be paying an additional $10 student tax fee next semester. It was decided last night to defer the cost of operations of opening the campus center and that the finace committe investigate the need for a fee increase in the future.

This action was decided upon after David Yelton, President of the Graduate Senate, suggested that the $180,000 cost of opening the campus center be taken out of the reserve cash fund which had been established to pay off bonds on the new campus center. The reserve fund is estimated to reach the sum of $980,000 by June, $20,000 short of the $1,000,000 bond issue.

However, Mr. Yelton also pointed out that these bonds are floating bonds which the University has the option of floating within 5 years from the initiation of construction. Right now, there are two years left on the bond issue.

Voted down was a motion to place the decision in the hands of the students by requiring 25% of the student body to vote on a campus referendum. It was felt by various board members that shoving this decision off to the students would be shirking their duty as SUG Board members.

The discussion on pay increases for Student Union personnel was tabled pending additonal information from the finance committee.

After some discussion concerning increased cost of operations, the SUG Board dicided to change the closing time of the Student Union to 12:00 o'clock and the Hatch to 11:30. This change means that the Student Union will remain ope n another half hour as soon as the administrative details of scheduling are worked out.

Court Declares Senate Not Guilty of Charges

The General Court of Justice, the highest student judiciary on campus, has found the Student Senate not guilty on charges of violating open house regulations.

The suit against the Student Senate was brought by Paul Saunders of James House earlier in the week and contended that the Student Senate, by acting in violation of the open house policy of the Board of Trustees, exceeded its authority.

In the decision released yesterday afternoon the General Court said "the Student Senate is found not guilty in light of the fact that the policy alledgedly violated by the Student Senate has expired as of the beginning of the academic year 1969-70."

The Court in its decision, criticizes the Student Senate, University administration, and Trustees for having been "remiss in their responsibilities to the University community in providing an ap - proved open house policy."

"The Student Senate, by its actions, has irresponsibly jeopardized future delegation of responsibility and power of self-determination that the students could potentially receive from the Board of Trustees in the area of social regulations and other areas of student welfare," the Court said.

The judiciary body claims the administration has falsely assumed that an expired policy is still in effect. "This assumption has forced the Senate to attempt to assume the responsibility that is invested, by definition, in the administration."

The Board of Trustees, according to the Court ruling, has been negligent in fulfilling their responsibilities by failing to initiate a new program when the previous open house policy expired.

Finally the Court ruling urged the Student Senate to conduct "a campus wide referendum to confirm the students support of its open house policy; that the administration recognize that the old policy has expired; and that the Board of Trustees, where possible delegate the responsibility for formulations of social policy to the University administration and the student body."

The text of the ruling is printed on page four of today's Collegian.

Students Collect Signatures Want Referendumon$10,000

A group of students have formed a committee attempting to raise over 3000 signatures on a petition calling for the Student Senate to place on campus-wide referendum the question of whether or not the Senate should appropriate $10,000 for transportation to Washington.

The money would subsidize half the transportation costs for those undergraduates who wish to participate in next week's march on Washington.

The text of the petition reads: "We the undersigned hereby move to rescind S-50 (1969-70) by popular referendum. S-50 as passed by the Student Senate on Nov. 5 (37-36) would appropriate up to $10,000 of student tax money to defray by 50% individual travel cost to Washington, D.C. in connection with the November anti-war rally."

After long debate, the Senate by a vote of 37-36, with Senate President Balboni breaking the tie, passed the $10,000 motion Wednesday night.

"Since this is a very controversial issue, " said Howard Altman, fraternity senator, "the passage decided by one vote, many senators feel that the student body should have the right to vote in a campus wide referendum."

Opponents of the referendum argue that if a sufficient number of signatures is obtained to put the question on the ballot, the measure would automatically be killed due to the time factor involved.

According to Student Senate Secretary Pat Beharry, the group, as of a late hour last night, was close to raising the requred number of signatures.

Demonstrators Violate MIT Court Order

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Demonstrators controlled the corridor outside the office of the president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology for three hours yesterday then dispersed after harassing news photographers.

terday thendispersed after harassing news photographers.

Police were not called to evict the demonstrators, although they apparently were violating terms of a court injunction obtained Monday by MIT President Howard W. Johnson on the eve of three days of protests.

Vice President Kenneth R. Wadleigh stood in front of Johnson's locked and empty office throughout the takeover by the November Action Coalition, an antiwar group.

He estimated as many as 100 of the approximately 300 demonstrators who marched into the building sat down around him. Wadleigh said the demonstrators called him "pig" and other names.

Prof. Paul E. Gray, associate provost, estimated that less than 20 per cent of the demonstrators were MIT students.

The MIT provost, Jerome B. Weisner, was shouted down when he asked demonstrators to clear a path to Johnson's office.

Approximately three dozen news cameramen were jostled as the demonstrators left the main lobby of the administration building with their Viet Cong banners.

No photographers reported injury. Demonstrators denounced "the pig press," knocked about some cameras and smeared grease on the lenses of several cameramen.

Gray said several persons filed with handkerchiefs to their mouths when a youth in a nearby corridor sprayed a demonstrator with a can of an unidentified chemical.

Wadleigh said any MIT students who took part in the sit-in would be subject to review to determine if disciplinary action daring political spoofs with all the expertise of a fireside chatter, Dick Tuck reminisced about Richard Nixon's 1962 gubernatorial campaign in California. Tuck said that he was accused of being seen dressed in a conductor's uniform signalling the train to pull out just as Nixon started speaking.

Tuck Speaks for DVP

Tuck said that the Nixon administration and the police were "looking for" a confrontation and that the Congress itself was cautious about the Nov. 15th 'March Against Death' in Washington. But according to Tuck "it would be sad if there were a confrontation, sad if there were not a demonstration."

Tuck, who prefers to be known as a protester rather than a prankster also quipped about our "beloved V.P.'s" recent remarks about demonstrators. Other political pickings made by Tuck included his denouncement of Mayor Yorty's campaign tactics used against Bradley in the Los Angeles mayorality race in 1968. In the question and answer period Tuck projected that Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois is a "long-shot" presidential possibility for the 1972 elections. According to him a Humphrey or a Pat Brown might have difficulty in winning an election today. He stressed that new political faces are needed. Students should support promising political figures. He also advised students to look upon protest as a good thing just as long as it doesn't result in mayhem.

New Viet Resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Thursday night he and Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., will introduce a resolution Friday supporting President Nixon's efforts to negotiate peace in Vietnam. The resolution will call for a mutual cease-fire.

Mansfield disclosed he and Scott worked up the resolution to "generate support for the President" in his effort to shorten the war.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee adopted Thursday a resolution supporting Nixon "in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam."

Viet Cong Hit Saigon

by WILLIS JOHNSON

SAIGON (AP) - Viet Cong units, trying to infiltrate into Saigon for the first time since May 1968, clashed with national police in the southwestern section of the capital early Friday.

Military sources said an estimated five enemy platoons - about 200 men - tried to penetrate the city's 7th precinct.

Initial reports said two brief fights cost the Viet Cong attackers two dead, while police losses were one killed and seven wounded.

Although police said the fighting had died down, a sweep continued throughout the 7th precinct Friday morning for more Viet Cong who may have infiltrated into that part of Saigon.

Elsewhere, North Vietnamese regulars, striking from the depths of the U Minh Forest, made their first large-scale attack of the war in the Mekong Delta Thursday.

The North Vietnamese troops stormed the camp of a government amphibious force, and killed or wounded 125 of the 500 defenders. The attack, 138 miles southwest of Saigon, was farther south than any major assault ever launched by North Vietnamese forces.

Heavy fighting continued in the central highlands, where enemy soldiers assaulted two U.S. bases with grenades, automatic weapons and dynamite charges. Nine Americans died and 27 were wounded. Forty-three North Vietnamese were reported killed.

The fighting came in the wake of President Nixon's warning that a substantial increase in enemy activity might slow down American troop withdrawals.

The U.S. death toll for last week remained near the three-year low with 83 Americans reported killed in action.

Student Senate Debuts New Campus Bus Service

An inaugural run of the Student Senate Campus Bus Service was held yesterday afternoon. The regular service begins this morning, according to Bill Perkins, manager.

The Student Senate purchased two buses in August, 1969, at a total cost of $8,000. One of the buses is parked on the south corner of the Union until 2:30. The bus service now has seven qualified drivers being paid through the work-study program. There are still openings for students wishing to operate the buses.

Only the S.W. Area will be serviced by Friday's opening operations, due to a shortage of drivers. The Orchard Hill and Central Areas will be serviced as soon as sufficient drivers can be recruited and trained.

Arrests in New Bedford

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) - Five persons were arrested during an antiwar march Thursday night, but only one of them was a demonstrator.

About 100 members of the Regional Action Group marched through the downtown area to demonstrate opposition to the war in Vietnam and to what they called "fat cat" businessmen who promote the war.

The group is a coalition of local Students for a Democratic Society chapter in high schools and colleges and the New Bedford branch of the Women's Liberation Front.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SAIGON (AP) - North Vietnamese regulars, striking from the depths of the U Minh forest, made their first large-scale attack of the war in the Mekong Delta Thursday. The troops stormed the camp of a government amphibious force and killed or wounded 125 of the 500 defenders.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Egypt stepped up its battle against Israeli troops along the Suez Canal Thursday with two commando raids across the blocked waterway. Israel struck back with an air strike.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - Two Apollo 12 astronauts soared high over Florida Thursday in a training flight simulating the moon's gravity. On the ground, space agency officials, happy with the progress of the launch operations, decided to begin the countdown more than a day early.

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, speaking on the eve of the 52nd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution blasted President Nixon's Vietnam policy Thursday. He also accused the Nixon administration of taking non-constructive stands on problems discussed by the Soviet Union and the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House Consumer Office, designed to protect the public against anti-consumer business practices, would be advised by business under legislation now being drafted by the Nixon administration, consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Thursday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. Coast Guard announced Thursday it has begun testing an airborne system to minimize pollution damage from oil tanker disasters such as the Torrey Canyon sinking off England.

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Unhappy about state television coverage of their labor disputes and low wages, thousands of striking workers clashed with police Thursday in Italy's largest industrial city.

Text of General Court Ruling

(ED. NOTE: The following is the complete text of the General Court decision in Saunders vs. Student Senate.)

On Tuesday, November 4, the Student Senate was brought before General Court by Paul Saunders on the charge of violation of Student Room Visitation Policy Article 13 Section A paragraph 6, (p. 22 of the Student Handbook) by passage of Senate Bill S-306.*

In the case of Saunders vs. the Student Senate, it is the decision of the General Court that the Student Senate is found not guilty in light of the fact that the policy allegedly violated by the Student Senate has expired as of the beginning of the academic year 1969-70.

Currently there is no approved open house policy for the University. It is the disposition for this judicial board that the Student Senate, University administration, and trustees have all been remiss in their responsibilities to the University community in providing an approved open house policy.

The Student Senate, by its actions, has irresponsibly jeopardized future delegation of responsibility and power of self-determination that the students could potentially receive from the Board of Trustees in the area of social regulations and other areas of student welfare.

As a liason between the trustees and the student body, the administration has an obligation to facilitate communication between the two groups. The administration has falsely assumed that an expired policy is still in effect. This assumption has forced the Senate to attempt to assume the responsibility that is invested, by definition, in the administration.

The Board of Trustees has been negligent in fulfilling their responsibilities by failing to initiate a new program at the time of expiration of the previous experimental open house policy. It has been further remiss in failing to delegate the responsibility for establishment of such a policy to its own paid representatives, the administration, and to the student body.

On the issue of open house we feel the Student Senate should conduct a campus wide referendum to confirm the students' support of its open house policy, that the administration recognize that the old policy has expired, and that the Board of Trustees, where possible, delegate the responsibility for formulating social policy to the University administrators and the student body.

Text of S-306

(The following is the text of Senate Bill S-306. It was because of this bill that the trial was held.

"The following is an emergency act and shall go into effect immediately upon passage. Resolved that all dorms currently or which in the future come under a policy of self-determination must submit to the Student Matters Committee a plan for dorm security. No dorm shall be allowed to operate under the policy of self-determination unless the proposed security plan is approved by Student Matters. Be it further resolved that the Student Senate shall review these interim plans after the blanket residence hall security plan has been duly implemented."

Tufts Votes Boycott

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) - About 900 Tufts University students voted a two-day class boycott to emphasize their demand that more minority group members be put to work on a campus construction project.

Riot control-equipped police were called to the site Thursday to insure that construction workers could go to work without interference.

Tufts obtained a court injunction Wednesday to prohibit the students from causing disruption or violence after they occupied the site of a dormitory building at Jackson College and forced the Volpe Construction Co. to send workers home for the day.

The Afro-American students said men of minority groups, two Puerto Ricans and two blacks, are employed among the 106-worker crew.

Police from Medford, Somerville, Boston and the Metropolitan District Commission ringed the construction site as early as 5 a.m. About 100 students, mostly blacks, contronted police briefly, but there were no incidents and the black students withdrew.

Construction workers entered the site through the main gate at 8 a.m. without difficulty.

The university meanwhile sought a declaratory judgment from Middlesex Superior Court asking whether the Volpe firm is upholding the so-called Equal Opportunity clause of the building contract.

Burton C. Hallowell, Tufts president, issued a statement which said the contractor refused to set a goal which it would attempt to reach in the area of minority employment.

Officials said about 50 per cent of Tufts 3,000 students observed the boycott Thursday the first day.

The Volpe firm, which is owned by the family of U.S. Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe, said no further statements on the matter of minority employment would be issued until the case is completed in court.

Minstrial Plea Denied

CHICAGO (AP) - Seven men charged with conspiracy to incite rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention lost their plea for a ruling of mistrial yesterday.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman of U.S. District Court denied the motion and, in effect, held that the jury was not affected by the behavior, gagging and subsequent jailing of an eighth defendant, Bobby G. Seale.

Judge Hoffman held Seale, 33, national chairman of the Black Panther party, in contempt Wednesday, declared a mistrial of the conspiracy charge against him and sentenced him to four years in prison. If he had been convicted of the conspiracy charge, the maximum penalty would have been 10 years.

The defense argued that the mistrial of Seale prejudiced the trial of the remaining seven. William M. Kunstler and Leonard J. Weinglass, defense lawyers, argued for nearly an hour, whereupon the judge promptly denied their motion.

He also rejected an application that he interrogate the jury of 10 women and 2 men to determine if they could remain impartial.

Kunstler said the mistrial ruling for Seale was "unprecedented." He added that the testimony heard against Seale would irreparably prejudice the case against the remaining seven defendants.

Two police officers testified they heard Seale speak Aug. 27, 1968 and urge black persons to arm themselves and kill police.

Two brief film clips of David T. Dellinger, 54, and Thomas E. Hayden, 30, codefendants, were shown making a speech in Grant Park during the convention and Hayden being interviewed by a newsman after the violent clash Aug. 28, 1969 between police and antiwar demonstrators at the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

Weinglass said in court during the afternoon session that Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago would be called as a witness by the defense.

The attorney told Judge Hoffman the defense considers Mayor Daley's opinions relevant to the case and that references to Daley in the filmed interview with Hayden laid the proper legal foundation for calling the mayor.

The defendants, who label themselves "The Conspiracy" have long been issuing statements and even brochures saying they would call not just Daley but former President Lyndon B. Johnson, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, and Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

would be taken.

Gray told newsmen later he did not know if the militant protest group would sponsor further demonstrations Friday.

"We will put up with whatever we have to put up with to keep the place the kind of place we want it to be," Gray said.

Noting that one faculty member told him, "the time has come to blow the whistle," and call in police, Gray added, "there's no tactic more likely to tear the place apart."

He said the school had no deadline beyond which it would resort to calling police to enforce the injunction barring disruption by the NAC.

Inquest Delayed Again

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - The long-delayed inquest into the death of Miss Mary Jo Kopechne is being delayed further.

Edgartown District Court Judge James A. Boyle announced yesterday he would refrain from setting a date for the proceeding until a decision is made in Pennsylvania on exhumation of Miss Kopechne's body for an autopsy.

The decision was disclosed by Court Clerk Thomas A. Teller after a closed-door meeing between Boyle and 12 lawyers involved in the case, among them Dist. Atty. Edumnd Dinis, who initiated the autopsy request in Pennsylvania.

Miss Kopechne was found dead July 19 in a car owned by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy that plunged off a bridge on nearby Chappaquiddick Island.

A medical examiner ruled her death a drowning and the body was sent to Pennsylvania for burial without an autopsy.

Dinis' exhumation request currently is pending before Judge Bernard C. Brominski of Common Pleas Court in Wilkes Barre, Pa., who declined to comment on Boyle's decision.

Senate's Actions: Really Two Issues

To The Editor:

In the light of the recent controversy between the Student Senate and the Area Governments, I think that a clarification of issues is a necessity.

It would appear that all the dissent arose over the Student Senate's actions in its dealings with the Board of Trustees in the name of the students of the University, whose best interests this august (??) body supposedly represents. There are TWO issues involved in the controversy which the members of the Senate including the President, Bruce Balboni, have sought to combine under the guise of a fight for the students' rights to social self-determination. As I am sure the Senate would realize, if they chose to give it some thought and investigation, there are few, if any, students on this campus who would not support this ideal of self-determination. I do feel, however, that there is another issue that has been sidestepped, ignored or just not even given a thought by the Senate and this is the problem of legal responsibilities. I feel that the students should take notice of a Student Senate that has been seeking for three years to attain social self-determination for its constituency but hasn't once considered who has legal responsibility for any student actions. Then I offer to students the actions of a particular area government, that of Orchard Hill (only because I am a resident of Orchard Hill) which in its first consideration of a stand for students recognized an uninvestigated area and sought to act responsibly by "delaying legislation of any social matters until the next Trustees meeting (Nov. 14) ."

It is not as if this problem of legal responsibility was not attempted to be brought out to the Senate. At the Senate meeting last Wednesday, Oct. 29, 1969, a resident of Orchard Hill asked a senator to present this responsibility problem.

At that time, during debate of the motion to rescind the previous Senate resolution which took "the right of student self-determination", this senator refused to place this question of responsibilities before the Senate -- it evidently wasn't of any relevance or concern. At the Trustees meeting of a subcommittee on Tuesday Chapter 75, Section #3, was referred to saying that according to this portion of the State Law, the Trustees have all power over the University community.

In the front page article concerning the Southwest Assembly support of the Student Senate, Mr. Balboni stated, "We will disobey the Board if they do not allow student governing bodies to pass our own social regulations," and "that this was not a threat." My only question to Mr. Balboni is, would he rather call this a vote of confidence in his own dealings with the Trustees?

I have only one thing further to say in regard to this matter and that is concerning a meeting of a Trustees sub-committee in Boston on Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1969. I would like to make it quite clear to the students of this University what has happened and allow them to decide whether the Senate is concerned indeed with self-determinism, student representation, or supreme power over the Area Governments and students. Mr. Balboni was urged to invite the Presidents of the Area Governments to this important meeting. Mr. Balboni rejected this idea and instead selected four dorm presidents to accompany him to this meeting. I demand to know why Mr. Balboni wouldn't allow the presence of the popularly elected Presidents of the Area Governments at this meeting, if he was indeed so concerned with representing the interests of the students to the Trustees. Is this a repression of student representation?? Is there something, perhaps, to the thought that since three of the four Area governments voted against an illegal Student Senate action, Mr. Balboni chose not to bring with him any of these dissenting opinions and therefore chose not to bring with him any true student representatives??

I submit to you, the students of the University, that your views are being best represented through your Area Governments which are acting responsibly and not through the Senate, which seems to be too concerned with a grab for power to be a truly representative student body.

S50: Must Take a Stand

To The Editor:

The students must take a stand. The vote on bill S50, the allocation of 50% of transportation costs up to $10,000 to Washington, was 37 in favor, 36 against...the President of the Senate casting the deciding ballot. By the closeness of the vote, it is obvious that this bill is a controversial one. Of the Senators debating in favor of S50, only one announced that in a poll of her constituency, a majority favored the bill. The rest of the Senators reported polls told of a majority of students against the bill. One Senator, after having stated his facts of a poll clearly against the bill, declared that he would vote how he morally felt on this issue and not the way his constituents had requested. This Senator violated the rules of a "representative",...an elected official that expresses the feelings of his voters. In a case such as the above, when there is time for a poll, I have no doubt that the representative must vote according to the dictates of his constituency.

Beware the joke of the evening has not yet come. After the passage of S-50, a motion was brought up for a Student Referendum, to allow the students to make the decision on the bill. The supporters of this referendum felt that in a matter so controversial, the students must have the right to decide the policy. The Senators opposed to the referendum had no logical argument supporting their issue; it was clearly established that we had no signed contracts for buses, and thus, no legal liability; and it was determined that there is time enough to hold a referendum. The Student Senate defeated the referendum bill. It was contended that the Senators voting against it showed a lack of confidence in their voters -- they have no faith in you. This is appalling.

With a petition signed by 4,000 students, the Student Government Association must have a referendum. If you feel that the students of this University have the right to vote on this major issue, whether or not you support the bill, sign the petition.

Here are the facts as I see them. I leave the conclusion to you. Is your Student Senator representing you? If you do not think so, he can be recalled. If you feel that a referendum should be called so that you can express your views on the matter, sign one of the petitions now circulating.

Senate: Loss Confidence Lost

To The Editor:

After attending Wednesday night's Senate meeting, we would like to express our complete and total lack of confidence and trust in the ability of the Student Senate to express the views of the majority of the students on this campus.

Most of the senators at that meeting stated that the vast majority of students in their dorm were not in support of the bill to grant $10,000 to help defray transportation costs for those students going to Washington. Yet, the majority of senators voted in favor of this bill. Geoff Levine, Senator from James House stated he had polled his dorm and that his constituents most assuredly opposed this bill, yet he felt he must vote for it. We respect Mr. Levine's moral values and we too agree that it perhaps would have been a hard thing for him to vote as his constituents wished him to, yet Mr. Levine has no right to be a member of a representative body, and we urge his dorm to recall him and vote for someone who will represent them.

The most disgusting part of the meeting occurred when the Student Senate decided that the students of this campus were not capable of deciding how their money should be spent and that this bill could not go on referendum for the students to decide this issue themselves.

It is a very sad state of affairs to see the governing body which is presently trying to abolish all forms of government on campus but themselves, sit back and pass a bill that they are admittedly fully aware is not supported by the students. And then to deny the students the right to decide for themselves how this money should be spent, when they have already blatantly and ignorantly ignored the students' opinion.

We can no longer urge the students on this campus to support the Student Senate in their future endeavors. The Student Senate has abused their power and we feel sure has lost any respect or confidence that the student body ever had in them.

4,000 signatures are needed by students to force the Student Senate to put this bill on a referendum to let YOU decide how YOU would like to see YOUR money spent. We firmly support the Moratorium and we firmly support the March on Washington, yet we do not support the Student Senate's firm denial of the students' right to decide how this money should be spent. We urge the students of this campus to sign the petitions now circulating and FORCE the Student Senate to stop acting as THEY wish and to start acting as WE wish.

Expose: Less Flesh, More Consideration

To The Editor:

This letter is addressed to all of the immature, inconsiderate babies who participated in the ruckus in Southwest Monday night. It is specifically aimed at the instigators in Kennedy, who are continually disturbing others by their infantile actions.

You people are really lacking in common decency and consideration for others. You get your kicks from shooting off fire-crackers, shouting obscenities, and playing your crummy records so loud that everyone is forced to listen to them. Hasn't anyone ever taught you to be considerate of others? It may surprise you that there are people here who study and sleep and those who are disgusted with your actions. Why don't you come out in the open and carry on in such a way so that others can see who you are? You wouldn't be so brave then. Perhaps someone would do something to harass you. You wouldn't like that, would you? You might as well have your kicks now, because in real life you won't be able to, since there are laws you have to live by. You have to face up to reality some time. It's time you became the responsible, mature young adults you are supposed to be. Until you do face reality, why don't you be quiet and stop harassing others?

These comments apply not only to the guys, but also to those thrill-seeking girls who egg them on by giving flicks and by matching the obscenities of the guys with gutter language of their own. In the security and anonymity of darkness you act like exhibitionists. Why not become professionals and gain some monetary satisfaction from your work? Don't give it to them for nothing. Also consider the fact that some day you will become mothers and will have to teach your kids the differences between right and wrong. Will you teach them to swear and expose themselves? You better start thinking about your role in society. Carrying on as you have will not be worthy of mention in a job reference. It's time you started acting like responsible members of an already sad society.

Perhaps when someone is injured or killed from your pranks will you people face up to reality. Such infantile actions will not endear you to your neighbors or impress your boss. It's time you exhibited less flesh and a lot more consideration and responsibility in your actions.

AN IRATE RESIDENT OF COOLIDGE

Hope: "I Don't Think You Could."

TO The Editor:

I'm tired, tired of being called a dirty hippie by some self-righteous middle-aged factory worker because I wear long hair and a beard; tired of being told to "love America or leave it" by him and his crew-cut, beer-drinking son.

I'm tired of having the men and ideals I respect killed. That's where J.F.K., M.L.K., R.F.K, and Malcolm X went. Who's next? I don't even want to think about it.

I'm getting angry, and I'm tired of that. Must there be anger and hate?

I'm tired of Vietnam and the peace with honor. What honor? I have a friend going there soon. Is he going to have to die for honor and because Nixon doesn't want to be the first President to preside over an American defeat? If something happens to [redacted] friend, I'm going to be more than tired.

I'm tired of being told to realize that the real world isn't nice; I know the real world isn't nice, but dammit, why can't it be?

I'm tired of George Wallace, tired of Harlem, just sick and tired.

I don't know why I'm so pessimistic. Maybe it's the rain, maybe it's Nixon's speech, maybe it's just having men like Spiro Agnew in power; I don't know. I'm not proposing any solutions; I don't mean to - not in this letter, anyway. I'm just writing this to get rid of the depression I'm in.

Try going to the bookstore, looking at the books about John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, and Malcolm X, and not getting tired, angry and depressed about the "wonderful" country we live in -- I don't think you could.

'I Am Curious' Seized at Campus Cinemas

HADLEY - State Police assigned to the office of Hampshire County District Atty. Oscar Grife confiscated the controversial Swedish film, "I Am Curious (Yellow)," last night at the Campus Cinemas, in Hadley, and arrested the manager of the theater.

The arrest and seizure came at 11:15 after the film's second showing was allowed to finish.

Both showings were to sell-out audiences who waited in long lines in rain to gain admission.

People were turned away for both shows after the 500 capacity theater was quickly filled at $2.50 a person.

At the movie's first showing Grife, Det. Lt. Raymond Mahoney, Hadley Police Chief Frank Koloski, and othe r police and Hadley officials, viewed the film and, upon completion, met outside the theater in the rain to decide what action should be taken.

District Attorney Grife informed the group that in his opinion the film was "pornographic" and his men returned to Northampton to seek a warrant for the film's seizure and the arrest of the Campus Cinema's manager, Alan Bruner

Bruner was arrested and charger with possession of an indecent picture and exhibition of an indecent film. He was taken to the Hampshire County Jail where he was booked and then released on his personal recognizance, in the sum of $1,000.

In Hampshire County District Court yesterday, Bruner denied both charges and Judge Charles J. O'Connor continued the case to Nov. 20. Bruner was released on his personal recognizance.

The print of "I Am Curious (Yellow)," was confiscated, but not before the picture was allowed to be rewound.

Atty. Paul Ford of Amherst, representing the Campus Cinemas, inc., stated after the arrest that Federal Court action against the seizure was being considered and that he would soon be in consultation with lawyers in New York City and Boston.

He said that theater manager Bruner "Had never been arrested or charged with anything before. It was a very unsettling experience for him. Neither he nor the Campuc Cinemas feels that this moving picture is obscene under the laws of this country."

Bruner stated that "we bought this picture and we are committed to showing it and I decided to go through with it in light of previous court decisions. I'm very opposed to any form of official censorship but not to personal censorship."

He continued, "I've seen Doris Day films that have offended me more than this one."

Last week the film was seized by Springfield police after two showings at that city's Arcade Theater.

The film is currently being exhibited in more than 50 American cities including Worcester, Boston, Hartford, New York, Waterville, Me., Bridgeport, and Washington, D.C.

Black Poet to Read At Mills Tonight

David Moore, a black poet from Chicago, will give a reading tonight at the Euphoric Urge Coffee House in Mills Center. For those who have tired of the usual plastic melange, Moore offers something more real and personal in the way of a group experience. He has been hailed by the Chicago Tribune as "one of the most important black poets of our time," and has something to offer to everyone who is interested in this man's message. The show starts at 9 p.m. and admission is free.

The Mills Center Coffee House, Euphoric Urge, has opened recently including a snack bar which is usually open until one a.m. As part of a program to provide unique and creative entertainment, Mills has sponsored several jazz groups from Boston and New York, on-campus talent such as Bernie Kaplan and Co., and regular open jazz jam sessions every Sunday afternoon, drawing some of the finest musicians in this area. Oftentimes, there is a live group on stage weekdays in the evening. This new approach is proving successful; people are discovering Mills as a hangout for poets, musicians, and the frowing body of artists who are seeking opportunities to perform in an atmosphere conducive to expression. Audiences expect a professional show and get it at Mills.

UMass Profs Honored

Achievements of two UMass educators in the area of the student press were rewarded during the annual joint conventions of the National Council of Publications Advisers (NCCPA) and the Associated Collegiate Press (ACP), Nov. 1.

Alvin F. Oickle, managing editor of The Greenfield Recorder and part-time lecturer in journalistic studies at the University, was presented with a Certificate of Appreciation for his services in promoting the 1968 conventions held jointly in New York City. He was cited for "outstanding achievement in promoting public understanding of collegiate journalism." Oickle also serves as technical adviser to the undergraduate newspaper, The Daily Collegian.

Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of journalistic studies, was cited for "energetic and innovative" service as president of NCCPA for three years, the longest term of any president since its founding in 1954.

The 650-member organization presented him with a bronze plaque inscribed as a "Service Achievement Award". In addition, he was presented with an alarm wrist watch by Otto Quale, executive director of ACP, in behalf of both organizations. Politella serves as coordinator of the national Commission on the Freedom and Responsibilities of the College Student Press in America.

More than 1,490 student editors and their advisers were on hand for the three-day convention, which included discussion and workshop sessions for student newspaper, yearbook and magazine staffs. Seven of the delegates were from UMass.

House Resolution Adapted in Support of Nixon's Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) - A resolution supporting President Nixon "in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam" was adopted Thursday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee after rejection of efforts to broaden or restrict its scope.

A 21-8 vote sent the measure into a House fight as a group of Democratic liberals asserted it was being rushed through in a manner similar to the 1964 Gulf on Tonkin resolution.

"This will be an affirmation of the President's policy giving him an open-ended authority to do what he wants in the name of gaining a just peace," said Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., one of the eight who voted against it.

Another opponent Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., added: "This obviously is an attempt to intimidate the moratorium crowd."

The Tonkin resolution, which sailed through Congress in August 1964 after the Johnson administration told of North Vietnamese attacks on two United States destroyers, became the basis for America's full-scale entry into the Vietnam war.

The latest resolution, largely fashioned by Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., and introduced only two days ago, now has the backing of 181 House members.

No hearings were held prior to the closed committee session Thursday. Amendments defeated before the final vote included ones calling for public and executive hearings, and support for Nixon's determination to withdraw ground combat forces "at the earliest practicable date."

Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., a co-sponsor of the resolution, insisted he was acting "at the request of the bipartisan House leadership."

Wright earlier said House GOP leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan worked closely with the original 100 sponsors, showed it to White House aides and got their blessing. House Speaker John W. McCormack also has made it clear he favors the proposal.

"We plan to get it to the House floor as soon as possible," Morgan told reporters. It would require no Senate action.

There are indications it may be brought to the House late next week when antiwar demonstrations are scheduled from Nov. 13-15.

UMass Student Group Form New Council

In an effort to develop and pursue programs to support Public Higher Education in the State of Massachusetts, the University and State Communications Council has been formed by students of the University.

After the legislature approved a 7 million dollar budget cut from the requested University budget last Spring, it became obvious that the needs of the University community were not being communicated to the public or the legislators. As a result, the committee was formed to, (1) support Public Higher Education by presenting the facts concerning the activities and state of the University of Massachusetts and the other public Higher Education Institutions to the Legislators and Public of the State; (2) to answer any significant newspaper articles about the University; and to serve the University student body as a communication focal point for the community.

To these ends the council has been divided into seven areas: (1) Mass Media; (2) Legislature; (3) Research; (4) Other Public Higher Education Institutions; (5) Community Involvement; (6) Finances; (7) Internal University.

Currently, one of the major projects of the council is to survey the attitudes of the legislators towards public higher Education. The Legislature team is about to send a letter to each legislator to discover his personal feelings about Public Higher Education. By doing this, the council hopes to determine the mood of the Legislature for the upcoming budget fight.

During the coming week, council members will be contacting University students to co-sign the letter sent to that student's legislative district. The final results of this survey will be made public to the University community.

If anyone is interested in learning more about the council, or perhaps working with the council, they should contact Jane Cullinan in Lewis House, or Larry Cohen at either 545-2047 or 546-6948.

Kennedy Raps Nixon's Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said he and "millions of Americans" were disappointed in President Nixon's speech on Vietnam.

The Massachusetts Democrat told the Senate the President's failure to make public his plan for ending the war after nine months in office indicated that no plan exists.

"It is no plan to say what we will do will depend in part on what is done by the other side," Kennedy said. Such a policy, he said, leaves the initiative entirely up to the Communists.

The college you can't get into without a job.

The college is ours—Western Electric's Corporate Education Center in Hopewell, New Jersey.

Like your college, ours has a campus with dorms, dining halls, labs and a library. Unlike yours, you can't get into ours without a job. A job at Western Electric.

Our students—engineers, managers and other professionals—develop and expand their skills through a variety of courses, from corporate operations to computer electronics. To help bring better telephone service and equipment, through the Bell System.

A Paulist Goes Forward ...not backward

Time never stands still — and neither does a Paulist.

Issues are raised, conflicts appear and the world changes, but the Paulist is always part of the new . . . blending the best of the old with the hope and promise of the future.

Because one of the major characteristics of the Paulist is his ability to cope with, and welcome, change, he's better able to meet the needs of modern man: he uses his own talents to work for Christ and is given the freedom to do so.

If you've given thought to the priesthood, find out more about the order that never stands still. Write today for an illustrated brochure and a summary of our recent Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

Tenor to Give First Faculty Recital

Tenor Jon Humphrey will appear in his first faculty recital on Tuesday, November 11, in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Tenor Jon Humphrey, who recently joined the music faculty of the University of Massachusetts, will offer his first faculty recital Tuesday, Nov. 11, in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Assisting at the piano will be Fernande Kaeser, also of the faculty.

Mr. Humphrey has enjoyed an outstanding career as a tenor prior to joining the faculty and is considered one of the most talented young oratorio singers in the country today. His repertoire is impressive and includes some thirty Bach cantatas as well as oratorios, masses and operas by such composers as Beethoven, Handel, Mozart, Strawinsky and Puccini. H e has appeared as soloist with the Cleveland Orchestra, at the Mozart Festival held in New York's Philharmonic Hall, and at festivals in Detroit, Cincinnati and Marlboro.

For his program in Bowker Auditorium on the 11th, Mr. Humphrey has selected a program that includes works by Monteverdi, Gasparini, Scarlatti, Handel and Beethoven before intermission and songs by Duparc and Britten to close the program. The program is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts department of music and is open to the public without charge.

Brecht Performed At Mt. Holyoke

THE CAUCASIAN CHALK CIRCLE by Bertolt Brecht opened last night at the Laboratory Theatre, Mount Holyoke College. This production is the director, Jim Cavanaugh's first since returning to Mount Holyoke. It is also unique in being the first American production to use the music by Paul Dessau which was written for Brecht's Berliner Ensemble production.

A cast of 30, including Bill Hennessey, Michael G. Venet, and John Zachary of the University of Massachusetts, perform Brecht's epic drama based on the ancient Chinese chalk circle parable, The play takes place in the ruins of a collective farm in the Caucasus at the end of World War II, but its political and social implications reach across the decades to the present.

The play will be presented again tonight and on Saturday and Sunday nights, November 8 and 9 at 8:15. Tickets may be reserved by calling the Laboratory Theatre Box Office.

Drama Group Presents Broadway Play

The student - run Roister Doisters drama club will present the Broadway play, "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running", at Bowker Auditorium, Feb. 4 to 7.

President Pamela Klein has announced that directing the production will be Pedro Silva. He directed "Man For All Seasons" for the club, last year.

"You Know I Can't Hear You. . .", a play which deals with heterosexual relationships, completed its season on Broadway in 1967.

The Roister Doisters, which is the oldest student-run organization on campus, is the oldest student-run theatre group in Massachusetts.

Officers for the club, besides President Klein, are Glenna Fickertt, vice-president; Paul Pearl, treasurer; and Maria Gounaris, personnel coordinator.

V.C. Release U.S. Prisoners

SAIGON (AP) - Spokesmen said three American prisoners released by the Viet Cong after extended captivity in jungle camps will fly to the United States Saturday for reunions with their families.
The three walked into a military outpost south of DaNang Wednesday, and Army doctors found them in good condition. All are 22 years old and members of the American Division. They had been held captive from periods ranging from eight months to nearly two years.
They are: Spec. 4 Willie A. Watkins, Sumter, S.C.; Spec. 4 James H. Strickland, Dunn, N.C., and Pfc. Roy R. Tinsley, Cleveland, Tenn.
Ceremonies in DaNang Friday will mark the withdrawal from Vietnam of the U.S. 3rd Marine Division - the division that held the DMZ battle line for four bloody years.
About 2,300 of the division's Marines will leave Vietnam over the weekend.

Nixon to Witness Launch Of Apollo 12 Next Friday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - Two Apollo 12 astronauts soared high over Florida Thursday in a training flight stimulating the moon's gravity. On the ground, space agency officials, happy with the progress of launch operations, decided to begin the countdown more than a day early.
The White House announced that President Nixon will fly to Cape Kennedy Nov. 14 to witness the launch of the moonbound Apollo 12 spacecraft, then return to Washington.
Nixon will be the first president to be at the Cape for a launching while in office. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is also expected to attend.
While the countdown has been moved forward, the launch time for America's second moon landing mission remains the same: 11:22 a.m. EST Nov. 14.
"Picking up the count early will save a significant amount of overtime costs over the weekend," a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman said. There was no estimate of the amount.
Under the previous schedule, the countdown for astonauts Charles "Pete" Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon Jr. and Alan L. Bean was to have begun Saturday at 7 p.m.
With the new arrangement, the count will pick up Friday at noon and enter a planned 31-hour hold at 2 a.m. Saturday. At that time, many in the launch crew will be allowed to go home to rest until the countdown resumes at 9 a.m. Sunday.
Several other planned holds are scheduled during the following week for additional rest or to correct any problems that might arise with Apollo 12's 363-foot-tall rocket and moonship.

Starting the final count 31 hours early was possible because "things have been going so smoothly there's no reason not to," an official said.

Navy Cmdrs. Conrad and Bean, who plan to land on the moon's Ocean of Storms Nov. 19, donned moon walking suits to get experience in the moon's gravity-one-sixth that of earth's - aboard a KC135 aircraft. Near weightlessness was achieved by having the aircraft fly to a high altitude, then dive toward earth so its descending speed almost matched the pull of gravity.

Panel on Water Pollution

A panel discussion on water pollution, "Contaminate or Preserve," will be televised Sunday Nov. 9, at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 22, Springfield, sponsored by the Technical Guidance Center at U-Mass and the Hampden County Bar Association.
Moderated by Attorney Mary Egan of Springfield, the one-hour public service program will concern itself with water pollution, related state and federal law, and current studies of the Connecticut River which have been conducted for the Lower Pioneer Valley Regional Planning Commission.
The panelists will be Thomas C. McMahon, director of the Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution Control; Lester M. Klashman, regional program director, Federal Water Pollution Control Administration; and John Podger, Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., consulting engineers.

Vietnam

The events of today will be a memory tomorrow. This memory will be documented by the 1970 INDEX and you can decide what should be there to look back at.
This Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Bristol and Essex Rooms of the Student Union the INDEX will have their major staff and recruitment meeting of the year. Drop in - what have you got to lose?

Ruggers Meet Holy Cross

Looking for a Change? TryRugby, a Simple Game

This Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.,the UMass Rugby football club will do battle with the Holy Cross Rugby football club. The field of battle will be the home field of the Redmen located behind the intramural fields across from Boyden.

Rugby is the father of American football. Each side has 15 players, eight forwards and seven backs. The forwards deliver the ball to their backs, who advance with speed and cunning, passing it from one to another, or not.....as the passion takes them.

Thus they try to cross their opponent's goal line and ground the ball. Grounding the ball is called a try and is worth three points. After the try, they are allowed a shot at a field goal which is worth two points. This kick is taken anywhere on a line perpendicular to the place of the score.

Play is continuous until someone scores, breaks a law or propels the ball to touch, which of course, means out of bounds. Any player may run with the ball,pass it or kick it. It is illegal to pass it forward, lie on it, throw it into touch or hold onto it after a tackle.

There is also a law against offside play. Minor infractions result in a scrum while blunders bring the other side a penalty kick.

Armor is prohibited; there is nothing under a rugby shirt but steaming flesh. If a player is injured, his side plays without him for there is no substitution.

Blocking, tripping or obstructing are barred; only the ballcarrier may be tackled.

In many ways, rugby is the most elementary game of all. Each side attempts to ground the ball beyond their opponent's goal line. Their opponents attempt to stop them by tackling the man who has the ball.

Nothing could be simpler; no pussyfooting about, as in soccer; no World War II plus committee organization as in American football; no bludgeoning your way to victory as in hockey or lacrosse.

Rugby is a simple man to man contest for a blown-up pigskin.

The UMass team is coached by Doctor Bob Lawrence. Coach Lawrence is a chemical engineering professor and a hard-nosed 15 year veteran of the Rugby wars from which he has obtained a scarred forehead, a collection of unbelievable stories, and an intense love for the game.

The captain of the team in Brian Leach who along with Jeff Freedman and Don Chamberlain, helped establish Rugby as a sport at UMass. Other outstanding UMass players include 'Swede' Vilkitz, Miller Frisbee, 'Mentoid' Chenowith (a promising newcomer), Mike Desiata, Bob Coutre and 'Golden' Wheels Goldberg.

"We really want this game. Last year at Holy Cross, we were really roughed-up physically and this has left a bad taste in my mouth", said Lawrence yesterday. You can be sure that the rest of the team agrees and will give 100% Saturday in what should be a rough, wide-open game.

Ellis Won't Fight Frazier in N.Y.

Frazier's manager Yank Durham said he has accepted a Garden offer of $150,000 guaranteed minimum or 30 per cent of all receipts. The Garden confirmed that Frazier is committed, but it hasn't got Ellis, who was given the same offer.

Durham disclosed his deal with Chris Dundee in Miami Beach who offered each fighter a $250,000 guarantee for a fight in Miami next February or March. Dundee claims the fight won't do as well in New York as in Miami because of the ancillary revenue.

"New York is one of the biggest television markets, probably the biggest in the world," said Dundee. "They would lose money on the television income by holding the fight in New York."

Ellis is the world Boxing Association champion, while Frazier is recognized as heavyweight king in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Texas, Massachusetts and Maine. Ellis won an elimination series for the title after reigning champion Cassius Clay was deposed because of his conviction for draft evasion.

Frazier refused to enter the elimination series and won recognition as champion by five states when he knocked out Buster Mathis in a battle of unbeaten contenders.

Frosh to Face UConn in Stadium

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Coach Dave Kelley's freshman football team will be out to bounce back from last week's 22-7 loss to Boston College when they square off against UConn this Saturday afternoon at Alumni Stadium. This game replaces the cancelled Holy Cross game. Admission is free upon presentation of student ID with the kickoff at 1:30 p.m.

The little Redmen enter the game surprisingly healthy, considering the rough,physical game played against BC. Starting offensively for UMass will be Len Matuza at quarterback, halfbacks Ray Bouchard and Kevin Filley and fullback Tib Rockwell.

The offensive line will consist of Tom Mullen, Jim Queeney, Joe Grasso, Vic Morino and Doug Cunningham. The only change in the line will be at tight end; Rich Duncan and Chet Richardson will alternate throughout the game.

Kelley feels that in order for the little Redmen to win, they will have to score at least 24 points. Unless the offensive line can improve over last week's performance,this will be difficult to do.

WHAT IS AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN - Tomorrow's frosh game is a last minute replacement for the Holy Cross game scheduled to have been played.

UConn will be bringing in a strong offensive unit. The Husky Pups have a 5-1 record, which includes wins over Coast Guard, BU, Rhode Island, Yale and New Hampshire.

UConn has shown that it can score quickly, and run up a large score. The Pups are heavier than UMass in the line and their bakcs have good speed. Players to watch are quarterback Pete Trillo who likes to run the option, and backs Gary Bellavaquaka and 6'2-210 Al Zwug.

Trying to stop UConn's option style offense will be a stout UMass defense. Despite last week's score, the defense played a consistent, hard hitting game considering that they were on the field for a major portion of the game.

The little Redmen have been hard to run against all year. How well this continues will determine the success of the UConn offense. If the little Redmen can stop the Husky Pups outside and off tackle runs, UConn's strongest offensive weapon will be eliminated.

Kelley expects a high scoring game featuring some hard hitting and a lot of running by both teams. Both squads have punishing runners and both squads have the same type of hungry pride which comes from a winning record. It shapes up to be a good game with many exciting moments. Don't miss it.

McLain Splits Award with Cuellar

NEW YORK (AP) - Dave McNally, an also ran in the American League Cy Young Award voting, said yesterday he thought his teammate Mike Cuellar should have won it outright instead of tying with Detroit's Denny McLain, who was "somewhat surprised" at the result.

"I think Mike should have gotten the award," said McNally. "He was great. What else could he have done? He was super after the All-Star game 13-2 and he pitched well before that but we didn't get him any runs.

"I'm not taking anything away from McLain but Mike's ERA earned run average was much better 2.38 to 2.80 and he was as consistent as Denny. The voters have always gone with the pennant winner in the past. Mike didn't get it for the same reason Weaver wasn't named manager of the year; the Baltimore press didn't push him enough."

Cuellar, who is pitching winter ball in Puerto Rico, was not available for comment immediately.

McLain was reached in California between engagements on a nationwide organ-playing tour.

"I feel very lucky and somewhat surprised," said the Tigers' ace, who won 31 games in 1968 and followed with a 24-9 season in 1969. "Last year wasn't too much of a problem. This year, I thought sure they'd go with the pennant winner. I'm certainly very much honored."

McLain is a member of a musical group of four who play in music stores or wherever booked.

Is Metawampe Really Dead?

McNally was asked his opinion in Baltimore after Cuellar and McLain each had received 10 votes in the balloting by the 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America, two from each league city. Minnesota's Jim Perry received three votes and McNally got one.

Student Sen. Pres. Defends Stand in View of General Court Ruling

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

In an interview last night, Senate President Balboni, in reacting to the criticisms made of the Senate by the General Court of Justice in its open house decision, stated that "The decision appears to try to find something praiseworthy and critical to say about all parties, the Senate, the Board, and the administration, in an apparent attempt to please everyone.

"I cannot accept the General Court's statement that the Student Senate acted irresponsibly. In my estimation, the Senate attempted to fill the void that existed with respect to visitation policy. We clearly articulated our policy of self-determination last Spring. If the administration at the start of this year intended to implement last year's policy, they took no action to procure implementation.

"We are simply telling the Board what the reality of the open house situation is. I do not see out actions as jeopardizing our relations with the Board. Our passage of S306 was an attempt to speak responsibly to the security question raised by the Board. I do not foresee the Board construing the Senate action as provoking a confrontation. That was not my intent, and it was not the Senate's. The students across the campus simply said "so, we are not going to continue this farce, continue this lie", and the Senate, in keeping with its already-articulated stand, supported them in that sentiment. It would have been easier to take action similar to that of the three area governments, but such action would have been unrealistic and akin to lying.

"I believe that the Board will sympathize with the Senate's position, will understand the reasons for the Senate's action, and will implement self-determination at the November meeting

"Negotiations on the larger question of all social regulations will probably not be completed at the November meeting, but I am confident that substantial headway will be made, towards that long overdue goal."

Referendum Granted on Moratorium Bill

Within a period of 24 hours, starting just after 9 a.m. last Thursday, a group of students were able to obtain the number of signatures on a petition necessary to grant a campus-wide referendum questioning whether or not the Student Senate should allocate $10,000 in transportational funds to the moratorium march in Washington.

Two petitions were put into circulation but withdrawn at the suggestion of the Student Government Affairs committee on the basis that the papers did not express clearly enough the motion to void the bill. The third and final text read as follows:

"We the undersigned hereby move to rescind S-50 (1969-70) by popular referendum. S-50 as passed by the Student Senate on Nov. 5 (37-36) would appropriate up to $10,000 of student tax money to defray by 50% individual travel cost to Washington, D.C. in connection with the November anti-war rally."

4249 was the final number of names gathered although only 3582 were required to obtain the referendum. An unofficial estimate was made at 4500 names, but about 200 of these were passed in late, and thereby could not be included in the official tally.

Senate President Bruce Balboni was handed the petitions at 3 p.m. Friday in his office in the presence of Senator Bob Waters (Gorman House), Senate Secretary Pat Benarry, and Peter Rosenthal, chairman of the ad-hoc co-ordinating committee. Although not in attendance, several other people were involved in circulating petitions, including non-Senate members.

According to Secretary Beharry, obtaining this referendum will mark "the first time the Student body has called to overturn and invalidate any action of the Senate." A majority of any number of votes cast in favor of the motion will void the passage of the bill.

Dawn Dudash, chairman of the Student Government Affairs committee, will make the arrangements for the referendum to be held (most likely) in the Student Union on Wednesday, Nov. 12.

Mansfield Advises House Republicans Against Reprisal of Haynsworth Case

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield has advised House Republicans that their talk of reprisal in the case of Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. could boomerang and stiffen opposition to the Supreme Court nominee.

"Personally, I think it would be counter productive," the Montana Democrat said after House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan talked of possible impeachment proceedings against Justice William O. Douglas.

"The Senate will face up to its responsibility and will not be swayed by outside consideration," Mansfield said.

Ford said Friday if the Senate rejects Haynsworth's nomination, the same standards should be applied in impeachment proceedings against Douglas.

"We will try to judge Judge Haynsworth on his merits," said Mansfield, who has not disclosed his own position on the nomination. "We will not be subject to pressures outside the Senate, implied or otherwise." The nomination is due before the Senate Thursday, with foes of Haynsworth claiming the votes to defeat him, supporters arguing they have enough votes for confirmation - and Mansfield suggesting the outcome still is in the hands of undecided and uncommitted senators.

An Associated Press survey showed 38 senators aligned in opposition to Haynsworth and 10 more leaning that way. Thirty-five senaors have said they intend to vote for confimation.

Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Judiciary Committee which approved Haynsworth, insisited that backers of the circuit court judge from South Carolina have the votes to put him on the Supremem Court bench.

But vote-counters for a leading Republican foe of the nomination claimed 37 Democrats and 15 or 16 Republicans are prepared to vote against Haynsworth.

Mansfield said he expects two to four days of Senate debate on the nomination, which has produced widespread dispute over Haynsworth's outside business interests as a federal judge. "I don't expect any filibuster," said Mansfield

Nixon Fans Get Together

Associated Press - People are speaking out across the land this week in support of President Nixon's efforts to end the Vietnam war. With such signs of support as burning auto headlights, waving flags and wearing buttons that say "I Love America," they hope to counteract the recent and the forthcoming demonstrations against U. S. policy in Vietnam.

Most demonstrations were to peak Tuesday, Veterans Day, or Saturday, Nov. 15, the same day antiwar protesters plan to climax their activities with a march on Washington.

Sponsors of the weekend parade said they wanted to dramatize their support of the President's Vietnam policies and their opposition to the antiwar protests.

The demonstrations have different ttles: "National Confidence Week," "Honor America Week," "Tell It To Hanoi," "Operation Speakout" and "Freedom Rally."

Moratorium Events

The Vietnam Moratorium Coordinating Committee has drawn up a list of events scheduled for November 14. The events are as follows:

Rally and pick up of canvassing packets, assignments, and movement to transportation staging areas. (8:30 - 9:00 a.m.)

Canvassing activities in the towns of Ware, Pelham, South Deerfield and Belchertown (9:15 - 4:00 p.m.)

Rally on the Amherst Common, speakers and instructions for the march on Ware, (4:15 - 5:30 p.m.)

A Motorcade to Ware (tentative time 5:30 - 6:00 p.m.) March and candlelight service in Ware (tentative time 6:00 - 7:00 p.m.)

Plans for Thursday, Nov. 13 and Sat. Nov. 15 have not been finalized as yet.

Approximately 180 students have signed to make the trip to Washington, D.C. for the Nov. 15 march. The tentative time for bus departure is 9:00 - 12:00 p.m. Friday.

A march permit has not been secured for the proposed march to Ware.

The finalization of events and times will be made Wed. Nov. 12.

For further information call the King Council Office, 207 Hampshire, 50648 or 50649, or the Moratorium Information Center, 204 Hampshire, 50988.

A table will be set up in the Student Union lobby, beginning today, for those wishing to participate in Moratorium activities.

The Coalition Moves To Picket UMass Buildings For Moratorium

The COALITION decided at a November 6th meeting to call for a University strike on Moratorium Day, November 13. The group will place non-obstructive picket lines at the entrance of main University buildings. To this end the following leaflet will be distributed on campus, today thru Thursday.

"Last Moratorium Day, the University was asked to close in order that student, faculty, staff could work towards the goal of bringing all the troops home now. The administration claimed the university could not close because closing would violate the "political neutrality of the University." The claim was a sham. The University is not politically neutral, but in fact part of the military machine which is devastating South East Asia. It is part of the war machine because it trains officers for the war, recruit civilian personnel for war industries, and actively engages in military research."

The Coalitions' main function is to get the "war machine" off campus. The group consists of the following organizations: Greeks for the Coalition, Martin Luther King Social Action Council, the SMILE Caucaus for the Coalition, UMass SDS, Project 10 students for the Coalition, The Senate Caucaus for the Coalition, and Philosophers for the Coalition.

The Coalition has made four demands concerning UMass policy toward military recruitment and military industrial recruitment. The demands are as follows:

1. The abolishment of ROTC.
2. The replacement of ROTC scholarship with University scholarship.
3. The termination of all recruitment by the military and military related industries.
4. The review of all campus research in order to terminate all recruitment by the military and military related industries.

The commandants of the Air and Army ROTC units at UMass have refused an invitation to participate in a debate on "War and the University: Focus on ROTC" on November 17, one of a series of four debates being organized by a group of students and administrators in conjunction with the Coalition to Throw the War Machine Off Campus. Colonel George Connolly of Army ROTC and Colonel Leon Friedman of the Air ROTC, in memoranda to a member of the student-administration committee, expressed their regrets at being unable to participate in the debate. Colonel Connolly's memorandum said, in part, that participation would be "contrary to the traditional apolitical nature of the U. S. Army." A Coalition spokesman claimed that ROTC's refusal to debate pointed out "the indefensible control that military procedures place on the ROTC units." The spokesman went on to say that the committee would try to find replacements for the commandants on the debate panel, but that the abscence of ROTC officials "will detract immeasurably from presentation of the real issues at hand."

The Coalition also said:

"Those opposed to the war must realize to be effective in protest we must oppose the war machine wherever it is including at the University. We must throw the War Machine out from our midst.

The University will not close on November 13, therefore it is up to student, faculty and staff to close it down.

We have learned the government doesn't listen to our symbolic protest, we must stop business as usual in order to ever stop this war.

The Coalition, whose purpose it is to oppose the war machine campus, calls for a strike on November 13. We ask members of the University community to join us in a NON-OBSTRUCTIVE picket of University buildings, We will meet in front of Bartlett Hall at 10:00 a.m. Out slogan for November 13 is 'On Strike, No business as usual'."

Foul!

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - A California prison official says state authorities have tape recordings of Nathan Voloshen, a friend of House Speaker John McCormack, asking a convict for money in exchange for trying to arrange the prisoner's release.

Charles E. Casey, assistant director of the State Department of Corrections, said Saturday the papes were given to the state by an outside source whom he would not identify.

The Los Angeles Times said in its Sunday edition that John William Hagenson, 42, an immate at Vacaville State Prison, paid Voloshen $25,000 to seek his release. Hagenson is serving a five-year to life sentence for a 1959 robbery.

Moratorium Work Urged

UMass supporters of the Vietnam Moratorium are being urged to go to Washington, DC, on November 14 and 15 to participate in a march "to bring all the troops home now", according to Anthony Teso, one of the local organizers of the Moratorium.

Teso disclosed in an interview that the UMass Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council will be chartering transportation for students who wish to go to Washington.

Teso flew down to Washington on October 20 to attend the national organizational meeting for the upcoming demonstration.

"We talked mostly about plans for the Washington march on November 15," he said. "It was decided that the march will begin on the mall outside the Capitol and proceed down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House."

Non -violence was the single most important aspect stressed at the meeting, Teso said. "Any violence just ruins the objective of the Moratorium, which is peace."

According to Teso, local plans for the November Moratorium include more participation for high school students and townspeople.

"There will be a statewide workshop here at UMass for high school organizers," Teso explained. "We want these people to take on the burden to leaf-letting and helping with fund-raising."

Other plans include leaf-letting military installations, trying to gain support from Union locals to leaflet factories and stores, arranging for day care centers for mothers who wish to participate in the Moratorium, and canvassing of areas that were not touched October 15.

On campus there will be a "living theatre" production, dorm coffee hours and discussions, an opening rally, and teach-ins.

"There is a table in the lobby of the Student Union every day for information and sign-up sheets for Washington," Teso concluded, "We need people to go with us."

Red Cross Urges Public Appeal for P.O.W.'s

The American Red Cross is urging a massive expression of indignation over the treatment of U.S. prisoners held by the North Vietnamese. It is calling on the American people to write direct to the president of the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam to express concern about Hanoi's failure to give captured U.S. military personnel the benefits of the Geneva Conventions.

According to latest Department of Defense figures, 413 Americans are known to be prisoners of war and 918 others are missing and believed captured.

Pointing out that the North Vietnamese are signatory to the Geneva Conventions, Red Cross national headquarters here said such a public outcry might to much to ensure that American prisoners will receive the humane treatment called for in the Conventions. It urges that appeals be addressed to:

Office of the President
Democratic Republic of North Vietnam
Hanoi, North Vietnam

An airmail letter weighing less than one-half ounce takes 25 cents in postage, the Red Cross said.

Meanwhile, the American Red Cross is continuing to urge Red Cross societies in all parts of the world to intercede in behalf of the U.S. prisoners with the Red Cross Society of North Vietnam and to ask that their respective governments take similar action with the North Vietnamese government.

In an American Red Cross-sponsored resolution passed without a dissenting vote by 77 governments and 91 national Red Cross societies, the International Conference of the Red Cross in Istanbul last month urged that all prisoners-of-war be given the benefits and protection of the Geneva Conventions.

The Geneva Conventions call for all prisoners to be promptly identified, afforded an adequate diet and medical care; permitted to communicate with other prisoners and the "exterior"; promptly repatriated if seriously sick or wounded; and at all times be protected from abuse or reprisals. The Conventions also state that a neutral intermediary, such as the all-Swiss International Committee of the Red Cross, be given free access to prisoners and their places of detention.

O'Donnell Announces Candidacy for Governor of Mass. in '70

BOSTON (AP) - Kenneth P. O'Donnell, former aide to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, said yesterday he will be a candidate for governor of Masssachusetts in 1970.

O'Donnell, a Democrat, said he intends to issue a formal statement of his candidacy in January, but he said there was no point in pretending now that he hadn't made up his mind on a course of action when he hopes for the governorship.

He made the statement on WKBG TV, Channel 56's "Point of View" program. In response to a reporter's question, O'Donnell said, "I am a candidate for governor."

O'Donnell candidacy was no secret. In April 1968, on the same program, he said he planned to advance his candidacy for the 1970 gubernatorial race.

A "Dove", O'Donnell said he stands for immediate, unilateral withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam.

"Until we solve Vietnam," he said, "it continues to be a state issue as well as a national issue because the $30 billion to $40 billion that the war costs is not going where it should - to the states."
